By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A modified Republican version of President Roosevelt's conciliation bill awaited both White House and Republican conference approval today before being submitted to congress.

The president will be asked to endorse the modified measure, if the proposed changes meet the approval of a conference of Republican senators. The revisions were the work of a committee of five senators, previously appointed by the Republican conference.

Provisions Of Bill

The modified bill, designed to create a federal organization to avert strikes and industrial warfare, contained the following provisions:

Section 1: Authorizes the president to establish a series of boards to "investigate issues, pacts, practices or activities of employers or employes in any controversies arising under section 7-A" of the National Recovery Act.

Section 2: Empowers these boards to conduct elections "by a secret ballot" in any industry "to insure the right of employes to organize and to select their representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining."

Section 3: Authorizes these boards, with approval of president, to prescribe rules for the conduct of such elections and to enforce its rules in the nearest circuit court of appeals.

Section 4: Provides a penalty of $1,000 fine or one year's imprisonment for any person "knowingly and wilfully" violating its rules.

Section 5: Prohibits the boards from enforcing the "closed shop?" in any industry.

Section 6: Limits operation of the board to June 16, 1935, unless the president by proclamation terminates the NRA sooner.

The last two sections were added to the president's bill by the Republican senatorial committee. It also

PA NEWC OBSERVES

Cool waves are not uncommon about this time of the year, Pa Newc observes. Last night the temperature dropped to 45 degrees and just a year ago it fell to 35 and a fairly heavy frost was noticed, the records show.

Despite drought conditions the corn seems to be growing nicely on Lawrence County farms.

Persons having gardens along the Mahoning river, near Mahoningtown, were busy last night, watering the plants and crops, carrying water from the river in buckets.

There will be no dearth of elderberries, if the multitude of blossoms is any criterion by which to judge.

Evidently New Castle had visitors from east and west over Thursday night, for parked about the Castleton this morning were cars from New Jersey and New York from the east, while a California car represented the west and from the south there was a Georgia license.

* * *

Cascade Park seems to be the most popular spot in this district, these days. There are many picnic gatherings. The improvements made during the past winter and spring are much appreciated by the public, as the park reflects much of the natural beauty that made it famous for many years.

Reno Report On Mrs. Dall Surprise To Washington

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Dispatches from Reno reporting that Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, only daughter of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt, was enroute there preparatory to establishing residence, came somewhat as a surprise to social Washington.

While Washington has known all along that the Dalls were living apart, Mrs. Dall and the children spending most of their time at the White House, and Dall in business in New York, the belief had obtained that there would be no divorce, at least for some time.

Rumors have been recurrent that there would be a divorce, but they were always denied. Mrs. Roosevelt, her mother, was reported to have said to friends in connection with these rumors, "one divorce in the family is enough". She referred to the divorce of her second son, Elliott, from Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, which is known to have caused her deep disappointment.

It is understood Mrs. Dall left Washington yesterday. She was accompanied by her two children "Sistie," aged 6, and "Buzzie," aged 3.

No comment was forthcoming from the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt had a press conference this morning, and in reply to a question admitted her daughter had gone to Nevada. She declined to answer any further questions concerning the matter.

Plan To Avert Steel Strike Is Given By Green

Head Of A. F. Of L. Addresses Amalgamated Session In Pittsburgh

MAKES PROPOSAL FOR NEW BOARD

Would Have President Name Board Of Three To Rule On Disputes

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, June 15. As a means of averting the threatened nation-wide steel strike, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made a dramatic appearance before the "strike convention" here today and advocated that the steel workers propose that President Roosevelt appoint an "impartial board of three members" to settle all controversial issues in the steel industry.

The special convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, in session considering the question of a steel strike, rocked with applause as Green offered his proposal.

Should Declare Strike Off

"If this proposal is accepted by all sides—the steel workers, the operators and the government—then the strike should be declared off," Green asserted in ringing tones.

Green urged the men to accept the proposal "in good faith" and assured them it would have the full support of the American Federation of Labor.

Green told the 188 union delegates he was talking to them "as a coal miner to steel workers" and that he fully appreciated their situation and was in hearty sympathy with their plight.

He countenanced against a strike at this time, saying:

"We must employ strategy—we must meet the issue with an issue".

Offers Peace Proposal

Offering his peace proposal, Green asserted that the industrial relations board" as submitted through the steel interests" is rejected by the workers because it is unfair.

"The steel owners would have two out of the three representatives on the board," said Green. "One of them would represent the employer the other the company union.

"And the plan of administration of this board which was rejected in Washington last week would tend to perpetuate the company union in the steel industry.

"The welfare of the workers and American public opinion calls for the submission of a counter-proposal by the steel workers."

He then presented his proposal.

Proposed Step

Green proposed that the workers recommend as a means whereby the strike could be averted that an im-

Offering his peace proposal, Green asserted that the industrial relations board" as submitted through the steel interests" is rejected by the workers because it is unfair.

Modified Labor Conciliation Bill Awaits Approval

White House And Republican Conference Approval Being Sought

REVISION IS WORK OF FIVE SENATORS

Hope To Have New Measure Submitted For Early Action By Congress

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A modified Republican version of President Roosevelt's conciliation bill awaited both White House and Republican conference approval today before being submitted to congress.

The president will be asked to endorse the modified measure, if the proposed changes meet the approval of a conference of Republican senators. The revisions were the work of a committee of five senators, previously appointed by the Republican conference.

Provisions Of Bill

The modified bill, designed to create a federal organization to avert strikes and industrial warfare, contained the following provisions:

Section 1: Authorizes the president to establish a series of boards to "investigate issues, pacts, practices or activities of employers or employes in any controversies arising under section 7-A" of the National Recovery Act.

Section 2: Empowers these boards to conduct elections "by a secret ballot" in any industry "to insure the right of employes to organize and to select their representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining."

Section 3: Authorizes these boards, with approval of president, to prescribe rules for the conduct of such elections and to enforce its rules in the nearest circuit court of appeals.

Section 4: Provides a penalty of $1,000 fine or one year's imprisonment for any person "knowingly and wilfully" violating its rules.

Section 5: Prohibits the boards from enforcing the "closed shop?" in any industry.

Section 6: Limits operation of the board to June 16, 1935, unless the president by proclamation terminates the NRA sooner.

The last two sections were added to the president's bill by the Republican senatorial committee. It also

PA NEWC OBSERVES

Cool waves are not uncommon about this time of the year, Pa Newc observes. Last night the temperature dropped to 45 degrees and just a year ago it fell to 35 and a fairly heavy frost was noticed, the records show.

Despite drought conditions the corn seems to be growing nicely on Lawrence County farms.

Persons having gardens along the Mahoning river, near Mahoningtown, were busy last night, watering the plants and crops, carrying water from the river in buckets.

There will be no dearth of elderberries, if the multitude of blossoms is any criterion by which to judge.

Evidently New Castle had visitors from east and west over Thursday night, for parked about the Castleton this morning were cars from New Jersey and New York from the east, while a California car represented the west and from the south there was a Georgia license.

* * *

Cascade Park seems to be the most popular spot in this district, these days. There are many picnic gatherings. The improvements made during the past winter and spring are much appreciated by the public, as the park reflects much of the natural beauty that made it famous for many years.

Plan To Avert Steel Strike Is Given By Green

Head Of A. F. Of L. Addresses Amalgamated Session In Pittsburgh

Would Have President Name Board Of Three To Rule On Disputes

International News Service Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, June 15. As a means of averting the threatened nation-wide steel strike, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made a dramatic appearance before the "strike convention" here today and advocated that the steel workers propose that President Roosevelt appoint an "impartial board of three members" to settle all controversial issues in the steel industry.

The special convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, in session considering the question of a steel strike, rocked with applause as Green offered his proposal.

Should Declare Strike Off

"If this proposal is accepted by all sides—the steel workers, the operators and the government—then the strike should be declared off," Green asserted in ringing tones.

Green urged the men to accept the proposal "in good faith" and assured them it would have the full support of the American Federation of Labor.

Green told the 188 union delegates he was talking to them "as a coal miner to steel workers" and that he fully appreciated their situation and was in hearty sympathy with their plight.

He countenanced against a strike at this time, saying:

"We must employ strategy—we must meet the issue with an issue".

Offering his peace proposal, Green asserted that the industrial relations board" as submitted through the steel interests" is rejected by the workers because it is unfair.

FUGITIVE DESPERADO CAUGHT IN WEST

Texas Escaped Prisoner Taken

Joseph Palmer, Associate Of Late Clyde Barrow, Is Caught In Missouri

ARREST IS MADE WITHOUT STRUGGLE

(International News Service)

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 15.—Joseph Palmer, southwestern desperado who escaped prison at Houston, Tex., and is wanted for murder in Tennessee, today was captured on a highway here without a struggle after releasing three kidnap victims.

Palmer, an associate of the late Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the cigar-smoking gun-girl, had just freed a baseball official, a policeman and a veterinarian whom he had kidnaped in Davenport, Ia., 24 hours before.

The victims were Al Schultze, secretary of the Davenport Western League baseball club; Dr. W. H. Fitch, veterinarian of Walcott, Ia., and policeman Elmer Schleuter of Davenport.

He had robbed his three victims during a wild all-night ride through Iowa and Missouri country roads.

Palmer escaped from prison at Houston when Barrow raided the institution for that express purpose. Barrow and his Miss Parker, were shot to death in a police ambush recently.

The escaped desperado carried two loaded colt automatic pistols when he was captured by a squad of heavily armed officers riding in a police car.

None of Palmer's three kidnapped victims suffered any injury, although they appeared visibly shaken after their night of terror.

No Reconciliation

The rift between Mrs. Dall and her husband is the second in the presidential family. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son, was divorced here from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt of Philadelphia, a year ago, and later he remarried.

It has been known for some time there has been an estrangement between Mrs. Dall and her broker-husband, but mutual friends predicted there would be no divorce.

Since the separation, which took place about the time of the president's inauguration, Mrs. Dall has spent much of her time in Washington, while Dall has continued in business in New York.

limited punishment for violation of the proposed boards' orders to violations committed "knowingly and wilfully." All the other new amendments were clarifying in nature.

The Republicans accepted Section 2, with its broad language, interpreted as giving the president power to lay down rules for either proportional or majority representation of workers in collective bargaining. The difference between proportional and majority representation rested in that the former representation would give both A. F. of L. and company unions a voice while the latter representation would give the majority union the sole voice in negotiations with employers.

May Pass Today

Washington, June 15.—A slightly modified version of President Roosevelt's conciliation bill was approved by a conference of Republican senators today in a drive to enact it in time to avert a general steel strike.

The Republicans previously turned their amendments to the president's bill over to Democratic leaders for submission to the president.

Army Affairs To Be Probed

SEARCHING PROBE TO BE CONDUCTED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—A searching investigation, which may have far-reaching results, will be conducted into the affairs of the army before the new congress convenes in January.

Already armed with authority to rake a fine-toothed comb over the army's handling of $300,000,000 funds, each year, the house military affairs committee plans to seek an additional fund of $10,000 for its work.

In declaring for continuance of the investigation, chairman McSwain (D) of South Carolina, of the committee, said "we may have only just scratched the surface so far."

Inquiry Started

The committee's inquiry, which is being conducted through sub-committees, has already covered purchase of airplanes, the lease of the army base at Newark, N. J. to the Mercur Corporation at a low figure and automobile purchases.

"Things have been disclosed which the committee never dreamed of," said McSwain.

The general staff of the army and the highest ranking officers—for the most part at least—have privately been exonerated by members of the committee.

The only possible barrier to a mammoth picnic will be a snow storm or an all day rain. Aside from these there appears to be no reason why Tin Workers Day here on June 30 will not be the biggest affair of its kind ever staged. partial board of three be appointed by President Roosevelt to act upon all problems and controversial questions within the steel industry.

Such a board, he explained, would receive complaints and make adjustments and mediate all disputes under the steel code.

The board would offer their services in any dispute between employer and employe providing such disputes could not be first settled by the interested parties themselves.

In order that the workers in the steel mills could "exercise the right to bargain collectively" the board would authorize the holding of elections to determine through what organization the workers wanted to be represented.

"Impartial Board"

Under Green's proposal all grievances and complaints would be first taken up through the management and the workers and any questions upon which they failed to agree would be referred to President Roosevelt's "impartial board" for final decision.

Green's appearance on the platform was the dramatic highlight of the convention to date. A man of about 50, medium-height and wearing spectacles he talked in a loud, firm voice that could be heard throughout the auditorium.

Michael F. Tighe, veteran president of the Amalgamated Association, introduced Green as "the great champion of the workingman."

This statement was thunderously applauded.

The convention adjourned until 2:30 o'clock (EDT) this afternoon when the union workers will again go into executive session to debate the strike issue.

Pittsburgh, June 15. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, may prove to be the "key man" in the threatened nation-wide steel strike.

He was scheduled to take the platform today at the second day's session of the special convention of the Amalgamated association of iron, steel and tin workers who are soon to decide by ballot whether or not a strike should be called because the steel mill owners refuse to recognize the union.

Green's advice, it was admited on all sides, figures to strongly influence the big "on the fence" element in the convention when they get down to the business of voting.

Await Green's Address

The strike ballot will not be taken until after Green delivers his address. Green himself has a lot at stake as the Amalgamated Association is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Loss of a strike by a union in America's number one industry would be a severe blow to the A. F. of L.

Many of the union delegates assembled here are sorely puzzled as to what action should be taken in the present crisis. They are asking such questions as: "Is the time propituous for a steel strike?" and "Is it true the steel operators would welcome a strike because they feel that at this particular time they could break the union once for all?"

Welcomes Green

Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated, welcomes the appearance of Green. Tighe's attitude has been one of moderation although he states he will abide by the wishes of the delegates on the question of a strike.

A number of the delegates expressed the opinion that Green's address was to be played as a trump card to avert a general steel strike, at least until President Roosevelt's proposals are given a fair trial.

It is regarded as significant that when the Rev. Casimir Orlemanski, a Catholic priest of Natrona Heights, Pa., appeared before the convention and advocated a thirty-day postponement of the strike he was cheered by the delegates. He was given a rising vote of thanks and made an honorary member of the Amalgamated.

Peace Proposal

Father Orlemanski, whose influence played an important part in inducing coal miners to go back to work during recent strike troubles in the Allegheny valley fields offered a "peace proposal" to the delegates. He favored elections under the supervision of the federal government with no closed shop but with proportional representation according to the vote.

Thus far during the convention the aggressive "rank and file" element of the Amalgamated has been comparatively silent. It is regarded as certain, however, that they will set off a lot of verbal fireworks but the belief is growing that the conservative element, headed by Tighe, will prevail in the long run.

More than 240 delegates from all parts of the country showed up for the convention but the credentials of only 188 were approved. Considerable care was exercised to see that none of what President Tighe describes as the "communistic rabble" were allowed in or near the convention hall.

Mussolini used the occasion again to show Hitler an example of Italy's military strength. The regular army took no part but 20,000 Fascists armed with every light weapon from daggers to machine guns marched past the German leader.

There were very few cries of "Hitler." Venice already has nicknamed him "Piccolo Mussolini," meaning little Mussolini. Mussolini again saluted crisply. Hitler saluted with a loose wrist. Italians noticed this to Hitler's disadvantage.

Little Popular Cheering

So little popular cheering has been directed Hitler's way that this morning a regiment of Fascist youth were ordered out to give the guest of honor a good hand. They lined the way to the International Art exhibition which Hitler visited after the military parade. Their applause visibly pleaded the German who smilingly responded with a limp hand.

Nineteen cannon bombed over the Grane canal as Hitler and Mussolini momentarily parted. Hitler received representatives of the German colony, inspected German and Italian pictures, while Mussolini boarded a destroyer. Serious conversations come after lunch together at the Gold club at Lido.

FUGITIVE DESPERADO CAUGHT IN WEST

Texas Escaped Prisoner Taken

ARREST IS MADE WITHOUT STRUGGLE

(International News Service)

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 15.—Joseph Palmer, southwestern desperado who escaped prison at Houston, Tex., and is wanted for murder in Tennessee, today was captured on a highway here without a struggle after releasing three kidnap victims.

Palmer, an associate of the late Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the cigar-smoking gun-girl, had just freed a baseball official, a policeman and a veterinarian whom he had kidnaped in Davenport, Ia., 24 hours before.

The victims were Al Schultze, secretary of the Davenport Western League baseball club; Dr. W. H. Fitch, veterinarian of Walcott, Ia., and policeman Elmer Schleuter of Davenport.

He had robbed his three victims during a wild all-night ride through Iowa and Missouri country roads.

Palmer escaped from prison at Houston when Barrow raided the institution for that express purpose. Barrow and his Miss Parker, were shot to death in a police ambush recently.

The escaped desperado carried two loaded colt automatic pistols when he was captured by a squad of heavily armed officers riding in a police car.

No Reconciliation

The rift between Mrs. Dall and her husband is the second in the presidential family. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son, was divorced here from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt of Philadelphia, a year ago, and later he remarried.

It has been known for some time there has been an estrangement between Mrs. Dall and her broker-husband, but mutual friends predicted there would be no divorce.

Since the separation, which took place about the time of the president's inauguration, Mrs. Dall has spent much of her time in Washington, while Dall has continued in business in New York.

MODIFIED LABOR CONCILIATION BILL AWAITS APPROVAL

limited punishment for violation of the proposed boards' orders to violations committed "knowingly and willfully." All the other new amendments were clarifying in nature.

The Republicans accepted Section 2, with its broad language, interpreted as giving the president power to lay down rules for either proportional or majority representation of workers in collective bargaining. The difference between proportional and majority representation rested in that the former representation would give both A. F. of L. and company unions a voice while the latter representation would give the majority union the sole voice in negotiations with employers.

May Pass Today

Washington, June 15.—A slightly modified version of President Roosevelt's conciliation bill was approved by a conference of Republican senators today in a drive to enact it in time to avert a general steel strike.

The Republicans previously turned their amendments to the president's bill over to Democratic leaders for submission to the president.

"If Democratic leaders accept these amendments," said Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, "the bill can pass the senate today."

The manner in which police obtained the confession from Sanders was not learned immediately. They had met nothing but a blank wall in their investigation of the case up until this time. Even the release of the girl's father, George, from the Allegheny county workhouse so that he could aid in the search, failed to provide them with clues.

Authorities said Sanders is a graduate of Bucknell University and later taught school at Turtle Creek. At one time he was adjutant of the Sharon Post of the American Legion.

Army Affairs To Be Probed

SEARCHING PROBE TO BE CONDUCTED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15—A searching investigation, which may have far-reaching results, will be conducted into the affairs of the army before the new congress convenes in January.

Already armed with authority to rake a fine-toothed comb over the army's handling of $300,000,000 funds, each year, the house military affairs committee plans to seek an additional fund of $10,000 for its work.

In declaring for continuance of the investigation, chairman McSwain (D) of South Carolina, of the committee, said "we may have only just scratched the surface so far."

Inquiry Started

The committee's inquiry, which is being conducted through sub-committees, has already covered purchase of airplanes, the lease of the army base at Newark, N. J. to the Mercur Corporation at a low figure and automobile purchases.

"Things have been disclosed which the committee never dreamed of," said McSwain.

The general staff of the army and the highest ranking officers—for the most part at least—have privately been exonerated by members of the committee.

Coming here to succeed Mr. Van Nort will be E. S. Reed, trainmaster of the Panhandle division at Pittsburgh, who has had a wide experience since 1900 in the Pennsy's transportation department. Mr. Reed is expected to arrive here tomorrow.

Mr. Van Nort, while here only a comparatively sohrt time, acquired a wide number of friends in the New Castle district. Before he was named superintendent here he had served two years here as division engineer. In his new Pittsburgh post he will be directly responsible for all freight transportation in the Pennsylvania's large Central region, embracing a dozen and more large divisions serving much of the major industrial district of the east.

Mr. Van Nort's predecessor at Pittsburgh, E. E. Ernest, has been promoted to the superintendency of the Pennsylvania's Long Island railroad.

THOUSANDS TO ATTEND TIN WORKERS' PICNIC AT CASCADE, JUNE 30th

free coffee for everybody, free dancing in the pavilion in the afternoon and a display of fireworks at night.

The general committee handling the picnic is composed of the social committees of the Shenango and New Castle plants. An effort is being made to have as many of the pensioners of the corporation as possible, at the picnic, many of them men who helped to start the New Castle Works in 1893, and others who helped start the Shenango plant in 1899.

The only possible barrier to a mammoth picnic will be a snow storm or an all day rain. Aside from these there appears to be no reason why Tin Workers Day here on June 30 will not be the biggest affair of its kind ever staged. It promises to be a combination of the Fourth of July, Old Timers Day, Labor Day and a family reunion.

FUGITIVE DESPERADO CAUGHT IN WEST

Texas Escaped Prisoner Taken

ARREST IS MADE WITHOUT STRUGGLE

(International News Service)

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 15.—Joseph Palmer, southwestern desperado who escaped prison at Houston, Tex., and is wanted for murder in Tennessee, today was captured on a highway here without a struggle after releasing three kidnap victims.

Palmer, an associate of the late Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the cigar-smoking gun-girl, had just freed a baseball official, a policeman and a veterinarian whom he had kidnaped in Davenport, Ia., 24 hours before.

The victims were Al Schultze, secretary of the Davenport Western League baseball club; Dr. W. H. Fitch, veterinarian of Walcott, Ia., and policeman Elmer Schleuter of Davenport.

He had robbed his three victims during a wild all-night ride through Iowa and Missouri country roads.

Palmer escaped from prison at Houston when Barrow raided the institution for that express purpose. Barrow and his Miss Parker, were shot to death in a police ambush recently.

The escaped desperado carried two loaded colt automatic pistols when he was captured by a squad of heavily armed officers riding in a police car.

None of Palmer's three kidnapped victims suffered any injury, although they appeared visibly shaken after their night of terror.

Friends here have not been advised as to the grounds upon which the divorce will be asked, but the assumption is that they will be the usual grounds, incompatibility and cruelty.

Dall is a broker in New York.

No Reconciliation

The rift between Mrs. Dall and her husband is the second in the presidential family. Elliott Roosevelt, the second son, was divorced here from his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt of Philadelphia, a year ago, and later he remarried.

It has been known for some time there has been an estrangement between Mrs. Dall and her broker-husband, but mutual friends predicted there would be no divorce.

Since the separation, which took place about the time of the president's inauguration, Mrs. Dall has spent much of her time in Washington, while Dall has continued in business in New York.

MODIFIED LABOR CONCILIATION BILL AWAITS APPROVAL

limited punishment for violation of the proposed boards' orders to violations committed "knowingly and wilfully." All the other new amendments were clarifying in nature.

The Republicans accepted Section 2, with its broad language, interpreted as giving the president power to lay down rules for either proportional or majority representation of workers in collective bargaining. The difference between proportional and majority representation rested in that the former representation would give both A. F. of L. and company unions a voice while the latter representation would give the majority union the sole voice in negotiations with employers.

May Pass Today

Washington, June 15.—A slightly modified version of President Roosevelt's conciliation bill was approved by a conference of Republican senators today in a drive to enact it in time to avert a general steel strike.

The Republicans previously turned their amendments to the president's bill over to Democratic leaders for submission to the president.

"If Democratic leaders accept these amendments," said Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, "the bill can pass the senate today."

appeared. There he found her lifeless body, he told authorities and took it to the garage at his home. After keeping it there for several days, he decided upon another transfer and this time removed it to a place near Sharpsville where he cremated it, authorities quoted him as admitting.

The manner in which police obtained the confession from Sanders was not learned immediately. They had met nothing but a blank wall in their investigation of the case up until this time. Even the release of the girl's father, George, from the Allegheny county workhouse so that he could aid in the search, failed to provide them with clues.

Authorities said Sanders is a graduate of Bucknell University and later taught school at Turtle Creek. At one time he was adjutant of the Sharon Post of the American Legion.

He also visited Mayor Yuan Liang asking for protection for the numerous Americans summering in the western hills where the outrage occurred.

SEARCHING PROBE TO BE CONDUCTED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15—A searching investigation, which may have far-reaching results, will be conducted into the affairs of the army before the new congress convenes in January.

Already armed with authority to rake a fine-toothed comb over the army's handling of $300,000,000 funds, each year, the house military affairs committee plans to seek an additional fund of $10,000 for its work.

In declaring for continuance of the investigation, chairman McSwain (D) of South Carolina, of the committee, said "we may have only just scratched the surface so far."

Inquiry Started

The committee's inquiry, which is being conducted through sub-committees, has already covered purchase of airplanes, the lease of the army base at Newark, N. J. to the Mercur Corporation at a low figure and automobile purchases.

"Things have been disclosed which the committee never dreamed of," said McSwain.

The general staff of the army and the highest ranking officers—for the most part at least—have privately been exonerated by members of the committee.

was promoted to superintendent of freight transportation of the Central region at Pittsburgh, according to word received at E. & A. offices from Vice President E. W. Smith.

Van Nort's promotion is effective Saturday.

Reed Is Successor.

Coming here to succeed Mr. Van Nort will be E. S. Reed, trainmaster of the Panhandle division at Pittsburgh, who has had a wide experience since 1900 in the Pennsy's transportation department. Mr. Reed is expected to arrive here tomorrow.

Mr. Van Nort, while here only a comparatively sohrt time, acquired a wide number of friends in the New Castle district. Before he was named superintendent here he had served here he had served two years here as division engineer. In his new Pittsburgh post he will be directly responsible for all freight transportation in the Pennsylvania's large Central region, embracing a dozen and more large divisions serving much of the major industrial district of the east.

Mr. Van Nort's predecessor at Pittsburgh, E. E. Ernest, has been promoted to the superintendency of the Pennsylvania's Long Island railroad.

free coffee for everybody, free dancing in the pavilion in the afternoon and a display of fireworks at night.

The general committee handling the picnic is composed of the social committees of the Shenango and New Castle plants. An effort is being made to have as many of the pensioners of the corporation as possible, at the picnic, many of them men who helped to start the New Castle Works in 1893, and others who helped start the Shenango plant in 1899.

The only possible barrier to a mammoth picnic will be a snow storm or an all day rain. Aside from these there appears to be no reason why Tin Workers Day here on June 30 will not be the biggest affair of its kind ever staged. It promises to be a combination of the Fourth of July, Old Timers Day, Labor Day and a family reunion.

partial board of three be appointed by President Roosevelt to act upon all problems and controversial questions within the steel industry.

Such a board, he explained, would receive complaints and make adjustments and mediate all disputes under the steel code.

The board would offer their services in any dispute between employer and employe providing such disputes could not be first settled by the interested parties themselves.

In order that the workers in the steel mills could "exercise the right to bargain collectively" the board would authorize the holding of elections to determine through what organization the workers wanted to be represented.

"Impartial Board"

Under Green's proposal all grievances and complaints would be first taken up through the management and the workers and any questions upon which they failed to agree would be referred to President Roosevelt's "impartial board" for final decision.

Green's appearance on the platform was the dramatic highlight of the convention to date. A man of about 50, medium-height and wearing spectacles he talked in a loud, firm voice that could be heard throughout the auditorium.

Michael F. Tighe, veteran president of the Amalgamated Association, introduced Green as "the great champion of the workingman."

This statement was thunderously applauded.

The convention adjourned until 2:30 o'clock (EDT) this afternoon when the union workers will again go into executive session to debate the strike issue.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Pittsburgh, June 15. — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, may prove to be the "key man" in the threatened nation-wide steel strike.

He was scheduled to take the platform today at the second day's session of the special convention of the Amalgamated association of iron, steel and tin workers who are soon to decide by ballot whether or not a strike should be called because the steel mill owners refuse to recognize the union.

Green's advice, it was admited on all sides, figures to strongly influence the big "on the fence" element in the convention when they get down to the business of voting.

Await Green's Address

The strike ballot will not be taken until after Green delivers his address. Green himself has a lot at stake as the Amalgamated Association is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Loss of a strike by a union in America's number one industry would be a severe blow to the A. F. of L.

Many of the union delegates assembled here are sorely puzzled as to what action should be taken in the present crisis. They are asking such questions as: "Is the time propituous for a steel strike?" and "Is it true the steel operators would welcome a strike because they feel that at this particular time they could break the union once for all?"

Welcomes Green

Michael F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated, welcomes the appearance of Green. Tighe's attitude has been one of moderation although he states he will abide by the wishes of the delegates on the question of a strike.

A number of the delegates expressed the opinion that Green's address was to be played as a trump card to avert a general steel strike, at least until President Roosevelt's proposals are given a fair trial.

It is regarded as significant that when the Rev. Casimir Orlemanski, a Catholic priest of Natrona Heights, Pa., appeared before the convention and advocated a thirty-day postponement of the strike he was cheered by the delegates. He was given a rising vote of thanks and made an honorary member of the Amalgamated.

Peace Proposal

Father Orlemanski, whose influence played an important part in inducing coal miners to go back to work during recent strike troubles in the Allegheny valley fields offered a "peace proposal" to the delegates. He favored elections under the supervision of the federal government with no closed shop but with proportional representation according to the vote.

Thus far during the convention the aggressive "rank and file" element of the Amalgamated has been comparatively silent. It is regarded as certain, however, that they will set off a lot of verbal fireworks but the belief is growing that the conservative element, headed by Tighe, will prevail in the long run.

More than 240 delegates from all parts of the country showed up for the convention but the credentials of only 188 were approved. Considerable care was exercised to see that none of what President Tighe describes as the "communistic rabble" were allowed in or near the convention hall.

dagger salute, sent shivers down the spines of spectators. It was at least as much of a menace as it was a greeting.

Mussolini used the occasion again to show Hitler an example of Italy's military strength. The regular army took no part but 20,000 Fascists armed with every light weapon from daggers to machine guns marched past the German leader.

There were very few cries of "Hitler." Venice already has nicknamed him "Piccolo Mussolini," meaning little Mussolini. Mussolini again saluted crisply. Hitler saluted with a loose wrist. Italians noticed this to Hitler's disadvantage.

Little Popular Cheering

So little popular cheering has been directed Hitler's way that this morning a regiment of Fascist youth were ordered out to give the guest of honor a good hand. They lined the way to the International Art exhibition which Hitler visited after the military parade. Their applause visibly pleaded the German who smilingly responded with a limp hand.

Nineteen cannon bombed over the Granc canal as Hitler and Mussolini momentarily parted. Hitler received representatives of the German colony, inspected German and Italian pictures, while Mussolini boarded a destroyer. Serious conversations come after lunch together at the Gold club at Lido.

Mrs. Nellie Brooks and Mrs. Clarence H. Fischer formed the committee in charge of the program which was varied and consisted of many entertaining features.

A flute solo, "The Minute Waltz," by Chopin, was rendered by William Shira, Eagle Scout, accompanied by Miss "Billy" Glenn. Little Miss Kathryn Wilcox followed with a reading entitled, "The Flag."

A delightful musical program arranged by Mrs. Russell introduced several New Wilmington young people. Miss Helen Francis, a student in the Conservatory of Music, rendered a piano solo, Chopin's "Prelude in C Minor," and responded graciously with an encore.

History of the flag of truce was given by Harry W. Miles, scoutmaster Troop V-18, the flag being displayed by Beecher F. Russell.

Miss Lowenne Swindler of Westminster, contributed two beautiful violin selections, "Thais," by Massenet, and "The Gypsy Legend." She was accompanied by Miss Lois McGill, also of Westminster.

Why Some Men Succeed

What a difference there is in men! Some of them are full of pep, energy, ability. They think straight and they think fast. They get there ahead of the other fellow.

What's the difference?

Usually a man eats success or failure at the breakfast table. Often he makes or loses a contract according to what he eats for lunch. Wise eating is the smartest thing a business man can do. At least one meal a day, especially in this warm weather, eat Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit.

If you didn't have any other food you could live on this combination, and be mighty well on it, too. It gives your body all it needs for energy, tissue building, and disease resistance, and it gives you bran to keep you regular.

The right food has a great deal to do with your success. Try Shredded Wheat for one meal a day, and see what happens!

Why Some Men Succeed

What a difference there is in men! Some of them are full of pep, energy, ability. They think straight and they think fast. They get there ahead of the other fellow.

What's the difference?

Usually a man eats success or failure at the breakfast table. Often he makes or loses a contract according to what he eats for lunch. Wise eating is the smartest thing a business man can do. At least one meal a day, especially in this warm weather, eat Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit.

If you didn't have any other food you could live on this combination, and be mighty well on it, too. It gives your body all it needs for energy, tissue building, and disease resistance, and it gives you bran to keep you regular.

The right food has a great deal to do with your success. Try Shredded Wheat for one meal a day, and see what happens!

Why Some Men Succeed

What a difference there is in men! Some of them are full of pep, energy, ability. They think straight and they think fast. They get there ahead of the other fellow.

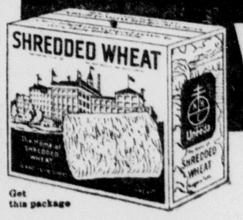

What's the difference?

Usually a man eats success or failure at the breakfast table. Often he makes or loses a contract according to what he eats for lunch. Wise eating is the smartest thing a business man can do. At least one meal a day, especially in this warm weather, eat Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit.

If you didn't have any other food you could live on this combination, and be mighty well on it, too. It gives your body all it needs for energy, tissue building, and disease resistance, and it gives you bran to keep you regular.

The right food has a great deal to do with your success. Try Shredded Wheat for one meal a day, and see what happens!

FATHER'S DAY

FATHER, better known in the family as "the old man," will come into his own Sunday, Father's day.

Mother has had hers, and she deserved it. All honor and glory properly belongs to her. Her position in the home is one of heavy and nerve-racking responsibilities and often equally heavy work.

But this doesn't mean that all is roses for the old man. It is his task to bring home the bacon. This often is not an easy job. Especially has it not been such for the last three or four years. Usually he manages, however, in some way to do it.

Sunday he will step forward and bask in the spotlight for a moment. His hair is a little grayer than it was a year ago, and an additional furrow may be on his brow. But he still can smile and feel a little glow of satisfaction at the recognition given him.

CHINESE GIRL LEADS COLLEGE CLASS

Considering Bryn Mawr's high rank among the women's colleges of the country, it is rather surprising to learn that this year's brightest junior at that institution is a Chinese girl, Miss Vung-Yuin Ting.

For attaining the highest scholastic record in her class Miss Ting has been awarded the Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall memorial scholarship, and for standing highest in her major subject, chemistry, she will receive the Charles H. Hinchman scholarship. After her graduation at Bryn Mawr next year she will enter the medical school of the University of Michigan.

Her father is Dr. Zoong Ing Ting, a leading physician of Shanghai, with whom she expects to practice after obtaining her degree of doctor of medicine. Her aunt is China's greatest woman physician and is the head of the Women's Hospital in Tientsin.

Miss Ting is treasurer of the Bryn Mawr Athletic Club and was last year president of the International Club. She is five feet tall, weighs 93 pounds, and is said to be one of the most popular girls in the college.

She is one of many bright students from the Orient who have demonstrated their ability to equal or excel their Occidental college mates in scholarship, in spite of what would seem to be a serious linguistic handicap.

POLICE REGISTRATION OF CRIMINALS

The proposal to require criminals in Camden, N. J., to register with the police is an innovation that will excite widespread interest. Under the plan all persons, whether residents or transients, who have been convicted of crime within the last ten years would be compelled to post their names, addresses and aliases at police headquarters and submit to photographing and fingerprinting. The compulsion is for those convicted of crimes, but not for misdemeanors. Such records do not concern those who have been convicted of prohibition violations.

This experiment has been discussed for years, but there has been hesitation about trying it here, although it is a routine matter in Europe. In some countries everybody is required to register with the police. At a casual glance registration appears good, because it simplifies police work and does not impose hardship on law-abiding persons. But conditions are different in the United States. Under our organic law care has been taken to protect the rights of the individual.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution provides that no person be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Evidently the New Jersey authorities have decided that the new plan does not conflict with the preservation of individual rights.

Some persons who would be heartily in favor of the registration of criminals may still be fearful that this might be the first move toward the adoption of other European methods which might not be true to American traditions.

JAPAN'S AMBITIONS

That Japan is not inclined to retrace any recent steps in its foreign policy is indicated by Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the Japanese house of peers, now on a visit in the United States.

In an interview in New York, the prince outlined some of Japan's present aims as he sees them. Although emphasizing that he was not attempting to speak officially but only as an individual Japanese citizen, his statement can be interpreted only as reflecting an official viewpoint.

Japan will not return to the League of Nations, he said, "until the league changes its views on the Far Eastern situation."

Defending Japan's action in Manchukuo, he justified this "not only on grounds of self-defense, but from the standpoint of what was necessary for the welfare of all the nations in the Far East."

Further purposes of Japan were outlined as including freedom for Japanese to live in any part of the world they choose, and unrestricted interchange of goods and commodities with all countries on the globe.

It is evident, from the prince's views, that Japan is due to occupy a prominent position in future discussions of peace and other international problems. Her aims, outside of her demand for naval parity, are of a kind to come into conflict with recognized policies of other powers.

"If world peace is to mean simply sticking to things as they are," the prince was quoted as saying, "then the Japanese people are not satisfied; they are looking for the establishment of international justice."

And it would seem that they want themselves to be the judge of what constitutes international justice.

In other words, Japan has formulated a definite program of expansion irrespective of the interests of other nations, and is determined to see it carried out.

Its course in China represents justice in the Japanese conception, but the world has another word for it. And it may be that Tokyo will find that it is much easier to formulate than to execute programs when these come into conflict with the interest of countries able to defend themselves.

WHAT DO YOU DO WITH POWER

One way to check up on yourself and determine the kind of human being you are—and most of us would like to know about that—is to ask a simple question and to try to answer it honestly.

The question is: "How do you act when you have a little power given to you?"

You may reply that you have no power and that very few people in this world have any power.

But that is only partly true. All of us, at some time or other, manage to get hold of a little power. It may not last, it may not be very real, but we get it. . . . We hire somebody to do a little job. Or, more usually, we become parents and acquire power over children. Or we have power over animals. It's a rare person, indeed, that doesn't have a scrap of power in his possession occasionally.

And having power does something to people.

Sometimes they grow. Sometimes they shrink. Sometimes it makes them small and arrogant. Sometimes it makes them large and understanding. It may increase their pettiness, or deepen their decency. Acquiring more power, they may feel a greater sense of responsibility to the world, or it may enlarge their personal selfishness that grows as it feeds. Power may make a man a better human being or a much worse one, bring out the best in him, or strip a hidden meanness bare for all to see.

It's almost impossible to tell in advance what a little power will do to a man. Even the man himself cannot say what he might become, given a little power. Because, even though we do live so intimately with our own selves, we do not know ourselves nearly as well as we think we do. We lie to ourselves naturally. We praise ourselves and even criticize ourselves more than we should. We are blind to certain sections of our personalities, just as we are blind to parts of other people. But we all have a fairly accurate idea of what we would do, how we would act, if we had power. At least we know whether we want power or don't. Some men, a few, push it away from themselves. The others, most of us, want as much as we can possibly scrape together.

"So it's a fair question to ask, "How do you act when you have a little power?", . . . And the answer you give yourself should be a most revealing one.

SHORT AND COCKY.

If Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria were an American, he would promptly be nicknamed "Shorty" for he is less than five feet tall. But not so in Austria.

Hearing of several jokes told at his expense, he issued orders that any of his subjects passing on such stories would be punished.

One of these gags was to the effect that the little chancellor had broken his leg falling off a ladder while picking strawberries. Another was a report from Vienna that during the Socialist uprising there, Dollfuss paced up and down the floor all night under his bed.

A later slanderous statement was to the effect that the chancellor, attending an international conference at Geneva, had managed to get hold of everything he wanted except the doorknob.

If you try to work this one some time you get caught don't blame it on us. Blame Rose R. Burket, of Benton Harbor, Mich. Here's here story:

A welfare worker had driven four miles in the country to take supplies to a reserving farmer. Before she left them, however she checked up on a rumor that had come to the welfare office. "We were told that you have been seen driving a car. Do you own a car? You know we are not giving help to people able to drive cars," she informed him.

The farmer's reply was prompt. "No lady, I sometimes drive a car, but it isn't mine. It's loaned to me."

However, the worker persisted: "But they say that your girl drives a car in to high school every day."

"Well" the farmer confessed, "it's like this about that car. It belongs to my brother-in-law's sister and sometimes she lets us drive it. My girl hasn't any other way to get to school and she's been letting her use it."

That explanation was satisfactory and the worker left the supplies. When she was out of the yard the farmer turned to a neighbor: "That old fool never will figger out that my brother-in-law's sister is my wife."

Tugwell Proved Too Conservative? New Deal Figures Alarm Republicans Soviet Chief Sufferer From Drouth

By LESLIE EICHEL
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, June 15.—A peculiar reaction is being experienced over the senatorial examination of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell. He has been proved too much of a conservative for a large strata of the masses!

The Roosevelt administration's strength lies not in the minority which cries the most loudly but in the majority that says little yet votes heavily.

NEW DEAL FIGURES

Republicans frankly are viewing with alarm figures disclosed in the Literary Digest poll on the New Deal. The heaviest gains made by President Roosevelt since the election are in rock-ribbed Republican industrial states.

In states in which there have been losses, the vote tends rather to the progressives than to the Republicans.

Democratic losses in the house may not be as heavy as had been estimated. Democratic gains in the senate will be eight or nine. The president seems to be gaining power.

His message on social legislature (for the next congress) is a strong election document.

SOVIET SUFFERS

It is not in the United States where the drouth has brought the greatest suffering, but in the U. S. S. R. (Soviet Russia). That great wheat land will have to import wheat with money sorely needed at home.

MONEY TROUBLES

The world still is suffering from serious money troubles. Because trade among nations remains stagnant, due to man-made barriers, money doesn't revolve. Motionless, it is of little use. Thus we have world wide desires to force money to move by cheapening it—as a merchant does his goods. That is called devaluation. Or if it is flung into many projects, that is reflation. And if paper constantly is issued against it, that is inflation.

Germany, deprived of many avenues of trade, is on the verge of serious inflation and of debt repudiation.

The American dollar is sliding a little again— to stimulate prices.

Money can be cheapened to nothing. That is more bolshevik than any of the social plans so far broached. In fact, it is the opposite of the social plans broached. But hardly anybody understands money and trade, even in this enlightened age. Nearly everyone forgets that money is not wealth, that it merely is the symbol of trade, and that only production and trade are wealth.

ONE PROBLEM

One of the troubles of the western nations is the competition of the Oriental nations.

Japan, for example, has low wages. Furthermore, the yen is closely linked to silver. As the value of silver goes up, the higher the trade of Japan rises.

Tariffs do not help the western countries, an authority in the New York Times remarks. The products that Japan formerly sold here merely to have been diverted to the silver countries—largely to the exclusion of products from the United States and England.

Prior to any world improvement, nations will have to get together on currency, standards of living, wages and tariffs. Otherwise, they will knife one another to death.

SEA MISTRESS

Japan is building more freight carriers for the seas than any other nation. Japan's export business has been increasing while that of other nations has been declining.

The great ocean of commerce in the future will be the Pacific.

The greatest city in the world, in the future, will be Shanghai. Thus an eminent French professor predicts.

I recently asked an around-the-world traveler which city had the brightest prospects.

"Shanghai," he said. "It some day will be the metropolis of the world. It impressed me most."

It is a city of all nations. The British once dominated it. The Japanese invaded it. The Chinese count it as one of their own.

More factories are being built in the Chinese coast cities than in any other cities in the world. "Cheap labor" attracts capitalists of all nationalities. They know no flag; their only creed is profits.

THE FINISHED HOME

When first the little home began
We used to sit and dream and plan
And say to friends who walked it through:
"There still is much we want to do.
Some day within that corner there
We'll place a table and a chair.
There's much we want to do or get,
The home is far from finished yet."

When Time our circumstance improved
Into a large house we moved,
Equipped with all the newer things
Invention into service brings.
But still we said, as in and out
With friends we wandered round about,
"The place is far from finished yet.
There's much we want to do and get."

Now still we sit with hearts elate
At night before the open grate
With lovely dreams as yet unwon
And countless things as yet undone.
The home is now no longer new
But still there's much we want to do.
Though solidly its walls have set
The home is far from finished yet.

I saw a finished home today!
Its tenants long had moved away.
The shattered windows plainly said
That pride, which kept it once, had fled.
Loved one and friend would come no more
To pass that crumbling threshold o'er
The house was finished, and it stood
A hollow shell of rotting wood.

They put on city airs now, but you'll find few Americans over thirty who don't know what "Sooey!" means.

FRIDAY, JUNE 15

Memorable Days—June 15, 1215—John Plantagent, king of England, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, and Count of Anjou, aged 49, signed against his will the Magna Charta (Great Charter) at Runnymede, near Windsor, and laid the foundation stone of personal liberty and civil rights, the basis of the British constitution and the formal beginning of modern constitutional government.

The Magna Charta passed into American laws as a fundamental.

It conferred upon parliament the sole right to make, repeal or alter laws and impose taxation; establish the principle of trial by jury and provided for protection of property rights by by due process of law.

(For seven centuries the English took no steps to preserve the spot in the meadow by the Thames where John granted the Great Charter. An American woman bought and presented it to the British government as a national monument in 1929.)

June 15, 1519—A spy employed by the king of Portugal to watch the doings of Ferdinand Magellan, who was about to make a trip under the patronage of the king of Spain, reported to his master that the five ships of Magellan were "very old and patched up. . . . I assure your majesty that I should be ill-inclined to sail in them to the Canaries."

One of these "very old and patched up" ships was three years older when it made the first voyage around the world!

June 15, 1775—George Washington, 42, member of congress from Virginia, was nominated by Thomas Johnson, a member from Maryland, as commander-in-chief of the Continental army, and was chosen unanimously by ballot.

He stipulated that he should receive no salary, and at the end of the Revolution he accepted only his expenses. (They averaged less than $10,000 a year.)

The Continental Congress did not make him a general, there was none in the Continental army. He held the rank of lieutenant-general until after the Revolution.

June 15, 1904—1,400 happy New Yorkers, mostly women and children, left the E. 3rd street pier, East river, aboard the steamer General Slocum, bound for the annual outing of St. Mark's Lutheran church.

Off 135th street, fire began shooting out of her forward cabins. Capt. William Van Schaick ran her aground on North Brother Island, but too late. While hundreds on shore looked on helplessly, 1,061 of the General Slocum's passengers were burned to death or drowned.

FATHER'S DAY

FATHER, better known in the family as "the old man," will come into his own Sunday, Father's day.

Mother has had hers, and she deserved it. All honor and glory properly belongs to her. Her position in the home is one of heavy and nerve-racking responsibilities and often equally heavy work.

But this doesn't mean that all is roses for the old man. It is his task to bring home the bacon. This often is not an easy job. Especially has it not been such for the last three or four years. Usually he manages, however, in some way to do it.

Sunday he will step forward and bask in the spotlight for a moment. His hair is a little grayer than it was a year ago, and an additional furrow may be on his brow. But he still can smile and feel a little glow of satisfaction at the recognition given him.

CHINESE GIRL LEADS COLLEGE CLASS

Considering Bryn Mawr's high rank among the women's colleges of the country, it is rather surprising to learn that this year's brightest junior at that institution is a Chinese girl, Miss Vung-Yuin Ting.

For attaining the highest scholastic record in her class Miss Ting has been awarded the Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall memorial scholarship, and for standing highest in her major subject, chemistry, she will receive the Charles H. Hinchman scholarship. After her graduation at Bryn Mawr next year she will enter the medical school of the University of Michigan.

Her father is Dr. Zoong Ing Ting, a leading physician of Shanghai, with whom she expects to practice after obtaining her degree of doctor of medicine. Her aunt is China's greatest woman physician and is the head of the Women's Hospital in Tientsin.

Miss Ting is treasurer of the Bryn Mawr Athletic Club and was last year president of the International Club. She is five feet tall, weighs 93 pounds, and is said to be one of the most popular girls in the college.

She is one of many bright students from the Orient who have demonstrated their ability to equal or excel their Occidental college mates in scholarship, in spite of what would seem to be a serious linguistic handicap.

POLICE REGISTRATION OF CRIMINALS

The proposal to require criminals in Camden, N. J., to register with the police is an innovation that will excite widespread interest. Under the plan all persons, whether residents or transients, who have been convicted of crime within the last ten years would be compelled to post their names, addresses and aliases at police headquarters and submit to photographing and fingerprinting. The compulsion is for those convicted of crimes, but not for misdemeanors. Such records do not concern those who have been convicted of prohibition violations.

This experiment has been discussed for years, but there has been hesitation about trying it here, although it is a routine matter in Europe. In some countries everybody is required to register with the police. At a casual glance registration appears good, because it simplifies police work and does not impose hardship on law-abiding persons. But conditions are different in the United States. Under our organic law care has been taken to protect the rights of the individual.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution provides that no person be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Evidently the New Jersey authorities have decided that the new plan does not conflict with the preservation of individual rights.

Some persons who would be heartily in favor of the registration of criminals may still be fearful that this might be the first move toward the adoption of other European methods which might not be true to American traditions.

JAPAN'S AMBITIONS

That Japan is not inclined to retrace any recent steps in its foreign policy is indicated by Prince Fumimaro Konoye, president of the Japanese house of peers, now on a visit in the United States.

In an interview in New York, the prince outlined some of Japan's present aims as he sees them. Although emphasizing that he was not attempting to speak officially but only as an individual Japanese citizen, his statement can be interpreted only as reflecting an official viewpoint.

Japan will not return to the League of Nations, he said, "until the league changes its views on the Far Eastern situation."

Defending Japan's action in Manchukuo, he justified this "not only on grounds of self-defense, but from the standpoint of what was necessary for the welfare of all the nations in the Far East."

Further purposes of Japan were outlined as including freedom for Japanese to live in any part of the world they choose, and unrestricted interchange of goods and commodities with all countries on the globe.

It is evident, from the prince's views, that Japan is due to occupy a prominent position in future discussions of peace and other international problems. Her aims, outside of her demand for naval parity, are of a kind to come into conflict with recognized policies of other powers.

"If world peace is to mean simply sticking to things as they are," the prince was quoted as saying, "then the Japanese people are not satisfied; they are looking for the establishment of international justice."

And it would seem that they want themselves to be the judge of what constitutes international justice.

In other words, Japan has formulated a definite program of expansion irrespective of the interests of other nations, and is determined to see it carried out.

Its course in China represents justice in the Japanese conception, but the world has another word for it. And it may be that Tokyo will find that it is much easier to formulate than to execute programs when these come into conflict with the interest of countries able to defend themselves.

All Of Us

WHAT DO YOU DO WITH POWER

One way to check up on yourself and determine the kind of human being you are—and most of us would like to know about that—is to ask a simple question and to try to answer it honestly.

The question is: "How do you act when you have a little power given to you?"

You may reply that you have no power and that very few people in this world have any power.

But that is only partly true. All of us, at some time or other, manage to get hold of a little power. It may not last, it may not be very real, but we get it. . . . We hire somebody to do a little job. Or, more usually, we become parents and acquire power over children. Or we have power over animals. It's a rare person, indeed, that doesn't have a scrap of power in his possession occasionally.

And having power does something to people.

Sometimes they grow. Sometimes they shrink. Sometimes it makes them small and arrogant. Sometimes it makes them large and understanding. It may increase their pettiness, or deepen their decency. Acquiring more power, they may feel a greater sense of responsibility to the world, or it may enlarge their personal selfishness that grows as it feeds. Power may make a man a better human being or a much worse one, bring out the best in him, or strip a hidden meanness bare for all to see.

It's almost impossible to tell in advance what a little power will do to a man. Even the man himself cannot say what he might become, given a little power. Because, even though we do live so intimately with our own selves, we do not know ourselves nearly as well as we think we do. We lie to ourselves naturally. We praise ourselves and even criticize ourselves more than we should. We are blind to certain sections of our personalities, just as we are blind to parts of other people. But we all have a fairly accurate idea of what we would do, how we would act, if we had power. At least we know whether we want power or don't. Some men, a few, push it away from themselves. The others, most of us, want as much as we can possibly scrape together.

"So it's a fair question to ask, "How do you act when you have a little power?". . . And the answer you give yourself should be a most revealing one.

Hearing of several jokes told at his expense, he issued orders that any of his subjects passing on such stories would be punished.

One of these gags was to the effect that the little chancellor had broken his leg falling off a ladder while picking strawberries. Another was a report from Vienna that during the Socialist uprising there, Dollfuss paced up and down the floor all night under his bed.

A later slanderous statement was to the effect that the chancellor, attending an international conference at Geneva, had managed to get hold of everything he wanted except the doorknob.

ARE YOU A CIVIL SLACKER

Do you belong to civic bodies in your locality?

Are you active in your church—taking an interest in public schools—and taking part in public meetings for the benefit of your locality?

If you don't, you should.

More than likely you're not affiliated with any organization but you criticise all these bodies in nearly everything they do.

The reason is that you don't know what they are striving to achieve.

Most criticism is due to unfamiliarity with the aims and objects of those you censure for their public activity.

If you have not enough interest to become affiliated in organizations with your community, how can you expect your ideas to be incorporated in their programs?

You should realize that residence in certain section entails something more than just paying your bills and minding your own business.

As a part of your locality you are expected to take an interest in its worthwhile movements.

It is your duty as a good citizen.

Vision Big Problem At Senior High Shortly; Need Classroom Space

Foreseeing the gradual development of an acute housing problem for students at the Senior high school, New Castle's board of education, at the suggestion of a special committee named to study present conditions, has prescribed at least temporary remedies to take care of the problem next fall.

Action has been taken whereby the two Mahoning school portables will be taken to the Senior high grounds and in the place of portables at Mahoning a new room will be fitted out in the Woods building to the rear of the school.

A part of the Senior high investigation report follows:

"When it is understood that of the entire number of students entering our high school but 10 percent are financially able to extend their education beyond the high school course it becomes all the more necessary that they be given every opportunity possible to fit themselves to attain that most desired object in the social order—good citizenship—which should be the aim of our educational program.

"The capacity of our Senior high school, if expected to meet the demands that can properly and consistently be expected of a high school of the first class, should be materially increased; but because of the economic conditions with which the citizens have been confronted for the past several years the expenditure of any considerable sum of money at the present time is not advisable."

The committee reported, however, that it felt that the expenditure of a moderate sum to alleviate conditions would meet with the approval of the citizenry. The portable move was then recommended.

"That it is imperative that some action be taken to meet the situation for 1934-35 there is no room for argument," the report stressed.

"The present cafeteria," it went on, 'is entirely inadequate to meet the demands of a school of this size and the same can be said of the gymnasium which is in a condition entirely out of keeping with a Senior high school of the reputation of ours. When the time comes when it will be consistent and advisable to build an addition to the school the need of an adequate cafeteria and gymnasium should be kept in mind.

"If it is the intent to continue to concentrate our high school education facilities on the present location we believe it would be wise for the board to consider seriously the purchase of additional ground space if this can be done without any great outlay of money. The sooner this is done the better and your committee would so recommend.

The report admitted that few alterations can be made in the present building to relieve conditions. Additional quarters would seem the only remedy.

The present 20 room addition to the building was opened in 1928. Next fall the enrollment will exceed 2,000 students.

Say Job Openings Show An Increase

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—Exclusive of CWA work, twice as many job openings were listed at the state department office here in 1933 as were in 1932, according to a report made by the industrial research department of the University of Pennsylvania.

The figures revealed that 14,766 job openings were listed here in 1933 as compared with 7699 in 1932. Job openings for men constituted about three-fourths of the total in each year.

Puts Yellow Tag On A Wheel-Barrow

(International News Service)

KITTANNING, Pa., June 15.—"Even a wheelbarrow isn't immune in this drive for safety on streets, sidewalks and highways," Chief of Police Sam Densmore remarked as he wired a yellow tag to one such vehicle left on the sidewalk and notified its owner to appear at the Burgess' office for violation of the city's new one and a half hour parking law.

Slippery Rock Man Out Of Contest

SLIPPERY ROCK, Pa., June 15—Issuing a call for peace to warring factions in Butler county's torn Republican ranks, Prof. Clay C. Ruff of Slippery Rock State Teachers' College today withdrew from a hot contest for Republican county chairman.

Ruff's retirement left County Prothonotary Frank E. Clark, John Roy Gilleland and Roy C. Plaisted as leading contestants for the chairman's post.

CALLS ALL-BRAN NATIONAL NATURAL LAXATIVE

Delicious Cereal Checked His Constipation

Here is an unsolicited letter from Mr. Daniels:

"For many years I have been habitually constipated, and have used all sorts of laxatives. So, in fairness to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, I heartily claim it to be a most wonderful remedy for constipation.

"Need I tell you that I have long since ceased using laxatives? Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the National Natural Laxative. If it were used by every family in the United States for breakfast, we would have a much healthier race of people."—Mr. John Daniels, 1090 Third St., North Bergen, N. J.

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines and vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this food much pleasanter than risking pills and drugs? Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Vision Big Problem At Senior High Shortly; Need Classroom Space

Foreseeing the gradual development of an acute housing problem for students at the Senior high school, New Castle's board of education, at the suggestion of a special committee named to study present conditions, has prescribed at least temporary remedies to take care of the problem next fall.

Action has been taken whereby the two Mahoning school portables will be taken to the Senior high grounds and in the place of portables at Mahoning a new room will be fitted out in the Woods building to the rear of the school.

A part of the Senior high investigation report follows:

"When it is understood that of the entire number of students entering our high school but 10 percent are financially able to extend their education beyond the high school course it becomes all the more necessary that they be given every opportunity possible to fit themselves to attain that most desired object in the social order—good citizenship—which should be the aim of our educational program.

"The capacity of our Senior high school, if expected to meet the demands that can properly and consistently be expected of a high school of the first class, should be materially increased: but because of the economic conditions with which the citizens have been confronted for the past several years the expenditure of any considerable sum of money at the present time is not advisable."

The committee reported, however, that it felt that the expenditure of a moderate sum to alleviate conditions would meet with the approval of the citizenry. The portable move was then recommended.

"That it is imperative that some action be taken to meet the situation for 1934-35 there is no room for argument," the report stressed.

"The present cafeteria," it went on, 'is entirely inadequate to meet the demands of a school of this size and the same can be said of the gymnasium which is in a condition entirely out of keeping with a Senior high school of the reputation of ours. When the time comes when it will be consistent and advisable to build an addition to the school the need of an adequate cafeteria and gymnasium should be kept in mind

(International News Service)

KITTANNING, Pa., June 15.—"Even a wheelbarrow isn't immune in this drive for safety on streets, sidewalks and highways," Chief of Police Sam Densmore remarked as he wired a yellow tag to one such vehicle left on the sidewalk and notified its owner to appear at the Burgess' office for violation of the city's new one and a half hour parking law.

CALLS ALL-BRAN NATURAL LAXATIVE

Delicious Cereal Checked His Constipation

Here is an unsolicited letter from Mr. Daniels:

"For many years I have been habitually constipated, and have used all sorts of laxatives. So, in fairness to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, I heartily claim it to be a most wonderful remedy for constipation.

"Need I tell you that I have long since ceased using laxatives? Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the National Natural Laxative. If it were used by every family in the United States for breakfast, we would have a much healthier race of people."—Mr. John Daniels, 1090 Third St., North Bergen, N. J.

Tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines and vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this food much pleasanter than risking pills and drugs? Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"BON VOYAGE" PARTY FOR RECENT BRIDE

A most delightful event was the "bon voyage" party Thursday evening in the home of Alberta Davis, Johns street, when she entertained the members of the Teacher's Training class of the First Baptist church in honor of Mrs. Walter Cope, a recent bride, who was Florence Jenkins.

The appointments of the party very cleverly suggested splendid wishes for her voyage through her new married life as well as a safe journey to England, which she and her husband will take, sailing from New York June 20.

After an evening of music and games the guests were invited to the dining room where a large ship centered the table as a suggestion of her trip and at each place was a small pink umbrella with candles, which were suggestive of the shower, which was to follow. From each port hole of the ship there emerged a little roll of paper, which the bride removed and instructions were on those as to where she would find the ship's treasure chest. Upon collecting all orders and finding the places of concealment, Mrs. Cope had many lovely gifts of miscellaneous articles for her new home.

Miss Davis was assisted in the party arrangements by her mother, Mrs. Wallie Davis.

Half Hundred Girls To Enter Y.W.C.A. Camp

Season Will Get Underway Monday; Grade School Girls First

Camp East Brook—with a sparkling sea blue swimming pool and a corps of peppy well trained leaders—will have its official opening of the 1934 outdoor season Monday. The popular Y. W. C. A. retreat will open its arms to a half hundred young girls of the grade school age and will be an entertaining host for the next twelve days.

These girls will leave the camp on June 29 to make way for a Queen Esther conference which will be in session for one week. Then on July 9 and until July 20 the camp will be occupied by girls of the junior high school age. A third and shorter camp period has been scheduled from July 21 to 31 in order to provide for the overflow registrations.

Miss Marguerite White, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A., today announces that both the first and second camp periods are full to capacity and that there are only about eight places left in the July 21 to 31 period. Girls wishing to make reservations for that period should call the Y. W. C. A. today.

Girls going to camp Monday are: Marjorie Gordon, Nancy Gordon, Mary Ofterdinger, Dorothy Wallace, Caddie Wallace, Polly Butz, Elaine Keefer, Dorothy Mae Sturdy, Pattie Preston, Joanne Preston, Edice Norris, Eleanor Eckles, Claire Kohn, Paula Levine, Gloria Levin, Jane Wallis, Doris Bennett, Phyllis Ferver, Roberta Street, Pat Christman, Eleanor Berry, Nancy Jane Stitzinger, Marian Waddington, Margaret Joyce Basset, Jean Nunn, Anne Meyers, Carol Henderson, Marjorie Fischer, Peggy Carlson, Lenora Floan, Jean West, Martha Chamberlain, Georgia Fowland, Averil Adams, Phyllis Adams, Louise Gayle, Hazel Anne Mark, Mary McCarthy, Mollie Cullifford, Mary Lou Fenati, Donna Jane Lee, Georgiana Truby, Patricia Anne Taylor, Helen Connery, Eleanor Smith, Ruth Markley and Jessie Ofterdinger.

The girls are asked to arrive not earlier than 1:00 p. m. The camp counselors will be there on Sunday in preparation for the influx of campers. The program of activities is a varied one this year and is designed to keep the girls interested every hour of the day. It will include swimming, hiking, camp fires, dramatics, rhythm band, singing, sports, handcraft and numerousi specal events such as picnics, ceremonials and parties.

COURT RULES ON WAR INSURANCE

(International News Service)

DENVER—The United States circuit court of appeals here handed down a decision in the case of William P. McShane, a World war veteran, which attorneys beleive will have a far-reaching effect on future war risk insurance cases.

The court ruled against McShane's estate, which had sued to collect $10,000 on his war risk policy. The opinion, written by Judge Robert E. Lewis, held that only competent medical testimony was acceptable in determining whether McShane was permanently and totally disabled in 1919 before premiums on his policy had lapsed.

"It is observed that eight years elapsed between McShane's discharge in 1919 and his death in 1927," the opinion asserted. "Presumptively, he did not believe himself to be totally and permanently disabled in March, 1919, or else he would have sued on the policy."

HANK'S 'LUCK' IS ALL HARD

(International News Service)

ELDORA, Ia., June 15.—Eight-year-old Hank Shafer, heretofore dubbed "lucky Hank", thinks it should be "Hard Luck Hank", instead.

Hank gained local fame by having lived through 18 accidents which might have proved fatal in the last 30 years.

He survived a premature Fourth of July cannon explosion in which he lost an arm and an eye, fires, horse-runaways, auto smashups, two bolts of lightning which struck him during thunderstorms, exposure to cold and threats of drowning.

His latest accident was a slight fall at his home—and he suffered a broken arm.

"That was the biggest thrill of all," she said. "It has been a long time since a husky young man put his arms around me."

The program of activities is a varied one this year and is designed to keep the girls interested every hour of the day. It will include swimming, hiking, camp fires, dramatics, rhythm band, singng, sports, handcraft and numerousi specal events such as picnics, ceremonials and parties.

COURT RULES ON WAR INSURANCE

(International News Service)

DENVER—The United States circuit court of appeals here handed down a decision in the case of William P. McShane, a World war veteran, which attorneys beleive will have a far-reaching effect on future war risk insurance cases.

The court ruled against McShane's estate, which had sued to collect $10,000 on his war risk policy. The opinion, written by Judge Robert E. Lewis, held that only competent medical testimony was acceptable in determining whether McShane was permanently and totally disabled in 1919 before premiums on his policy had lapsed.

"It is observed that eight years elapsed between McShane's discharge in 1919 and his death in 1927," the opinion asserted. "Presumptively, he did not believe himself to be totally and permanently disabled in March, 1919, or else he would have sued on the policy."

HANK'S 'LUCK' IS ALL HARD

(International News Service)

ELDORA, Ia., June 15.—Eight-year-old Hank Shafer, heretofore dubbed "lucky Hank", thinks it should be "Hard Luck Hank", instead.

Hank gained local fame by having lived through 18 accidents which might have proved fatal in the last 30 years.

He survived a premature Fourth of July cannon explosion in which he lost an arm and an eye, fires, horse-runaways, auto smashups, two bolts of lightning which struck him during thunderstorms, exposure to cold and threats of drowning.

His latest accident was a slight fall at his home—and he suffered a broken arm.

CINCINNATI, O., June 15.—Mrs. Mary Rees, 88-year-old Cincinnati invalid, has had her "big thrill".

For 30 years she has been confined to a cot in an upstairs room of her home. Then, because a fire broke out on the roof of the house, she made a surprise trip downstairs, her first in three decades.

Her grandson-in-law, Jacob H. Klein Jr., rushed upstairs and carried her to safety just as a half dozen fire companies arrived.

"That was the biggest thrill of all," she said. "It has been a long time since a husky young man put his arms around me."

GROUNDHOG "MOTHERS" FAMILY OF 5 SKUNKS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 9—Unaware of their parental change, five tiny "perfumery" kittens are contentedly eating bread and milk with a pet groundhog—adopted by "Bud" Varndell, 11 and his sister, Annabelle, 12 two little mountaineers near here.

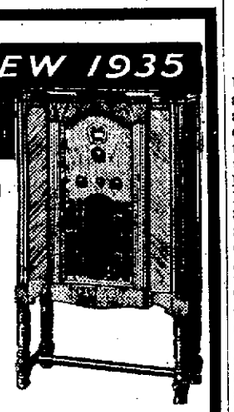

Less than a week old, the five baby skunks have been given cozy, safe quarters by the children, who are taking extreme care to keep them in a genial mood, while "Ma" skunk absent during the "kidnaping" mothers two others left in the nest and wonders about the rest of her brood.

Like a faithful dog, the groundhog follows "Bud" who has become deeply attached to his six week's old pet.

Evidence of a "live" hole during a groundhog hunt led the two children to the skunks.

Regulatory Bill For Oil Industry Is Being Held Up

Secretary Ickes Says That Flood Of "Hot" Oil Will Sweep Through Country

STATE QUOTAS TO BE EXCEEDED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A flood of "hot" oil—oil produced in excess of state quotas—will sweep the country as the result of the action of the house interstate commerce committee in forestalling a vote on the administration's oil production regulatory bill at this session of congress, Secretary of the Interior Ickes predicted today.

A secondary result will be a sharp drop in prices, a condition officials said the industry is trying to escape and which the proposed bill was designed to eliminate. Ickes said the committee has "created a very dangerous situation" and has placed him, as federal oil administrator, in an almost hopeless task of trying to keep production within demands and thereby stabilize the long-depressed industry.

Rainey Disapproves.

President Roosevelt and Ickes have asked congress to enact the measure but Speaker Rainey said he will not permit Rep. Disney (D) of Oklahoma, author of the bill, to bring it to a vote in the house under suspension of the rules—the only way it can reach the house before adjournment. Rainey said this after the house committee refused to make a favorable report on the bill.

Ickes wanted the measure's authority to stipulate production quotas to counteract the recent court action in favor of east Texas oil producers in defiance of the oil administration.

No Protection.

"As it is now we have no protection at all," Ickes charged.

He cited a stay of court action granted the east Texas producers against a recent circuit court decision which had upheld the oil administration. This stay, Ickes contends, will give the oil men ample time to ship their oil, regardless of his efforts.

"They are running a lot of hot oil from Texas now," he complained. "The practical effect of the stay is they can continue to run this oil."

Ickes charged "a lack of cooperation on the part of some state officials," and complained that some courts show a tendency to grant injunctions against his orders. He declared the bill had the support of 95 per cent of the oil industry, and that presidential sentiment favoring its adoption was well known.

Parole Swindler On Agreement To Make Restitution

Man Pleads Guilty To Charges Of Securing Money From Mercer County People

MERCER, Pa., June 15.— John Ujhazi, captured in Pittsburgh, Pa., after a long search by Officers Eben and Thomas pleaded guilty to the charge of swindling and was sentenced by Judge J. A. McLaughry to two to four years in the Allegheny County Workhouse. Upon his agreement to pay $600 down and $50 a month until he had completed a payment of $2500 to the three county victims he had swindled the sentence was suspended and he was paroled in charge of Rev. W. T. K. Thompson, county parole officer. He is alleged to have swindled Julia Lado, Sharpsville, out of $1000, John and Anna Halam, Sharon, $1,000 and Pete Kudelko, West Salem, $500. In the event of default of one payment he is to be brought in and sent to the workhouse. Eight hundred dollars found in his possession when arrested was turned over to Jacob Kovaloki of Freeport, Ohio, who identified the money as a part of the $1646 that Ujhazi and Mike Evanovich had secured from him. Evanovich is now doing time in an Ohio prison.

Following the hearing state police took Ujhazi to Butler. Detainers had been lodged against him while in jail here. One from Indiana county, one from Doylestown, and a third from Cadiz, Ohio.

Rainey Disapproves.

President Roosevelt and Ickes have asked congress to enact the measure but Speaker Rainey said he will not permit Rep. Disbney (D) of Oklahoma, author of the bill, to bring it to a vote in the house under suspension of the rules—the only way it can reach the house before adjournment. Rainey said this after the house committee refused to make a favorable report on the bill.

Ickes wanted the measure's authority to stipulate production quotas to counteract the recent court action in favor of east Texas oil producers in defiance of the oil administration.

No Protection.

"As it is now we have no protection at all," Ickes charged.

He cited a stay of court action granted the east Texas producers against a recent circuit court decision which had upheld the oil administration. This stay, Ickes contends, will give the oil men ample time to ship their oil, regardless of his efforts.

"They are running a lot of hot oil from Texas now," he complained. "The practical effect of the stay is they can continue to run this oil."

Ickes charged "a lack of cooperation on the part of some state officials," and complained that some courts show a tendency to grant injunctions against his orders. He declared the bill had the support of 95 per cent of the oil industry, and that presidential sentiment favoring its adoption was well known.

Parole Swindler On Agreement To Make Restitution

Man Pleads Guilty To Charges Of Securing Money From Mercer County People

MERCER, Pa., June 15.— John Ujhazi, captured in Pittsburgh, Pa., after a long search by Officers Eben and Thomas pleaded guilty to the charge of swindling and was sentenced by Judge J. A. McLaughry to two to four years in the Allegheny County Workhouse. Upon his agreement to pay $600 down and $50 a month until he had completed a payment of $2500 to the three county victims he had swindled the sentence was suspended and he was paroled in charge of Rev. W. T. K. Thompson, county parole officer. He is alleged to have swindled Julia Lado, Sharpsville, out of $1000, John and Anna Halam, Sharon, $1,000 and Pete Kudelko, West Salem, $500. In the event of default of one payment he is to be brought in and sent to the workhouse. Eight hundred dollars found in his possession when arrested was turned over to Jacob Kovaloki of Freeport, Ohio, who identified the money as a part of the $1646 that Ujhazi and Mike Evanovich had secured from him. Evanovich is now doing time in an Ohio prison.

Following the hearing state police took Ujhazi to Butler. Detainers had been lodged against him while in jail here. One from Indiana county, one from Doylestown, and a third from Cadiz, Ohio.

Mayne, Haven Assist In Raids

Three Alleged Disorderly Houses Raided By City Police

City police headed by Mayor Mayne and Chief Haven last night conducted simultaneous raids on three disorderly houses. As a result the city coffers was enriched. In all but one place liquor was found, and in the place that no liquor was confiscated the police saw it being dumped, they report.

Those arrested follow:

Jennie Isaac, 12 West Reynolds street; charged with being the proprietress; released on $50.00 forfeit; failed to appear for hearing today in police court.

Anna Bishara, 16 West Reynolds street; charged with being the proprietress; released on $20.00 forfeit; failed to appear for hearing today in police court.

Mary Ciambotti, rear 512 South Jefferson street; charged with being the proprietress; released on $25.00 forfeit; failed to appear for hearing today in police court.

Four visitors in the Issacs house were charged with being visitors. One of them was released last night on a forfeit of five dollars. He failed to appear for a hearing today. Three other visitors who spent the night in jail were discharged by Mayor Mayne in police court this morning.

The officers party consisted of Mayor Mayne, Chief Haven, Lieutenant Criswell, Detective Chief McMullen, Detective Horner, Patrolman Hanna and Police Matron McKibben.

GROUNDHOG "MOTHERS" FAMILY OF 5 SKUNKS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 9—Unaware of their parental change, five tiny "perfumery" kittens are contentedly eating bread and milk with a pet groundhog—adopted by "Bud" Varndell, 11 and his sister, Annabelle, 12 two little mountaineers near here.

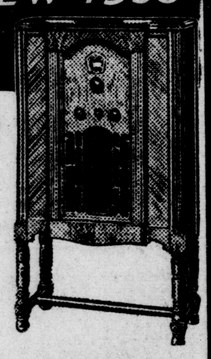

Less than a week old, the five baby skunks have been given cozy, safe quarters by the children, who are taking extreme care to keep them in a genial mood, while "Ma" skunk absent during the "kidnapping" mothers two others left in the nest and wonders about the rest of her brood.

Like a faithful dog, the groundhog follows "Bud" who has become deeply attached to his six week's old pet.

Evidence of a "live" hole during a groundhog hunt led the two children to the skunks.

Regulatory Bill For Oil Industry Is Being Held Up

Secretary Ickes Says That Flood Of "Hot" Oil Will Sweep Through Country

STATE QUOTAS TO BE EXCEEDED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A flood of "hot" oil—oil produced in excess of state quotas—will sweep the country as the result of the action of the house interstate commerce committee in forestalling a vote on the administration's oil production regulatory bill at this session of congress, Secretary of the Interior Ickes predicted today.

A secondary result will be a sharp drop in prices, a condition officials said the industry is trying to escape and which the proposed bill was designed to eliminate. Ickes said the committee has "created a very dangerous situation" and has placed him, as federal oil administrator, in an almost hopeless task of trying to keep production within demands and thereby stabilize the long-depressed industry.

Rainey Disapproves.

President Roosevelt and Ickes have asked congress to enact the measure but Speaker Rainey said he will not permit Rep. Dishney (D) of Oklahoma, author of the bill, to bring it to a vote in the house under suspension of the rules—the only way it can reach the house before adjournment. Rainey said this after the house committee refused to make a favorable report on the bill.

Ickes wanted the measure's authority to stipulate production quotas to counteract the recent court action in favor of east Texas oil producers in defiance of the oil administration.

No Protection.

"As it is now we have no protection at all," Ickes charged.

He cited a stay of court action granted the east Texas producers against a recent circuit court decision which had upheld the oil administration. This stay, Ickes contends, will give the oil men ample time to ship their oil, regardless of his efforts.

"They are running a lot of hot oil from Texas now," he complained. "The practical effect of the stay is they can continue to run this oil."

Ickes charged "a lack of cooperation on the part of some state officials," and complained that some courts show a tendency to grant injunctions against his orders. He declared the bill had the support of 95 per cent of the oil industry, and that presidential sentiment favoring its adoption was well known.

An Important Meeting.
One War Scare Dies.
Crawling Is Recommended.
Our Old, Unsettled Earth.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HITLER AND MUSSOLINI met Thursday for a talk, each flying to meet the other near Venice, Hitler from Berlin, Mussolini from Rome. It was as interesting a meeting as any that has happened since Francis the First of France went to meet Henry the Eighth in England on the "field of the cloth of gold," on the French side of the channel, and more important than that meeting.

Henry and Francis are said to have indulged in wrestling bouts. Hitler and Mussolini will do the same, only mental, not physical wrestling.

The French and the English governments would like to know exactly what the two dictators, the original and the copy, say to each other.

The meeting may be historical and in its results as important as the meeting between Attila and the Pope, Leo the First, near fifteen hundred years ago, when the Pope persuaded the Asiatic barbarian to cross the Alps and leave Rome in peace.

THE JAPANESE vice consul at Nanking disappeared mysteriously, was sought in vain. Japan decided that China had murdered him for political reasons, made threats, searched Chinese homes, sent war tanks rumbling through Shanghai streets and sent warships as a "warning without words." The vice consul had vanished, and, of course, he must be murdered.

Yesterday the vice consul, Eimei Kuramoto, was found in a graveyard sitting beside an ancient tomb of the Ming dynasty, hungry, unkempt, gloomy. Chinese authorities say he told them that he had gone to the cemetery to commit suicide "because he had failed to achieve promotion in the Japanese consular service." F hoped wolves would eat him, but they did not, although he saw wolves amid the dismal tombs.

He changed his mind about committing suicide when he became very hungry. That gave him an interest in life.

One war scare is averted. Kuramoto, of the Ming Tombs, will probably apologize to China for causing so much trouble. The sensitive Japanese do not like to be made ridiculous.

PERFECTLY SOLEMN doctors, in Cleveland, say "prospective mothers" can escape one of the evils of childbirth, "infection of the tract below the kidneys," by "spending about an hour a day on their hands and knees, crawling instead of walking from one place to another."

According to evolutionists, there is nothing surprising about this. Man was originally a creature walking on his hands and knes, his ribs arranged to hold up his interior apparatus, heart, liver, etc., the strong muscles of his abdomen planned to hold up his intestines. Now, "artificially" he walks on two legs, and everything sags down, which is harmful, especially for "prospective mothers."

ALTHOUGH MORE than one thousand million years old, our earth seems unable to "settle down" definitely. Earthquakes were felt over a territory of forty-seven thousand square miles in the Argentine, with hail and rain storms of violence unprecedented. In one place twenty-five inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours, more rain in one day than falls in many of our states in a whole year.

THE SADDEST news tells that Mrs. Ovila Dionne, mother of the interesting little Canadian girl quintuplets, is in a serious condition, may not live. The five little daughters are thriving, have gained several ounces, and are eighteen days old. Mothers have the hard part of life.

WONDERFUL IS the universe with its forces and counter-forces balancing each other. For instance, the power of gravitation which would draw all matter into one solid lump, is offset by radio-gravity, which disrupts atoms, throwing electrons into infinite space.

Doctors tell you now that the hormones, strange product of your body's mysterious glands, "chemical messengers" flying through your body, regulating and stimulating every function up to the minute of your death, are controlled, held in check, by "anti-hormones," which act as "stabilizers," controlling the intense activity of the "rushing hormones."

THE BIBLE'S description of your physical make-up, "fearfully and wonderfully made," puts it mildly.

Doctors are just beginning to understand, and incompletely to control, stimulate or retard the action of the strange glands that produce the chemical agents that regulate and control the body.

LLOYD GEORGE, now 71 years old, is ill, with a severe chill, one of the worst signs as old age comes on.

If he should die the British might realize what they owe him, namely, the fact that King George and not some son of the German Kaiser is sitting on the British throne.

England should build some day to Lloyd George and Clemenceau combined, a monument as high as the Eiffel Tower. To those two old men she owes her freedom from Prussian rule.

OUR SECRETARY OF STATE, Mr. Hull, is said to have suggested to England:

"If you won't pay us money, why don't you pay in goods?"

England is supposed to have replied:

"No, we really could not think of that."

A certain English worker, on the dole for a long time, remarked:

"I eats well, I sleeps well, and I feels well, but when they talk about work I comes all over of a tremble."

Good old John Bull acts similarly when you talk to him about paying. The President, it is understood, would not accept payment in goods only; part cash would be demanded.

MICHAEL SPISAK of New York, aged 58, had a "common law wife," Anna, aged 37, and they had a daughter aged 9. Anna left him, taking the daughter, and went to live with another "common law husband." The baby son in this new household is 8 months old. Spisak shot and killed the mother, Anna, and shot her young son in the head. Police who shot and killed him say that, according to their knowledge of human nature, his shooting of Anna was easily explained, but shooting the baby is unusual.

MANY A householder will carefully avoid killing a spider, saying "a spider in the house means good luck." That is not always so. One man in the Middle West, bitten by a "black widow" spider, had his throat muscles paralyzed and was in danger of death. In Mississippi, a year-old child bitten by a black spider last Friday, died four days later.

RIDER FATALLY INJURED

ALTOONA, Pa., June 15—Fred H. Anderson, 33, Bay City, Mich., manufacturer, died from a fractured skull suffered when the horse upon which he was riding, fell and threw him, according to a coroner's report Thursday.

Anderson had come from Cleveland to Bedford, near here, for a vacation.

An Important Meeting.
One War Scare Dies.
Crawling Is Recommended.
Our Old, Unsettled Earth.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HITLER AND MUSSOLINI met Thursday for a talk, each flying to meet the other near Venice, Hitler from Berlin, Mussolini from Rome. It was as interesting a meeting as any that has happened since Francis the First of France went to meet Henry the Eighth in England on the "field of the cloth of gold," on the French side of the channel, and more important than that meeting.

Henry and Francis are said to have indulged in wrestling bouts. Hitler and Mussolini will do the same, only mental, not physical wrestling.

The French and the English governments would like to know exactly what the two dictators, the original and the copy, say to each other.

The meeting may be historical and in its results as important as the meeting between Attila and the Pope, Leo the First, near fifteen hundred years ago, when the Pope persuaded the Asiatic barbarian to cross the Alps and leave Rome in peace.

THE JAPANESE vice consul at Nanking disappeared mysteriously, was sought in vain. Japan decided that China had murdered him for political reasons, made threats, searched Chinese homes, sent war tanks rumbling through Shanghai streets and sent warships as a "warning without words." The vice consul had vanished, and, of course, he must be murdered.

Yesterday the vice consul, Eimei Kuramoto, was found in a graveyard sitting beside an ancient tomb of the Ming dynasty, hungry, unkempt, gloomy. Chinese authorities say he told them that he had gone to the cemetery to commit suicide "because he had failed to achieve promotion in the Japanese consular service." He hoped wolves would eat him, but they did not, although he saw wolves amid the dismal tombs.

He changed his mind about committing suicide when he became very hungry. That gave him an interest in life.

One war scare is averted. Kuramoto, of the Ming Tombs, will probably apologize to China for causing so much trouble. The sensitive Japanese do not like to be made ridiculous.

PERFECTLY SOLEMN doctors, in Cleveland, say "prospective mothers" can escape one of the evils of childbirth, "infection of the tract below the kidneys," by "spending about an hour a day on their hands and knees, crawling instead of walking from one place to another."

According to evolutionists, there is nothing surprising about this. Man was originally a creature walking on his hands and knes, his ribs arranged to hold up his interior apparatus, heart, liver, etc., the strong muscles of his abdomen planned to hold up his intestines. Now, "artificially" he walks on two legs, and everything sags down, which is harmful, especially for "prospective mothers."

ALTHOUGH MORE than one thousand million years old, our earth seems unable to "settle down" definitely. Earthquakes were felt over a territory of forty-seven thousand square miles in the Argentine, with hail and rain storms of violence unprecedented. In one place twenty-five inches of rain fell in twenty-four hours, more rain in one day than falls in many of our states in a whole year.

THE SADDEST news tells that Mrs. Ovila Dionne, mother of the interesting little Canadian girl quintuplets, is in a serious condition, may not live. The five little daughters are thriving, have gained several ounces, and are eighteen days old. Mothers have the hard part of life.

WONDERFUL IS the universe with its forces and counter-forces balancing each other. For instance, the power of gravitation which would draw all matter into one solid lump, is offset by radio-gravity, which disrupts atoms, throwing electrons into infinite space.

Doctors tell you now that the hormones, strange product of your body's mysterious glands, "chemical messengers" flying through your body, regulating and stimulating every function up to the minute of your death, are controlled, held in check, by "anti-hormones," which act as "stabilizers," controlling the intense activity of the "rushing hormones."

THE BIBLE'S description of your physical make-up, "fearfully and wonderfully made," puts it mildly.

Doctors are just beginning to understand, and incompletely to control, stimulate or retard the action of the strange glands that produce the chemical agents that regulate and control the body.

LLOYD GEORGE, now 71 years old, is ill, with a severe chill, one of the worst signs as old age comes on.

If he should die the British might realize what they owe him, namely, the fact that King George and not some son of the German Kaiser is sitting on the British throne.

England should build some day to Lloyd George and Clemenceau combined, a monument as high as the Eiffel Tower. To those two old men she owes her freedom from Prussian rule.

OUR SECRETARY OF STATE, Mr. Hull, is said to have suggested to England:

"If you won't pay us money, why don't you pay in goods?"

England is supposed to have replied:

"No, we really could not think of that."

A certain English worker, on the dole for a long time, remarked:

"I eats well, I sleeps well, and I feels well, but when they talk about work I comes all over of a tremble."

Good old John Bull acts similarly when you talk to him about paying. The President, it is understood, would not accept payment in goods only; part cash would be demanded.

MICHAEL SPISAK of New York, aged 58, had a "common law wife," Anna, aged 37, and they had a daughter aged 9. Anna left him, taking the daughter, and went to live with another "common law husband." The baby son in this new household is 8 months old. Spisak shot and killed the mother, Anna, and shot her young son in the head. Police who shot and killed him say that, according to their knowledge of human nature, his shooting of Anna was easily explained, but shooting the baby is unusual.

MANY A householder will carefully avoid killing a spider, saying "a spider in the house means good luck." That is not always so. One man in the Middle West, bitten by a "black widow" spider, had his throat muscles paralyzed and was in danger of death. In Mississippi, a year-old child bitten by a black spider last Friday, died four days later.

Tubular Bridge Stands Up Well

Structure Eighty-Five Years Old Is Still Rendering Good Service

(International News Service)

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., June 9—For nearly 85 years, the first cast-iron tubular bridge ever built in America has carried national pike traffic over Dunlop Creek, near here.

The stage coaches and Conestago wagons that once rumbled over the bridge carrying pioneers to the distant west are replaced now by a constant stream of automobiles and trucks that race along the historic highway, built when the nation was young.

Although the old span now bears heavier loads than were ever dreamed of by the two United States army engineers who designed and built it, the bridge is still regarded as safe by modern engineers.

"If given a good coat of paint it ought to last 100 years more" a local resident says.

Homestead Couple Awarded $20,000

Pittsburgh Couple Given Damages By Jury Verdict Against Drug Company

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, June 15.—Alfred M. King and his wife, Myrtle L., of Homestead, were victors today with a jury verdict of $20,000 damages awarded them late yesterday in their suit against the Royal Manufacturing Company, Duquesne.

Charging that the Airport Pharmacy here sold her "carbolic acid" in a bottle labeled, and which she purchased for "essence of peppermint" September 1, 1931, Mrs. King asked $50,000 and her husband $10,000 damages from the Duquesne firm, alleged to have delivered the drug.

Not feeling well September 16 of that month, it was testified, Mrs. King mixed a teaspoonful of the contents of the bottle in water and drank it. Almost immediately, she felt a burning sensation in her stomach. Examinations showed the contents of the bottle to be carbolic acid. It was alleged.

Prisoner Probe Brought To End

Judge Frank E. Reader Expected To Make Public Finding Of Probe Today

(International News Service)

BEAVER, Pa., June 15.— Judge Frank E. Reader was expected to make public today the report of a special committee which probed the release of John Oriol, Ambridge arson convict, from Beaver county jail and his supposed political activity during the primary campaign last month.

Investigation of the release was conducted by former Judge George A. Baldwin and Leonard L. Ewing. Both were named by the court to learn why the prisoner had been freed from jail without an order from the jurist.

Serving a two to ten year term, Oriol was freed from jail in May and permitted to remain at liberty until the day of the primary election, it was said in Judge Reader's order for a probe.

Pleads Guilty As Jury Disagrees

WORCESTER, Mass.—For eight hours, a Worcester County grand jury wrestled with a verdict in the case of John Grimley, of Leominster, who had violated the liquor laws prior to repeal of prohibition, but whose case had just reached disposal.

Then they reported to Judge Alan G. Butterick that they could not reach a cerdict. Hardly had the report been made when Grimley stepped to the bar and pleaded guilty. Judge Butterick placed the case on file. It was the last case of its kind on the docket under the old liquor laws.

Offer Ten Rules For Happiness To June Brides

1. Trust your happiness, and remember that love grows with each year of married life.
2. Keep up your appearance.
3. Cultivate interests in common with your husband.
4. Hold to faith and courage.
5. Don't be so selfish and egotistical as to believe that you, alone, can make him happy.
6. Live within your income.
7. Find what your husband likes to do and do it. And always be polite to him.
8. Don't be possessive.
9. Don't discuss your troubles with outsiders.
10. Be patient, be game, and always have the pluck to fight it out.

Benard, now 70 years old, piloted the special train used by President Wilson on his return to Washington after he arrived from Europe.

Structure Eighty-Five Years Old Is Still Rendering Good Service

(International News Service)

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., June 9—For nearly 85 years, the first cast-iron tubular bridge ever built in America has carried national pike traffic over Dunlop Creek, near here.

The stage coaches and Conestago wagons that once rumbled over the bridge carrying pioneers to the distant west are replaced now by a constant stream of automobiles and trucks that race along the historic highway, built when the nation was young.

Although the old span now bears heavier loads than were ever dreamed of by the two United States army engineers who designed and built it, the bridge is still regarded as safe by modern engineers.

"If given a good coat of paint it ought to last 100 years more" a local resident says.

The construction of the bridge according to old records, was supervised by George W. Cass, a lieutenant in the United States army, from designs made by Capt. Richard Delafield, another army engineer. Cass later resigned from the army and became a merchant here.

CAN'T FLOOD U. S. MARKETS IN MOVE

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Europe will not be permitted to flood the United States with competitive goods in order to obtain cash with which to pay the ten billion dollars owed American taxpayers.

This was made plain today in authoritative quarters, where it was said America's willingness to consider partial payment of the European debts in goods and services does not mean this government intends to open American markets to foreign competitive goods in order that the debtors may accumulate a dollar balance here with which to make payments.

That, it was pointed out, would be merely a back-door method of having American consumers give Europe the money with which to pay its debts to this country.

The only payment in kind this country is likely to consider accepting would be goods which are chiefly of a non-competitive nature and of which this country purchases a considerable quantity abroad, such as British rubber and tin, French perfumes and wines, and German dyes and chemicals.

This government's action in offering to consider payment in "kind" proposals was not intended as an offer to reduce Europe's debts but rather to grant easier methods of payments if the debtors should show a disposition to abide by their obligations, authoritative sources said.

The offer was intended chiefly to overcome the difficulties of exchange transfer so that the debtors could meet their obligations without making large transfer payments in cash. The debtors, especially Britain, have asserted the transfer of large sums of debts payments in cash from Europe to the United States at the present time would disrupt foreign exchange markets and cause their own currencies to decline in relation to the dollar.

WHY POLICE WERE WEDDING GUESTS

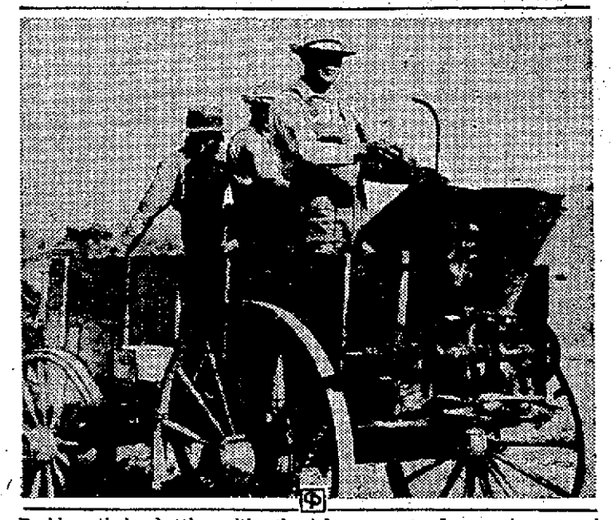

(International News Service)

TARENTUM, Pa., June 15.—Rumors that the bride's mother might try to interfere explained the presence of police on guard at the recent church wedding of Miss Marie Dayton, 19, and Ross Miller, both of Hays.

Police also were on hand at the reception which followed in the groom's home.

FARMERS BATTLE GRASSHOPPERS

Besides their battle with the drouth, farmers of Iowa and other middle western states are now engaged in fighting another enemy which threatens to destroy their crops—the grasshopper. This photo shows farmers of Woodbury county, Iowa, using an endgate seeder to spread a poison mixture on the ground to kill the grasshoppers. The poison is dropped on the ground during the early morning hours because the grasshoppers feed at that time.

Helping Farmers To Get More From Land

Four Men Who Have Done Much In State In Way Of Scientific Methods

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—Four men are devoting their lives to the advancement of scietntific methods of agriculture among Pennsylvania farmers.

They are Floyd S. Bucher, of Lancaster; David K. Sloan, of Williamsport; and Charles S. Adams, of Reading, all county farm agents; and Milton S. McDowell, director of the agricultural extension service at the Pennsylvania State College.

Each man has been active for more than 20 years in helping Pennsylvania's tillers of the soil grow better field crops and vegetables, raise more perfect fruit, and breed prize-winning livestock. For all of them this has been their only job since their graduation from college several years before the world war.

McDowell, who entered the service in 1910, has been director of the extension staff since 1912 and ranks high among the men who hold similar positions at other agricultural institutions in the country.

Bucher was appointed county agent in his home county of Lancaster, March 10, 1913, and has served continuously in that area. Sloan went to work just five days later, March 15, 1913, as county agent in the area adjoining the Pennsylvania railroad between Williamsport and Elmira, N. Y., with headquarters at Canton. Later he went to Towanda as Bradford county agent and finally, on March 15, 1929, was transferred to Williamsport in Lycoming county. Adams has been county agent in Berks county since early in 1914.

Farmers in Saxony and Anhalt, Germany, have been notified that if they fail to work their land properly their names will be publicly displayed on "black lists".

Prepared medicine exported from France last year weighed 10,200 tons.

Trachoma Is Gradually Coming Under The Control Of Science

(International News Service)

PARIS, June 15.—Trachoma, the dreaded eye disease, responsible for such a large part of blindness, is gradually coming under the control of science. This conviction was expressed here by some of the world's leading opthalmologists during recent sessions of the International Association for the Prevention of Blindness and the International Association against Trachoma.

Two of the leading speakers at the convention were Dr. F. Park Lewis of Buffalo and Lewis Hr. Carris, managing director of the association who represented the United States.

The delegates heard a report prepared by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings in which it was declared that trachoma has almost disappeared from the United States except for certain mountainous districts where living conditions are still bad.

During the course of the convention the Leslie Dana gold medal was presented to Dr. F. de Lapersonne, noted French opthalmologist.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION TO OPEN

Christian Endeavor members of the Lawrence county union are looking forward to July 9 when the 16th biennial convention will open at Hershey, Pa. It will close July 13.

Speakers will include Prof. Homer A. Rodeheaver, of Winona Lake, Ind., who was in New Castle earlier this year, and Dr. Ralph Hutchinson, president of W. and J. college, also known here.

King George of Greece sat in the distinguished strangers' gallery of the British House of Commons during a recent debate.

You never tasted such Strawberry Jam!

Discover for yourself this flavor secret, and start your strawberry jam today; it's so easy with Certo!

WHAT'S better than plenty of good home-made strawberry jam when winter months roll around? You can't put up too much of it!

So take a tip—as soon as strawberry specials come to town, go to your grocer and stock up on berries, Certo and sugar. Then follow the Certo recipe given here for best results with 1934 berries.

You get truly marvelous strawberry jam. Such fine true-fruit flavor! Many women will put up double the usual amount this year with strawberries so inexpensive and delicious.

When you use Certo you will need to boil your jellies or jams only a few minutes. Hence the fruit juice does not boil away, and you never get that "boiled-down" taste that comes with long, tedious boiling. Often you get half again more jam. And of course you save lots of time and trouble, too.

Certo—the pure fruit pectin—is sold by all grocers. It is a product of General Foods.

HOW TO MAKE THE BEST STRAWBERRY JAM

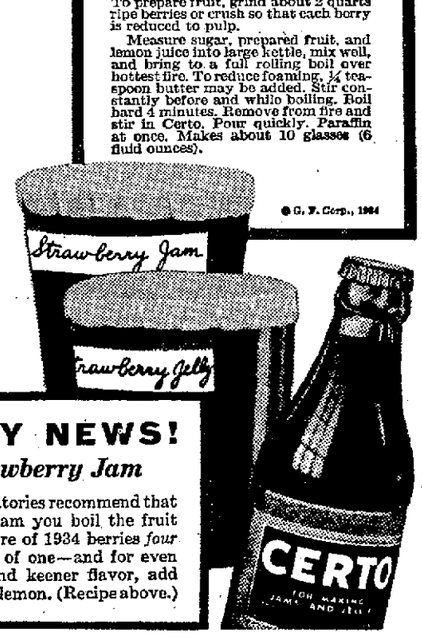

Certo Laboratories report this recipe best for use with 1934 berries. See also Special Strawberry News below.

4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar. Juice of ½ lemon
½ bottle Certo

To prepare fruit, grind about 2 quarts ripe berries or crush so that each berry is reduced to pulp.

Measure sugar, prepared fruit, and lemon juice into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 4 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in Certo. Pour quickly. Paraffin at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces).

Read carefully before making Strawberry Jam

1934 will be a good strawberry year. Plan to start your Certo jam cupboard with the first luscious strawberries. This year we've had unusual weather conditions and fruits may vary more widely than usual in moisture content.

The Certo laboratories recommend that for strawberry jam you boil the fruit and sugar mixture of 1934 berries four minutes instead of one—and for even better results and keener flavor, add the juice of half a lemon. (Recipe above.)

Debt Payment Plan Modified

Strings Attached To Proposal For War Debt Payment In Goods

CAN'T FLOOD U. S. MARKETS IN MOVE

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Europe will not be permitted to flood the United States with competitive goods in order to obtain cash with which to pay the ten billion dollars owed American taxpayers.

This was made plain today in authoritative quarters, where it was said America's willingness to consider partial payment of the European debts in goods and services does not mean this government intends to open American markets to foreign competitive goods in order that the debtors may accumulate a dollar balance here with which to make payments.

That, it was pointed out, would be merely a back-door method of having American consumers give Europe the money with which to pay its debts to this country.

The only payment in kind this country is likely to consider accepting would be goods which are chiefly of a non-competitive nature and of which this country purchases a considerable quantity abroad, such as British rubber and tin. French perfumes and wines, and German dyes and chemicals.

This government's action in offering to consider payment in "kind" proposals was not intended as an offer to reduce Europe's debts but rather to grant easier methods of payments if the debtors should show a disposition to abide by their obligations, authoritative sources said.

The offer was intended chiefly to overcome the difficulties of exchange transfer so that the debtors could meet their obligations without making large transfer payments in cash. The debtors, especially Britain, have asserted the transfer of large sums of debts payments in cash from Europe to the United States at the present time would disrupt foreign exchange markets and cause their own currencies to decline in relation to the dollar.

FARMERS BATTLE GRASSHOPPERS

Besides their battle with the drouth, farmers of Iowa and other middle western states are now engaged in fighting another enemy which threatens to destroy their crops—the grasshopper. This photo shows farmers of Woodbury county, Iowa, using an endgate seeder to spread a poison mixture on the ground to kill the grasshoppers. The poison is dropped on the ground during the early morning hours because the grasshoppers feed at that time.

Helping Farmers To Get More From Land

Four Men Who Have Done Much In State In Way Of Scientific Methods

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—Four men are devoting their lives to the advancement of scientific methods of agriculture among Pennsylvania farmers.

They are Floyd S. Bucher, of Lancaster; David K. Sloan, of Williamsport; and Charles S. Adams, of Reading, all county farm agents; and Milton S. McDowell, director of the agricultural extension service at the Pennsylvania State College.

Each man has been active for more than 20 years in helping Pennsylvania's tillers of the soil grow better field crops and vegetables, raise more perfect fruit, and breed prize-winning livestock. For all of them this has been their only job since their graduation from college several years before the world war.

McDowell, who entered the service in 1910, has been director of the extension staff since 1912 and ranks high among the men who hold similar positions at other agricultural institutions in the country.

Bucher was appointed county agent in his home county of Lancaster, March 10, 1913, and has served continuously in that area. Sloan went to work just five days later, March 15, 1913, as county agent in the area adjoining the Pennsylvania railroad between Williamsport and Elmira, N. Y., with headquarters at Canton. Later he went to Towanda as Bradford county agent and finally, on March 15, 1929, was transferred to Williamsport in Lycoming county. Adams has been county agent in Berks county since early in 1914.

Farmers in Saxony and Anhalt, Germany, have been notified that if they fail to work their land properly their names will be publicly displayed on "black lists".

Report Science Gaining Control Of Eye Disease

Trachoma Is Gradually Coming Under The Control Of Science

(International News Service)

PARIS, June 15.—Trachoma, the dreaded eye disease, responsible for such a large part of blindness, is gradually coming under the control of science. This conviction was expressed here by some of the world's leading opthalmologists during recent sessions of the International Association for the Prevention of Blindness and the International Association against Trachoma.

Two of the leading speakers at the convention were Dr. F. Park Lewis of Buffalo and Lewis Hr. Carris, managing director of the association who represented the United States.

The delegates heard a report prepared by Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings in which it was declared that trachoma has almost disappeared from the United States except for certain mountainous districts where living conditions are still bad.

During the course of the convention the Leslie Dana gold medal was presented to Dr. J. de Lapersonne, noted French opthalmologist.

You never tasted such Strawberry Jam!

Discover for yourself this flavor secret, and start your strawberry jam today; it's so easy with Certo!

WHAT'S better than plenty of good home-made strawberry jam when winter months roll around? You can't put up too much of it!

So take a tip—as soon as strawberry specials come to town, go to your grocer and stock up on berries, Certo and sugar. Then follow the Certo recipe given here for best results with 1934 berries.

You get truly marvelous strawberry jam. Such fine true-fruit flavor! Many women will put up double the usual amount this year with strawberries so inexpensive and delicious.

When you use Certo you will need to boil your jellies or jams only a few minutes. Hence the fruit juice does not boil away, and you never get that "boiled-down" taste that comes with long, tedious boiling. Often you get half again more jam. And of course you save lots of time and trouble, too.

Certo—the pure fruit pectin—is sold by all grocers. It is a product of General Foods.

HOW TO MAKE THE BEST STRAWBERRY JAM

Certo Laboratories report this recipe best for use with 1934 berries. See also Special Strawberry News below.

4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar, Juice of ½ lemon
½ bottle Certo

To prepare fruit, grind about 2 quarts ripe berries or crush so that each berry is reduced to pulp.

Measure sugar, prepared fruit, and lemon juice into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. To reduce foaming, ¼ teaspoon butter may be added. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 4 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in Certo. Pour quickly. Paraffin at once. Makes about 10 glasses (6 fluid ounces).

SPECIAL STRAWBERRY NEWS!

Read carefully before making Strawberry Jam

1934 will be a good strawberry year. Plan to start your Certo jam cupboard with the first luscious strawberries. This year we've had unusual weather conditions and fruits may vary more widely than usual in moisture content.

The Certo laboratories recommend that for strawberry jam you boil the fruit and sugar mixture of 1934 berries four minutes instead of one—and for even better results and keener flavor, add the juice of half a lemon. (Recipe above.)

Mrs. McLean Has Valuable Diamond In Visit To Fair

Mrs. Edward B. McLean Wears $300,000 Hope Diamond As She Visits Fair

CHICAGO REPORTERS GET REAL EYEFUL

By COPELAND C. BURG
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, June 15—A handsomely dressed woman dropped her lashes rested her chin in her hand and assumed a rather bored expression. She didn't even glance at a $300,000 diamond pendant she held in her left hand, while photographers emitted gasps and gurgles almost as loud as the boo-dooms of their flashlights.

It was Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington posing for a photograph with her precious blue gem, world famous as the Hope diamond, after she had visited a century of progress.

Mrs. McLain declined a police escort while she toured the world's fair last night with her $300,000 bauble and said "wasn't a bit afraid of losing it, " but it was revealed Thursday that most of the time she was on the fair grounds, Mrs. McLean kept her diamond concealed in her waist.

Brings Bad Luck

She showed no hesitancy when she placed it in her hand as she posed for photographers and merely smiled when one of the camera men, recalling that the Hope diamond was supposed to bring "bad luck" touched the pendant and said:

"Gee, I touched it! Wonder when that 'bad luck' is going to hit me"

The glittering gem has been one of the world's most noted jewels for nearly three centuries.

In 1868 it was stolen from a Hindu temple, and, so the story goes, immediately invested with an oriental curse bringing great injury or death to its owner.

Marie Antoinette

Louis the sixteenth purchased the gem many years later and presented it to Marie Antoinnette before she went to the guillotine.

Various of the big diamond's owners since the ill-fated French beauty until it came into the possession of Mrs. McLean, are reputed to have suffered from it's evil curse.

But that's "bunk" according to Mrs. McLean, and she proved it last night. She popped into a South African mining exhibit just to get an idea of what a few other diamonds look like and the manager of the concession insisted she accept $10,000 for the right to display the 44 and one half carat Hope diamond.

Mrs. McLean glanced at the blue bauble and smiled as she said:

"No, thankks! But come join us in a bottle of champagne.

LAFAYETTE SAID TO HAVE USED RELICS

Sleuths Capture Cemetery Vandal

Mysterious Wrecking Of 110 Tombstones In Franklin Cemetery Is Solved

(International News Service)

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 15.—Mute evidence in plaster casts of the clear imprint of a man's hand and a large footprint near Franklin cemetery gate has solved the mysterious wrecking of 110 tombstones and led to arrest of the vandal.

Faced with clever detective work engineered by Sheriff Herb Beatty, District Attorney Maurice P. Breene and state police in Butler, William King, 3, suspect, sighed:

"It's no use holding out any longer."

King's shoes, taken from him, compared with other footprints in the cemetery near wrecked memorials.

Unable to raise $1,000 bond after arraignment on nine counts, King now sits in Venango county jail awaiting trial. A malicious mischief charge was placed against him.

King told police he had nursed a grudge against Superintendent Paul McKenzie since his dismissal last fall from further employment at the cemetery.

THOUGHT KIDNAPED, MERELY SLEEPING

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—Like "Bo-Peep, who fell fast asleep," Margaret Eustage, three, Tiona, slumbered in a ploughed field near Allegheny river at Warren while parents and police in three states conducted a frantic search, fearing she had been kidnaped.

Descriptions of the child, who drifted away while she and her parents attended a carnival in Warren, where flashed over teletype wires from here.

"Three washes a week . . yet their clothes stay bright" mother of three babies says

"I began using Chipso because a neighbor said it made the best suds," Mrs. Harvey Fell of Wilmington, Del., told us. "When I tried it I thought so, too. But I found out something even more important—Chipso doesn't fade colored clothes, or hurt my hands, or harm even dainty garments.

"The children get so many clothes dirty that we wash two and three times a week. It wouldn't take long for the clothes to wear out if we used harsh soap as often as that! But with Chipso the colors hold up and the materials don't get thin and sleazy."

No hard rubbing . . . "Besides, with Chipso, you don't have to break your back scrubbing. Dirt soaks right out in those good suds! One washday's hard rubbing is equal to months of actual wear on clothes, so I think they are bound to wear longer if you wash them this softer Chipso way."

Don't endanger clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

Chipso Economy

1. BIG BOX . . LOW PRICE
2. SOAPIER . . . goes farther. Chipso makes thick, peppy suds that stand up.
3. SAVES CLOTHES AND HANDS . . . Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in soaps which hurt your hands and gradually weaken and fade fabrics.

County Treasurer William O. Pitts has received a check from the Internal Revenue department for $25,182.13, being Lawrence county's share of the state gasoline tax for the past six months. The county receives one-half cent per gallon on each gallon of gasoline sold. This money goes into the road fund and can be used for improving roads or paying damage claims on roads that have been improved.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard has received from William A. Cocke, American Counsellor at Juarez, Mexico, a subpoena in divorce to be served on Alice Beatrice Gordon, of 819 Etna street in a divorce action brought by her husband, Cecil Gordon of Juarez, but formerly of New Castle. The grounds upon which the divorce is asked are not stated in the papers received.

Tax collections by County Treasurer William O. Pitts on Wednesday amounted to $4,156.74 divided as follows: County, $2,497.02; state, $411.21; poor, $1,248.51. Disbursements from the general fund on the same day amounted to $259.90, and from the poor fund, $6,044.43. The largest item among the disbursements was for keeping insane persons at different institutions. It amounted to $4,520.86. For keeping the criminally insane, $808.45. The bills covered a three months period.

County cars of the sheriff and county commissioners are to be labeled, so that anybody who can read will be able to tell whose car is passing and whether the driver is entitled to use it. The sheriffs car will have "sheriff" printed on either side and the county commissioners car, "County Commissioners". Heretofore there have been no names on the cars, and there have been reports that some of the cars were being used for other than official business. The plan of labeling official cars was adopted some time ago by the state departments.

County commissioners have received complaints from residents along the New Bedford road which is being improved, to the effect that drain pipes from houses and cesspools have been torn up by the grading of the road. The county commissioners installed storm sewers to take care of the water, but they have nothing to do with overflow pipes from cess pools. The Youngstown hill section is badly in need of a sewage system and until it is built sanitary conditions will not be the best. There has been some agitation for a sewer system in the more populous sections of Union township but nothing definite has ever been done, owing to the cost. Water and gas pipes were installed on the Youngstown road, and all that is needed is a sanitary sewer to bring that section right up to date.

Norman H. Cummins of 517 South Mill street, has filed an application at the prothonotary's office for a divorce from his wife, Minnie Viola Cummins of Moravia street, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married in August, 1931 and lived together until April, 1924. Cummins gives a long list of alleged abuses in his application.

Justice of the Peace H. M. Reynolds of Union township, who was at the court house today, says it's no joke about the 17-year locusts coming out of the ground. He was digging in his garden yesterday and ran across a locust at a depth of about five inches. Squire Reynolds did not say how he happened to be digging in his garden, but maybe he was going fishing.

The United States Hoffman Machinery Corporation has filed a writ at the sheriff's office against W. A. Mayberry to secure possession of a pressing machine, boiler and other machinery valued at $1675.

Mrs. McLean Has Valuable Diamond In Visit To Fair

Mrs. Edward B. McLean Wears $300,000 Hope Diamond As She Visits Fair

CHICAGO REPORTERS GET REAL EYEFUL

By COPELAND C. BURG
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, June 15—A handsomely dressed woman dropped her lashes rested her chin in her hand and assumed a rather bored expression. She didn't even glance at a $300,000 diamond pendant she held in her left hand, while photographers emitted gasps and gurgles almost as loud as the boo-dooms of their flashlights.

It was Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington posing for a photograph with her precious blue gem, world famous as the Hope diamond, after she had visited a century of progress.

Mrs. McLain declined a police cort while she toured the world's fair last night with her $300,000 bauble and said "wasn't a bit afraid of losing it, " but it was revealed Thursday that most of the time she was on the fair grounds, Mrs. McLean kept her diamond concealed in her waist.

Brings Bad Luck

She showed no hesitancy when she placed it in her hand as she posed for photographers and merely smiled when one of the camera men, recalling that the Hope diamond was supposed to bring "bad luck" touched the pendant and said:

"Gee, I touched it! Wonder when that 'bad luck' is going to hit me"

The glittering gem has been one of the world's most noted jewels for nearly three centuries.

In 1868 it was stolen from a Hindu temple, and, so the story goes, immediately invested with an oriental curse bringing great injury or death to its owner.

Marie Antoinette

Louis the sixteenth purchased the gem many years later and presented it to Marie Antoinnette before she went to the guillotine.

Various of the big diamond's owners since the ill-fated French beauty until it came into the possession of Mrs. McLean, are reputed to have suffered from it's evil curse.

But that's "bunk" according to Mrs. McLean, and she proved it last night. She popped into a South African mining exhibit just to get an idea of what a few other diamonds look like and the manager of the concession insisted she accept $10,000 for the right to display the 44 and one half carat Hope diamond.

Mrs. McLean glanced at the blue bauble and smiled as she said:

"No, thankks! But come join us in a bottle of champagne.

(International News Service)

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 15.—Mute evidence in plaster casts of the clear imprint of a man's hand and a large footprint near Franklin cemetery gate has solved the mysterious wrecking of 110 tombstones and led to arrest of the vandal.

Faced with clever detective work engineered by Sheriff Herb Beatty, District Attorney Maurice P. Breene and state police in Butler, William King, 8, suspect, sighed:

"It's no use holding out any longer."

King's shoes, taken from him, compared with other footprints in the cemetery near wrecked memorials.

Unable to raise $1,000 bond after arraignment on nine counts, King now sits in Venango county jail awaiting trial. A malicious mischief charge was placed against him.

King told police he had nursed a grudge against Superintendent Paul McKenzie since his dismissal last fall from further employment at the cemetery.

THOUGHT KIDNAPED, MERELY SLEEPING

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—Like "Bo-Peep, who fell fast asleep," Margaret Eustage, three, Tiona, slumbered in a ploughed field near Allegheny river at Warren while parents and police in three states conducted a frantic search, fearing she had been kidnaped.

Descriptions of the child, who drifted away while she and her parents attended a carnival in Warren, where flashed over teletype wires from here.

Chipso Economy

1. BIG BOX . . LOW PRICE
2. SOAPIER . . . goes farther. Chipso makes thick, peppy suds that stand up.
3. SAVES CLOTHES AND HANDS . . . Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in soaps which hurt your hands and gradually weaken and fade fabrics.

"I began using Chipso because a neighbor said it made the best suds," Mrs. Harvey Fell of Wilmington, Del., told us. "When I tried it I thought so, too. But I found out something even more important—Chipso doesn't fade colored clothes, or hurt my hands, or harm even dainty garments.

"The children get so many clothes dirty that we wash two and three times a week. It wouldn't take long for the clothes to wear out if we used harsh soap as often as that! But with Chipso the colors hold up and the materials don't get thin and sleazy."

No hard rubbing . . . "Besides, with Chipso, you don't have to break your back scrubbing. Dirt soaks right out in those good suds! One washday's hard rubbing is equal to months of actual wear on clothes, so I think they are bound to wear longer if you wash them this softer Chipso way."

Don't endanger clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

County Treasurer William O. Pitts has received a check from the Internal Revenue department for $25,182.13, being Lawrence county's share of the state gasoline tax for the past six months. The county receives one-half cent per gallon on each gallon of gasoline sold. This money goes into the road fund and can be used for improving roads or paying damage claims on roads that have been improved.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard has received from William A. Cocke, American Counsellor at Juarez, Mexico, a subpoena in divorce to be served on Alice Beatrice Gordon, of 819 Etna street in a divorce action brought by her husband, Cecil Gordon of Juarez, but formerly of New Castle. The grounds upon which the divorce is asked are not stated in the papers received.

Tax collections by County Treasurer William O. Pitts on Wednesday amounted to $4,156.74 divided as follows: County, $2,497.02; state, $411.21; poor, $1,248.51. Disbursements from the general fund on the same day amounted to $259.90, and from the poor fund, $6,044.43. The largest item among the disbursements was for keeping insane persons at different institutions. It amounted to $4,520.86. For keeping the criminally insane, $808.45. The bills covered a three months period.

County cars of the sheriff and county commissioners are to be labeled, so that anybody who can read will be able to tell whose car is passing and whether the driver is entitled to use it. The sheriff's car will have "sheriff" printed on either side and the county commissioners car, "County Commissioners". Heretofore there have been no names on the cars, and there have been reports that some of the cars were being used for other than official business. The plan of labeling official cars was adopted some time ago by the state departments.

County commissioners have received complaints from residents along the New Bedford road which is being improved, to the effect that drain pipes from houses and cesspools have been torn up by the grading of the road. The county commissioners installed storm sewers to take care of the water, but they have nothing to do with overflow pipes from cess pools. The Youngstown hill section is badly in need of a sewage system and until it is built sanitary conditions will not be the best. There has been some agitation for a sewer system in the more populous sections of Union township but nothing definite has ever been done, owing to the cost. Water and gas pipes were installed on the Youngstown road, and all that is needed is a sanitary sewer to bring that section right up to date.

Norman H. Cummins of 517 South Mill street, has filed an application at the prothonotary's office for a divorce from his wife, Minnie Viola Cummins of Moravia street, on the grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married in August, 1931 and lived together until April, 1924. Cummins gives a long list of alleged abuses in his application.

Justice of the Peace H. M. Reynolds of Union township, who was at the court house today, says it's no joke about the 17-year locusts coming out of the ground. He was digging in his garden yesterday and ran across a locust at a depth of about five inches. Squire Reynolds did not say how he happened to be digging in his garden, but maybe he was going fishing.

The United States Hoffman Machinery Corporation has filed a writ at the sheriff's office against W. A. Mayberry to secure possession of a pressing machine, boiler and other machinery valued at $1675.

Brooding Over Loss Of Horses Causes Suicide

Reveal Reason For Suicide Of Retired British Army Captain And Instructor

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15—To the death of his beloved horses, friends today traced the cause of the suicide of Capt. W. W. E. Demoleyns aristrocratic retired British cavalry officer.

The proud, 72 year old erstwhile soldier died late yesterday, six hours after he sent a .45 calibre bullet from his old service revolver crashing through his brain.

For five months the white mustached former officer of the crack British 12th Hussars had brooded over the execution of the six horses with which he had conducted a riding academy for the sons and daughters of Philadelphia's societies. His friends of the British officers' association, who knew him affectionately as "Denny" said he could talk and think of nothing save the death of his horses.

When depression wrecked the business of his academy Demoleyns was forced to summon an agent of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Too proud to admit his financial distress, the retired officer said he wanted the horses done to death "because they are now useless and I do not wish to see them fall into the hands of people who might abuse them."

He stood by while the S. P. C. A. agent killed the horses he loved.

It was the same old service revolver used in that execution that the aged captain chose to end his own life.

Seek To Oust Jail Warden In Beaver County

Judge Frank E. Reader Would Oust Jail Warden For Allowing Oriol His Freedom

(International News Service)

BEAVER, Pa., June 15—Invoking an act of 1790 heretofore never used but held still in force, Judge Frank E. Reader today moved to oust Hamilton M. Brown, Beaver county jail warden for releasing John Oriol, Ambridge, from jail for political activities at the May primaries.

Basing his action on a court-publicized report by a special investigating committee, Judge Reader ruled that Brown show cause why he should not be dismissed from office and why he should not be held in contempt.

Brown has 10 days to file an answer to both rules.

The investigators, in their report, recommended invokement of the ancient law against Brown" for showing partiality to a prisoner and that action be instituted to have him adjudged in contempt."

Their report asserted Oriol returned to jail—where he is serving two to ten years on an arson charge—May 15, date of the primary, after spending three days among his fellow countrymen in Ambridge in the interest of the political organization headed by former state Senator W. D. Craig.

'Mercy Slaying' In Philadelphia

Charles Schrager, 38, Kills His Sister Because She Acted "Funny"

GIVES SELF UP TO AUTHORITIES

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.— Because his 35-year-old sister, who had cared for him since boyhood, had been "acting very funny lately" Charles Schrager, 38-year-old deaf-mute, hammered the woman to death as she slept in her bed today, police said.

The victim of the barbaric attack, Miss Helen Schrager, died a few hours later in Misericordia hospital from the effects of seven deep wounds in her head.

Mercy Slaying

Police described the incident as a "mercy slaying".

A few minutes after his sister was left in her bed, horribly bludgeoned, the deaf and dumb man walked into the bedroom of his brother, Nathan, tapped him on the shoulder and handed him a penciled note, which said:

"I have noticed sister Helen acting very funny lately, and thought it best to put her out of the way."

Nathan Schrager immediately summoned police, while his brother went into his own room, removed his blood-spattered pajamas and donned his street clothes.

Answers Questions

When police arrived, the deaf-mute readily admitted he had beaten his sister with a claw-hammer, authorities said. He answered all questions in writing on slips of paper.

Later an interpreter, who knows the deaf and dumb sign language was called in and Schrager underwent a long grilling, giving his answers by means of hand manipulations.

Senator McClure And Others Are Declared "Free"

Finis Is Written To Famous Graft Conspiracy Case In Delaware County

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—State Senator John J. McClure and the 58 men convicted with him in the celebrated Delaware county rum-graft conspiracy case, today were declared "absolutely free men."

The "discharge" of McClure and his codefendants by Judge George A. Walsh, presiding jurist at the sensational eight-weeks trial in district federal court here, was merely a formality, but the phraesology of the court's order was regarded as somewhat significant.

Bringing the spectacular case to an official close Judge Welsh's decree said:

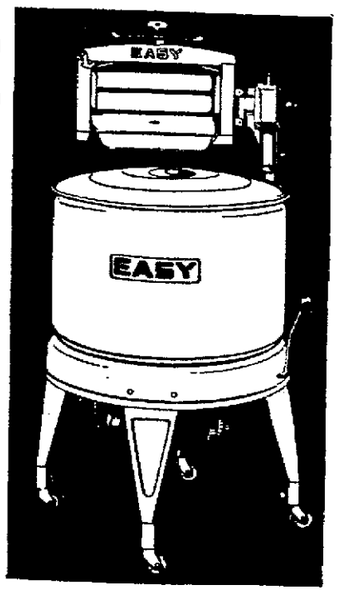

"Ordered and decreed that the part of the judgments rendered in the above entitled case, which sentences the defendants be vacated, that the indictments as to them be dismissed, and all of the said defendants are discharged."

The official court records thus will show, observers said, that while the indictments have been discharged, the sentences set aside and all the defendants freed, their "convictions" remain undisturbed.

Economic reforms may help, but they leave the same corns on the hands of the same people.

Senator McClure And Others Are Declared "Free"

Finis Is Written To Famous Graft Conspiracy Case In Delaware County

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—State Senator John J. McClure and the 58 men convicted with him in the celebrated Delaware county rum-graft conspiracy case, today were declared "absolutely free men."

Brooding Over Loss Of Horses Causes Suicide

Reveal Reason For Suicide Of Retired British Army Captain And Instructor

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15—To the death of his beloved horses, friends today traced the cause of the suicide of Capt. W. W. E. Demoleyns aristrocratic retired British cavalry officer.

The proud, 72 year old erstwhile soldier died late yesterday six hours after he sent a .45 calibre bullet from his old service revolver crashing through his brain.

For five months the white mustached former officer of the crack British 12th Hussars had brooded over the execution of the six horses with which he had conducted a riding academy for the sons and daughters of Philadelphia's societies. His friends of the British officers' association, who knew him affectionately as "Denny" said he could talk and think of nothing save the death of his horses.

When depression wrecked the business of his academy Demoleyns was forced to summon an agent of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Too proud to admit his financial distress, the retired officer said he wanted the horses done to death "because they are now useless and I do not wish to see them fall into the hands of people who might abuse them."

He stood by while the S. P. C. A. agent killed the horses he loved.

It was the same old service revolver used in that execution, that the aged captain chose to end his own life.

Abandon Campaign For Oil Control

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Proponents of the pending oil control legislation in congress have abandoned their fight for its enactment at the present session.

This was announced today by Rep. Disney (D) of Oklahoma, one of those instrumental in drafting the measure.

Disney called at the white house for a brief conference with President Roosevelt and announced as he left that he did not receive the impression Mr. Roosevelt intended to do anything further about the measure at the present session. The House Interstate Commerce committee yesterday refused to report the bill favorably for action.

Seek To Oust Jail Warden In Beaver County

Judge Frank E. Reader Would Oust Jail Warden For Allowing Oriol His Freedom

(International News Service)

BEAVER, Pa., June 15—Invoking an act of 1790 heretofore never used but held still in force, Judge Frank E. Reader today moved to oust Hamilton M. Brown, Beaver county jail warden for releasing John Oriol, Ambridge, from jail for political activities at the May primaries.

Basing his action on a court-publicized report by a special investigating committee, Judge Reader ruled that Brown show cause why he should not be dismissed from office and why he should not be held in contempt.

Brown has 10 days to file an answer to both rules.

The investigators, in their report, recommended invokement of the ancient law against Brown" for showing partiality to a prisoner and that action be instituted to have him adjudged in contempt."

Their report asserted Oriol returned to jail—where he is serving two to ten years on an arson charge—May 15, date of the primary, after spending three days among his fellow countrymen in Ambridge in the interest of the political organization headed by former state Senator W. D. Craig.

A little while before, Miss Palfrey set the pace for the American team by downing Dorothy Round of England 6-3, 3-6, 8-6.

'Mercy Slaying' In Philadelphia

Charles Schrager, 38, Kills His Sister Because She Acted "Funny"

GIVES SELF UP TO AUTHORITIES

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.— Because his 35-year-old sister, who had cared for him since boyhood, had been "acting very funny lately" Charles Schrager, 38-year-old deafmute, hammered the woman to death as she slept in her bed today, police said.

The victim of the barbaric attack, Miss Helen Schrager, died a few hours later in Misericordia hospital from the effects of seven deep wounds in her head.

Mercy Slaying

Police described the incident as a "mercy slaying".

A few minutes after his sister was left in her bed, horribly bludgeoned, the deaf and dumb man walked into the bedroom of his brother, Nathan, tapped him on the shoulder and handed him a pencilled note, which said:

"I have noticed sister Helen acting very funny lately, and thought it best to put her out of the way."

Nathan Schrager immediately summoned police, while his brother went into his own room, removed his blood-spattered pajamas and donned his street clothes.

Answers Questions

When police arrived, the deafmute readily admitted he had beaten his sister with a claw-hammer, authorities said. He answered all questions in writing on slips of paper.

Later an interpreter, who knows the deaf and dumb sign language was called in and Schrager underwent a long grilling, giving his answers by means of hand manipulations.

L.R.C.A. Urged To Function At Once

Local Retail Credit Authorities Are Governing Bodies, Neustadt Says

MUST ORGANIZE LOCAL GROUPS

In a further communication to Marcus Feuchtwanger, chairman of the Lawrence County Compliance Board, R. M. Neustadt, managing director of the National Retail Code Authority, urges immediate action on the parts of the local Retail Code Authorities in getting organized under the code agreement.

Some few LRCA's apparently have not taken the code seriously, Mr. Neustadt reports. Where no assessment has been levied, this should be done at once. Where levied and collected, the share of the National Code Authority should be sent to Washington at once. This is no racket, Mr. Neustadt states, but is a "trust."

Several complaints which could not be settled by the LRCA, are being handled this week in Washington by the NRA Compliance Board, he informs the local authority.

Mr. Neustadt points out that the LRCA's are the governing bodies of the industry. They are not policemen, but can originate their own complaints and should. If any LRCA's are found maliciously dormant, their approval will be withdrawn and arrangements will be made to have a Code Administrator appointed in that community either from the county or outside it.

AUTHOR ENCOURAGES CHILDREN'S ACTIVITIES

If Tom, Jr., gives you the jitters by scaling a roof or sliding down the rope in the dumbwaiter shaft, don't curb him, advises Miss Louise Hackney of New York, author and lecturer. The more he crams into life as a child, the bigger and more successful man he will be, she declares. Miss Hackney's own childish admiration of a fancy pie crust made by a Chinese cook, gave her a lifelong interest in Chinese art, in which she now is an authority. Her sympathy and understanding of childhood helped her to understand and interpret the early life of James Smithson, founder of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., about whom little is known, whose biography under the title, "Wing of Fame", Miss Hackney wrote, reconstructing early life from adult's traits.

New Testimony In Elk County Case

(International News Service)

RIDGWAY, Pa., June 15.—Renewing the barrage of incriminating testimony which yesterday fell with unrelenting fury on Elk county's trio of commissioners, John Cartwright, counsel for the prosecution, introduced new testimony today concerning the sale of real estate in Highland township, one of several tracts in dispute in the sensational trial.

Commissioners E. De Haven Brown, Thomas H. Ledden and Joseph Wiesner are the defendants in the case, charged with conspiracy, embezzlement and fraudulent conversion of funds.

Crushing blows fell one after another on the defense as the fourth day of the trial neared its close yesterday.

KIDNAPERS LURED WRONG CHILDREN

(International News Service)

DENVER, June 15.—A supposed kidnap plot came to an abrupt end here when the abductors learned the identity of their victims.

Darlyne Schloesser and Geraldine Bialek, both under three years of age, were lured into an automobile by cookies and candy. After four hours of driving around the city the abductors learned their names and put them out of the car near their homes.

Police believe the kidnapers thought they were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fleming, wealthy neighbors, on whose lawn they were playing.

Maxie Baer Gets Restful Sleep As Reward Of Title

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—A long, restful sleep was Max Baer's first reward today for lifting the heavyweight championship from the massive brow of Primo Carnera.

Following his hectic engagement before 50,000 fans in the Garden bowl and a little party in his hotel suite later, the California adonis did not retire until 4:30 o'clock this morning.

Peace and quiet reigned in his suite today as his Dad, "Papa" Baer chased off crashers while Maxie got his much needed sleep. "Papa" refused to waken Max for anyone and the new champion was snoring loudly at 10:30 this morning while reporters and photographers waited for him to get out of bed.

ASSASSINS TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF NIPPON LEADERS

(International News Service)

TOKYO, June 15—Japan in the eyes of the world may be a civilized nation but the fact remains that terrorism reigned in the country the past two years and there is no guarantee, with dozens of reactionary parties operating against a further outbreak on state ministers and capitalists.

The makeup of the self appointed assassin delegations includes army and navy men, Buddhist priests, farm peasants, radicals and students, under the names of Gol Sent Troops, the Blood Brotherhood and Save the Country Troops.

One premier, a state minister and two financial magnates have been killed and 28 leaders in business and politics have been the targets of attempted attacks in the past two years.

Carnera Alone Following Bout

Thousands Sing Praise Of Baer And Carnera Walks To His Hotel Alone

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Shortly after midnight this morning, with the yells of the crowd that saw him cut down by a man two-thirds his size still ringing in his ears, Primo Carnera stumbled back to his hotel—alone.

The Italian giant, shorn of his heavyweight championship title by Max Baer, broken-hearted in defeat, fled from the scene of disaster by himself.

It was not so much that he was left alone but that he wanted to be alone.

For the 263-pound mastodon of the ring, whose gigantic build houses a simple pleasant soul, had to give himself up to tears.

And that he did—unmolested—through the dark hours of the night as America cheered its new champion and proceeded to forget the one that was gone.

RUSSIAN WOMEN LACK SEX APPEAL

(International News Service)

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—"The average Russian woman has no more sex appeal than the witch of Endor."

William Allen White, Emporia, Kan., publisher, made the above statement at the safe distance of 12,000 miles from Moscow.

"Women there are the equals of men and are expected to do the same heavy work," continued White. "Consequently they are stocky, heavily muscled, plainly dressed."

The Emporia sage visited Russia last year.

FOREIGN TRADE THREATENED BY WORLD TARIFFS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, June 15—World-wide tariffs now in effect will lead to eventual destruction of foreign commerce unless they are modified in line with international economic conditions.

This was the message brought to Washington by Marcel Olivier, president of the French line, Grand officer of the Legion of Honor and former Governor-General of French Provinces in Africa.

"The American government is taking a bold and forward-looking step in this matter" Olivier said. "The measure now in Congress which would grant the president full authority to make reciprocal tariff agreements will have far-reaching effects in those countries which formerly enjoyed a substantial commerce with the United States.

"The tariffs that are now in effect are deadly. They are creating a stagnation which can not end otherwise than the disaster for all concerned.

UNIQUE HIGHWAY IN ITALY BUILT ON IRON FRAME

(International News Service)

ROME—A unique type of highway paving construction is now being experimented with in Italy. The paving is entirely dissimilar to that in any other part of the world.

The foundation for the pavement consists of the usual layer of concrete, varying in thickness according to the solidity of the soil upon which it is laid. The upper surface of the foundation layer is levelled off to be perfectly smooth. Upon it is placed a solid pattern of cast-iron frames. Each of these frames is an equilateral triangle, with 30 centimeter sides.

Fitted inside each triangle is another one, also equilateral, having sides 15 centimeters long, and placed in an inverted position so that each of the sides of the larger frame is bisected by the angles of the smaller. There are thus formed in each frame four triangular compartments of equal size.

MUST ORGANIZE LOCAL GROUPS

In a further communication to Marcus Feuchtwanger, chairman of the Lawrence County Compliance Board, R. M. Neustadt, managing director of the National Retail Code Authority, urges immediate action on the parts of the local Retail Code Authorities in getting organized under the code agreement.

Some few LRCA's apparently have not taken the code seriously, Mr. Neustadt reports. Where no assessment has been levied, this should be done at once. Where levied and collected, the share of the National Code Authority should be sent to Washington at once. This is no racket, Mr. Neustadt states, but is a "trust."

Several complaints which could not be settled by the LRCA, are being handled this week in Washington by the NRA Compliance Board, he informs the local authority.

Mr. Neustadt points out that the LRCA's are the governing bodies of the industry. They are not policemen, but can originate their own complaints and should. If any LRCA's are found maliciously dormant, their approval will be withdrawn and arrangements will be made to have a Code Administrator appointed in that community either from the county or outside it.

(International News Service)

RIDGWAY, Pa., June 15.—Renewing the barrage of incriminating testimony which yesterday fell with unrelenting fury on Elk county's trio of commissioners, John Cartwright, counsel for the prosecution, introduced new testimony today concerning the sale of real estate in Highland township, one of several tracts in dispute in the sensational trial.

KIDNAPERS LURED WRONG CHILDREN

(International News Service)

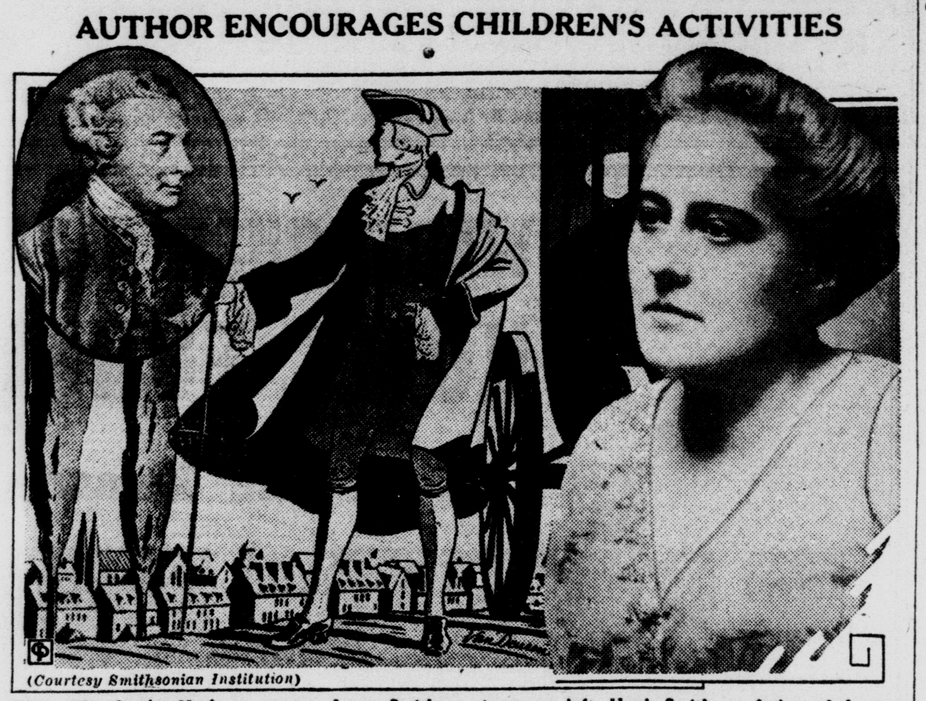

DENVER, June 15.—A supposed kidnap plot came to an abrupt end here when the abductors learned the identity of their victims.

Darlyne Schloesser and Geraldine Bialek, both under three years of age, were lured into an automobile by cookies and candy. After four hours of driving around the city the abductors learned their names and put them out of the car near their homes.

Police believe the kidnapers thought they were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Fleming, wealthy neighbors, on whose lawn they were playing.

A pain is the side may mean appendicitis, or it may mean that the doctor gets a rake-off from the surgeon.

The more he crams into life as a child, the bigger and more successful man he will be, she declares. Miss Hackney's own childish admiration of a fancy pie crust made by a Chinese cook, gave her a lifelong interest in Chinese art, in which she now is an authority. Her sympathy and understanding of childhood helped her to understand and interpret the early life of James Smithson, founder of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. UNIQUE HIGHWAY IN ITALY BUILT ON IRON FRAME

(International News Service)

ROME—A unique type of highway paving construction is now being experimented with in Italy. The paving is entirely dissimilar to that in any other part of the world.

The foundation for the pavement consists of the usual layer of concrete, varying in thickness according to the solidity of the soil upon which it is laid. The upper surface of the foundation layer is levelled off to be perfectly smooth. Upon it is placed a solid pattern of cast-iron frames. Each of these frames is an equilateral triangle, with 30 centimeter sides.

Fitted inside each triangle is another one, also equilateral, having sides 15 centimeters long, and placed in an inverted position so that each of the sides of the larger frame is bisected by the angles of the smaller. There are thus formed in each frame four triangular compartments of equal size.

Brython Sums Up News Of Interest To Welsh Of City

Receives Sad Word Of Death Of Edward Johns At Morristown, South Wales

By WILLIAM A. JOHNS
(Brython.)

Delegates from the Emmanuel Baptist church to the convention of the Beaver Baptist church held June 12 and 13 at the Baptist church of ELwood City report having had a very nice time and were enthusiastic about the spirit, the speaking and singing of the convention.

Katherine, the daughter of Thomas Edwards, Pico, Cal., is arranging to take her vacation this summer at Cuba and Manila. She will be away for a month.

A sad letter came to Brython from home, Morristown, South Wales, telling of the death of his brother Edward on April 24, after some weeks of illness. He was born at Morristown 62 years ago, the son of Edward and Mary Johns. He, in company with his brother, Brython, came to the United States 39 years ago and lived at Blairsville, Pa., for five years, then moving to McKeesport, Canonsburg and New Castle. He returned to Wales 26 years ago on account of the health of his wife. The change did not help her. She passed away in a few years. Edward lost one son in the World war. There are two children left to mourn their loss, Berwyn and Gladys. The son was born in the United States. Two ministers officiated at the funeral, Rev. Charles and Rev. Hughes, and each spoke beautiful words of his splendid life. Interment was made at the new cemetery of Morristown. Edward was the third to be taken by death out of ten children. Of the seven left there are five brothers and two sisters. Brython is the oldest.

Mrs. Wink, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Richards, has returned home from California where she visited for three weeks. She was accompanied home as far as Chicago by her parents. They will tarry there a few weeks with their sons and then will come on to New Castle to make their home for some time. They are well known to the people of New Castle, having resided on East Reynolds street here.

Rev. S. L. Cobb of the Harmony Baptist church of New Castle, will do the preaching at the Emmanuel Baptist church next Sunday evening, June 17, and after the sermon he will give communion to the members.

Members of the Star of Wales lodge will meet Saturday evening, June 16, at the Emmanuel Baptist church, at 7:30 o'clock. Matters for the benefit of the lodge and the order will be brought forward. The annual convention of the order will be held this year at Rome, N. Y., and Daniel Hughes, the treasurer of the local lodge, will be a delegate.

Scrubbing Board And Elbow Grease Still In Favor

(International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., June 15.—The old fashioned scrubbing board still sends the whitest shirts to the clothes line in the back yard, girls in Home Economics at the Pennsylvania State College learned this year.

The scrubbing board and elbow grease method knocked out 17 percent of the soil, it was found in an average of 50 washings, but it obtained its results at the expense of the clothes for it also reduced the strength of the material by 27.8 percent, the girls found.

BEAVER Townships

GRANGE BANQUET.

Meeting in the Big Beaver Grange hall Tuesday evening, June 12, was a happy group of Grangers, gathered for an evening of merriment. The first and main part of the evening was enjoyed at the banquet tables in the dining room of the hall. This banquet was given in honor of the unmarried people of the Grange, the result of a contest held some time ago between the married and unmarried members, the losers to banquet the winners.

Rev. A. M. Doak, Big Beaver Grange chaplain, invoked divine blessing.

Rev. W. W. Willis served as toastmaster and gave the toast to the young people. Miss Gladys Howell gave the toast to the married folks, and James Beatty gave the response. Prof. W. H. McCullough lead the group singing at the table.

Following the dinner hour, the regular business meeting of the Grange took place in the auditorium with the master, Clifford Douthitt, presiding. All the officers including the executive committee were present. In the county this year in all the Granges, the Pomona Grange has offered the grange having the highest percentage of their sixteen officers in regular attendance, a permanent altar. Of course Big Beaver hopes to be able to secure this altar for their hall.

Announcement was made by the Pomona deputy, of the special meetings arranged for the summer months, the first one to be held Monday evening, June 18 in Westfield Hall. The next special meeting, July 5, at the Pleasant Hill Grange, Big Beaver, with the East New Castle young people presenting the program, and refreshments served by New Bedford and Pleasant Hill young people.

Following the close of grange a fine program was presented with James Beatty, Sr., chairman of the special committee for the banquet presiding; opening song, music, Guy Davis; reading, June Brides and Roses, Mrs. Wayne McHattie; James McKim of Westfield rendered several entertaining musical selections on his guitar and mouth organ.

The ladies' quartete: Mrs. Willis, Thelma McCullough, Mrs. McCullough and Mrs. Doak favored with a vocal selection and Miss Naomi Mielke and three cousins entertained with violin and guitar music, followed by the closing song.

LADIES' CLUB TO MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the Big Beaver Grange Ladies' club will be held on Tuesday afternoon, June 19, at 1:30 o'clock in the grange hall. Mrs. James McHattie, Mrs. W. G. Shannon and Mrs. Francis Fry are the hostesses, and the literary program will be in charge of the May hostesses.

TO GIVE PROGRAM.

Big Beaver Grange will present a program at the East Brook Grange Thursday evening, July 12 instead of June 28 as previously announced.

CHURCH PICNIC.

The Rocky Spring United Presbyterian church and Sabbath school will have its picnic on Friday, June 22, at Enon Park.

Mrs. Duff is chairman of dinner committee.

The after dinner hours will be spent in various ways. A list of sports will be enjoyed, committees having been appointed to take care of the different departments of the school.

TO HAVE PARTY.

The Big Beaver Grange party will be given at the Big Beaver hall on Friday evening, June 29. The activities of the evening will be in charge of the general social committee of the Grange.

Y. P. C. U. MEETING.

Y. P. C. U. and vesper services at the Rocky Spring U. P. church will be held at the home of J. L. McHattie, June 17, at 6:30 o'clock, to which members and friends are invited to attend.

BAN G. A. R. WHISKEY

BOSTON, Mass.—"Grand Army Brand Straight Whiskey, 90 proof" can no longer be bought in Boston. This came about as a result of protest of the G. A. R. members of Massachusettes to the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission. A Boston distilling company agreed to discontinue the use of the name on the labels of its product and called back all bottles on dealers shelves.

Scrubbing Board And Elbow Grease Still In Favor

(International News Service)

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., June 15.—The old fashioned scrubbing board still sends the whitest shirts to the clothes line in the back yard, girls in Home Economics at the Pennsylvania State College learned this year.

The scrubbing board and elbow grease method knocked out 17 percent of the soil, it was found in an average of 50 washings, but it obtained its results at the expense of the clothes for it also reduced the strength of the material by 27.8 percent, the girls found.

Sudden Death Of Youngstown Lawyer

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 15.—Attorney David F. Kennedy, 42, one of the prominent young attorneys of Mahoning county, died suddenly this forenoon after a heart attack.

A son of the late Probate Judge James B. Kennedy, he served in the world war, later becoming counsel for the Brier Hill Steel Company, now part of Youngstown Sheet and Tube. He gained state-wide prominence three years ago when he was one of the two special prosecutors in the Harry Engle-Ohio Edison Company prosecutor Ray Thomas case.

'Hex' Testimony Is Being Heard

Strange Tale Of Weird Witchcraft Is Heard In Court At Ebensburg, Penna.

REPUTED WEALTHY WOMAN TESTIFIES

(International News Service)

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 15.—One of the strangest tales of weird witchcraft told by Miss Helen Senko, Brownstown, is a matter of record today as defense attorneys reopened their battle to free Mrs. Jennie Viscount, reputed wealthy member of Westmont's residential colony, of fortune-telling charges.

Miss Ciscount was expected to testify today in her own defense in Cambria county court's most sensational trial which parallels famous "hex" cases in the east. Damaging evidence against her has been furnished by commonwealth witnesses.

Miss Senko told of how the accused attempted to remove a "spell" under which the girl was supposed to be living.

Plot To Kill

She testified to the fortune-teller's alleged efforts to unite her and her "boy friend" through weird rites and claimed Mrs. Viscount told her the boy's family was plotting to have her killed. The woman's offer to "unhex" her for $50 was finally cut to $32, she said.

When testimony brought out that human bone dust was used to remove "spells" and the fortune-teller buried "bad luck" powders under a sidewalk, Judge Samuel D. Reed asked:

"Do you want your boy friend back, now?"

She replied:

"No, not me; not that guy. But if I am to have this spell broken, I've got to have him back for awhile.

Miss Alice Hauber, chief prosecuting witness, claiming she paid Mrs. Viscount $200 when the latter informed her "someone is going to die" and "there's a plot against your son's life," testified to strange journies through cemeteries with the defendant; unearthing of pin and coffin-nail pierced hearts; burning incense; feet stamping and cursing by the defendants to frighten "evil spirits."

Twenty-Four From Here Gather At Cascade Park Last Evening For Picnic

Another crowd of seventh ward people gathered in the Cascade Park grove Thursday evening for a picnic.

Last night's affair, attended by the Loyal Workers of the Madison Avenue Christian church and their families, was in the form of a steak fry at 6:30 o'clock. Supper was served to twenty-four guests. Later the park amusements were enjoyed.

The success of the affair was largely due to the work of the committee, Mrs. E. M. Jones, chairman, Mrs. Godfrey Richards and Miss Susy Park.

VEILED BOYCOTT URGED AGAINST FOREIGN GOODS

(International News Service)

BERLIN—Thinly veiled boycott agitation against all imported produce and articles in Germany has been declared by the NSBO, the Nazi works' organizations representing 10,000,000 persons.

The plea that Germans buy only German goods expressly states that the measure is "not an appeal to boycott" foreign goods. In the same breath, however, it is urged that only goods of German origin be purchased by the members of the organization.

"Germans, buy only from Germans" and "Germans, buy only German goods" are the principal pleas in the appeal.

After these sentences, the appeal says:

"Our export industry also is the basis for better wages and more buying power in the country."

FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

PATIENCE EFFECTIVE PREVENTING STRIKES

(International News Service)

DENVER, June 15.—The old injunction to "count 100 first" has been as effective in preventing strikes in Colorado as it is supposed to be in keeping fists from flying in a private disagreement. Since 1915, the state has had a law compelling disputants to give the state industrial commission 30 days notice before calling a strike or effecting a lockout.

Labor leaders and industrialists agree that this legislation is largely responsible for that fact that in the last 19 years but $210,000 has been appropriated by the legislature in suppressing uprisings. During the preceeding 19 years, $2,250,000 in bonds were issued to cover such expenses.

In the purest air, says a doctor, there is rubbish. The radio, evidently is not entirely an unmixed blessing.

Famed Hoquiam Frog Has Made Last Croak

(International News Service)

HOQUIAM, Wash.—After tearing up part of the city hall and boring into the foundation in an effort to liberate an imprisoned frog whose croakings bothered city hall workers, the doleful croakings have mysteriously been silenced and Miss Ola Hall, city clerk, is worried. She fears it is ill, hungry or a victim of starvation.

The frog brought nationwide attention to Hoquiam and, according to Miss Hall, has done more to bolster postal revenues here than the airmail. The government should build the frog a monument, she avows.

Rich customers mean little to a grocer. No matter how rich she is, you can't make her think a pound of butter worth $79.85.

WASHINGTON—American farmers' income from livestock sales to the packing industry gained $73,000,000 in the first four months of 1934, compared to the corresponding period in 1933, according to an announcement of the Institute of American Meat Packers. This increase was attributed to a greater volume of business and a higher purchasing price.

The next meeting of G. I. A. will open at 2:00 p. m. instead of 1:00 p. m. and will be a regular business session.

S. C. W. Members Are Entertained

Assembling at the home of Mrs. G. H. Scheidemantle, West Madison avenue, twenty-one members of the S. C. W. Bible class of the Mahoningtown Presbyterian church, and one special guest, Mrs. Nettie Thompson, of Fredonia, Pa.

The gathering was very enjoyable and during the social period a lunch was served by Mrs. Scheidemantle, Mrs. L. A. Moore and Mrs. Frank Holliday.

Plans were made for a breakfast at Cascade Park on July 12.

IS UNIT LEADER

Mrs. E. W. Guy, of West Madison avenue, is one of the four unit leaders who will be members of the Girl Scout camp staff at Camp John M. Phillips August 5 to 19. It is probably that the Mahoningtown Girl Scout troop will be represented at one of the camp periods. Registrations are being taken now.

GOING TO REUNION

A large crowd of New Castle senior high graduates from away back in the early 1900's to the June class of 1934 from seventh ward will be at the reunion next Tuesday night at the Cathedral, or such is the indication from the conversation here this week.

BINGO ENJOYED

Bingo was an enjoyable diversion following the regular business meeting of the Mabel Wilson Auxiliary members Thursday evening at the city building. Prizes were won by Mrs. Pearl Taylor and Mrs. Hazel Baltes.

MEETING TONIGHT

Presbyterian young people are having a meeting tonight at Earl Culbertson's home on West Madison avenue.

SEVENTH WARD PERSONALS

Friends here were glad to greet George McNicholas, of Greensburg, during his first visit in five years. Mr. McNicholas, 87 years old, spent Thursday afternoon with old friends here and in other parts of New Castle.

Arnold McCartney, of West Clayton street, who has been ill for some time and underwent an operation this week at the Jameson Memorial hospital for appendicitis, is not getting along as well as was hoped. He is the young son of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. McCartney.

Mr. and Mrs. James Burt, of Rochester, Pa., a bride and groom of last week, called on relatives of the latter in seventh ward Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. H. H. McCombs, of West Clayton street, is reported ill again.

Ralph J. Metzler, of West Cherry street, left on Thursday for Salamanca, N. Y., where his mother is critically ill. She is to undergo an operation today for amputation of her leg because of gangrene having set in.

BANFF, Alta.—The Ice River Valley, a seldom-visited region of the Canadian Rockies, will be the main objective of this year's official 4-day ride by the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, July 27-30, inclusive.

The Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, founded eleven years ago to preserve and extend the trails into remote mountain regions, has long been an international order. The King and Queen of Siam have ridden many of these trails, and are among the order's honorary membership.

Job Chances Better For College Grads

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Students and graduates of Harvard university are well up in "The Big Parade" back to business normalcy, according to statistics from the business school. Figures showed a decided increase both in the number of men who have secured employment and in the amount of wages they receive as compared to last year.

With graduation still a month away, 200 members of the senior class of 375 already have been offered definite positions.

VEILED BOYCOTT URGED AGAINST FOREIGN GOODS

(International News Service)

BERLIN—Thinly veiled boycott agitation against all imported produce and articles in Germany has been declared by the NSBO, the Nazi works' organizations representing 10,000,000 persons.

The plea that Germans buy only German goods expressly states that the measure is "not an appeal to boycott" foreign goods. In the same breath, however, it is urged that only goods of German origin be purchased by the members of the organization.

"Germans, buy only from Germans" and "Germans, buy only German goods" are the principal pleas in the appeal.

After these sentences, the appeal says:

"Our export industry also is the basis for better wages and more buying power in the country."

FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

PATIENCE EFFECTIVE PREVENTING STRIKES

(International News Service)

DENVER, June 15.—The old injunction to "count 100 first" has been as effective in preventing strikes in Colorado as it is supposed to be in keeping fists from flying in a private disagreement. Since 1915, the state has had a law compelling disputants to give the state industrial commission 30 days notice before calling a strike or effecting a lockout.

Labor leaders and industrialists agree that this legislation is largely responsible for that fact that in the last 19 years but $210,000 has been appropriated by the legislature in suppressing uprisings. During the preceeding 19 years, $2,250,000 in bonds were issued to cover such expenses.

In the purest air, says a doctor, there is rubbish. The radio, evidently is not entirely an unmixed blessing.

Famed Hoquiam Frog Has Made Last Croak

(International News Service)

HOQUIAM, Wash.—After tearing up part of the city hall and boring into the foundation in an effort to liberate an imprisoned frog whose croakings bothered city hall workers, the doleful croakings have mysteriously been silenced and Miss Ola Hall, city clerk, is worried. She fears it is ill, hungry or a victim of starvation.

The frog brought nationwide attention to Hoquiam and, according to Miss Hall, has done more to bolster post revenues here than the airmail. The government should build the frog a monument, she avows.

LIVESTOCK SALES SHOW GOOD GAIN

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON—American farmers' income from livestock sales to the packing industry gained $73,000,000 in the first four months of 1934, compared to the corresponding period in 1933, according to an announcement of the Institute of American Meat Packers. This increase was attributed to a greater volume of business and a higher purchasing price.

'Hex' Testimony Is Being Heard

Strange Tale Of Weird Witchcraft Is Heard In Court At Ebensburg, Penna.

REPUTED WEALTHY WOMAN TESTIFIES

(International News Service)

EBENSBURG, Pa., June 15.—One of the strangest tales of weird witchcraft told by Miss Helen Senko, Brownstown, is a matter of record today as defense attorneys reopened their battle to free Mrs. Jennie Viscount, reputed wealthy member of Westmont's residential colony, of fortune-telling charges.

Miss Ciscount was expected to testify today in her own defense in Cambria county court's most sensational trial which parallels famous "hex" cases in the east. Damaging evidence against her has been furnished by commonwealth witnesses.

Miss Senko told of how the accused attempted to remove a "spell" under which the girl was supposed to be living.

Plot To Kill

She testified to the fortune-teller's alleged efforts to unite her and her "boy friend" through weird rites and claimed Mrs. Viscount told her the boy's family was plotting to have her killed. The woman's offer to "unhex" her for $50 was finally cut to $32, she said.

When testimony brought out that human bone dust was used to remove "spells" and the fortune-teller buried "bad luck" powders under a sidewalk, Judge Samuel L. Reed asked:

"Do you want your boy friend back, now?"

She replied:

"No, not me; not that guy. But if I am to have this spell broken, I've got to have him back for awhile.

Miss Alice Hauber, chief prosecuting witness, claiming she paid Mrs. Viscount $200 when the latter informed her "someone is going to die" and "there's a plot against your son's life," testified to strange journies through cemeteries with the defendant; unearthing of pin and coffin-nail pierced hearts; burning incense; feet stamping and cursing by the defendants to frighten "evil spirits."

Twenty-Four From Here Gather At Cascade Park Last Evening For Picnic

Another crowd of seventh ward people gathered in the Cascade Park grove Thursday evening for a picnic.

Last night's affair, attended by the Loyal Workers of the Madison Avenue Christian church and their families, was in the form of a steak fry at 6:30 o'clock. Supper was served to twenty-four guests. Later the park amusements were enjoyed.

The success of the affair was largely due to the work of the committee. Mrs. E. M. Jones, chairman, Mrs. Godfrey Richards and Miss Susy Park.

They're giving Father a break on Sunday. Somebody, perhaps the same lad that started "Be Kind To Animals Week" hit upon the idea several years ago of having a "Fathers Day" and picked out a Sunday that wasn't being used to advance any other particular hobby and there you are.

So Sunday is Fathers Day. Well, well, think of that children. A chance to show the old boy that you really appreciate him. A chance to remind him that he is something more than a cash register or a base of supplies.

There won't be any special music for the day. He couldn't stand it. Nor will any of the pastors go very far out of the way to eulogize the old man in their sermons. After all you can't expect too much.

Its just Fathers Day. But there's such a lot of ways you can give him the breaks. For example, how about letting him get the first shot at the Sunday paper. Or let him have the car for the afternoon. Or giving him the outside cut of the roast on Sunday. It won't hurt to pamper him on one day in the year.

Humanely enough they didn't set the first of the month as Fathers Day. That's his day anyway when the bills come in for hats and coats and roller skates and gasoline. Nor did they set it the last of the month for that's when he commences wondering just what the toll will be.

No sir they set it in the middle of the month, when he's free of one set of bills and not started worrying about the others. Better do something about it. Send him a pair of socks or a shirt, or a necktie or a pipe. Of course you can charge it to him, but then think of the sentiment.

Fathers Day. Not to be compared to Mothers Day of course. And thus far nobody has suggested him a corsage. "Say It With Flowers" has been hanged to "Say It With Socks and Neckties."

But seriously, it won't hurt you a bit to remember the old gentleman. After losing most of his hair and a lot of his sunny disposition worrying how he would get you through school, after being the patsy of the family for fifty one weeks, it isn't much of a break to remember him on Fathers Day.

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

Matthew 28:19, 20—"Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

(The international uniform lesson on the above topic for June 17 is Matthew 28:1-20, the Golden Text being vs. 19, 20, "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world")

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

In concluding this six months study of the Gospel of Matthew we may remind ourselves of how this Gospel of the Kingdom deals with (1) the Person of the King 1:1-4:16; (2) the Preaching of the Kingdom 4:17-16:20; (3) the Passion of the King 16:21-27:66; and how in this final chapter (4) the Power of the King 28:1-20.

Before his death, our Lord prophesied his death and resurrection, saying of the laying down of his life, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again". Paul speaks of this as the "the power of his resurrection". No human eye saw the manifestation of that power. No human hand had any part in his resurrection. This was exclusively the work of God. Humanity in the person of the blessed Virgin Mary might have part in his birth, and the persons of wicked men had part in accomplishing his death. But the resurrection is repeatedly referred to as exclusively and peculiarly the work of God: "God both raised the Lord, and will raise up us through his power." "Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead: and behold he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you." Thus the angel of the Lord announced the glad news of the resurrection to the women who had come in tears and fears in the early dawn of the first Easter day to complete the embalming of the corpse of their supposedly dead Master. Truly "it began to dawn" with this message! With it the valley of the shadow of death was flooded with the radiance that brought life and immortality to light. In this light fear was displaced with joy. "They departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy."

Privilege and Duty

Privilege and duty are beautifully connected in the angel's message: "Come, see—Go quickly and tell." Thus privilege creates responsibility and vision creates venture. Furthermore privilege thus acted upon brings added privilege and blessing. for, "as they went to tell his disciples, behold Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him". If our religious experience is not an ever enlarging and progressive one it is because we have failed to act upon what we have already received.

A World Program

Forty days after Easter, Jesus having appeared to his disciples on various occasions, led them out to the Mount of Olives where he was strangely separated from them as he ascended into heaven with his hands outstretched in blessing upon them. His parting words were his commission to his disciples to evangelize the whole world through the preaching of his gospel with the assurance that all power was in heaven and in earth and the further assurance that they would have his unfailing presence with them to communicate this power throughout the ages. Here is a King indeed with a world program for all ages with power commensurate with his subjects' needs and the task's demands: "All power", "all nations", "all things", "always".

They're giving Father a break on Sunday. Somebody, perhaps the same lad that started "Be Kind To Animals Week" hit upon the idea several years ago of having a "Fathers Day" and picked out a Sunday that wasn't being used to advance any other particular hobby and there you are.

So Sunday is Fathers Day. Well, well, think of that children. A chance to show the old boy that you really appreciate him. A chance to remind him that he is something more than a cash register or a base of supplies.

There won't be any special music for the day. He couldn't stand it. Nor will any of the pastors go very far out of the way to eulogize the old man in their sermons. After all you can't expect too much.

Its just Fathers Day. But there's such a lot of ways you can give him the breaks. For example, how about letting him get the first shot at the Sunday paper. Or let him have the car for the afternoon. Or giving him the outside cut of the roast on Sunday. It won't hurt to pamper him on one day in the year.

Humanely enough they didn't set the first of the month as Fathers Day. That's his day anyway when the bills come in for hats and coats and roller skates and gasoline. Nor did they set it the last of the month for that's when he commences wondering just what the toll will be.

No sir they set it in the middle of the month, when he's free of one set of bills and not started worrying about the others. Better do something about it. Send him a pair of socks or a shirt, or a necktie or a pipe. Of course you can charge it to him, but then think of the sentiment.

Fathers Day. Not to be compared to Mothers Day of course. And thus far nobody has suggested him a corsage. "Say It With Flowers" has been hanged to "Say It With Socks and Neckties."

But seriously, it won't hurt you a bit to remember the old gentleman. After losing most of his hair and a lot of his sunny disposition worrying how he would get you through school, after being the patsy of the family for fifty one weeks, it isn't much of a break to remember him on Fathers Day.

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

Matthew 28:19, 20—"Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

(The international uniform lesson on the above topic for June 17 is Matthew 28:1-20, the Golden Text being vs. 19, 20, "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world")

In concluding this six months study of the Gospel of Matthew we may remind ourselves of how this Gospel of the Kingdom deals with Gospel of the Kingdom deals with (1) the Person of the King 1:1-4:16; (2) the Preaching of the Kingdom 4:17-16:20; (3) the Passion of the King 16:21-27:66; and how in this final chapter (4) the Power of the King 28:1-20.

Before his death, our Lord prophesied his death and resurrection, saying of the laying down of his life, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again". Paul speaks of this as the "power of his resurrection". No human eye saw the manifestation of that power. No human hand had any part in his resurrection. This was exclusively the work of God. Humanity in the person of the blessed Virgin Mary might have part in his birth, and the persons of wicked men had part in accomplishing his death. But the resurrection is repeatedly referred to as exclusively and peculiarly the work of God: "God both raised the Lord, and will raise up us through his power." "Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead: and behold he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you." Thus the angel of the Lord announced the glad news of the resurrection to the women who had come in tears and fears in the early dawn of the first Easter day to complete the embalming of the corpse of their supposedly dead Master. Truly "it began to dawn" with this message! With it the valley of the shadow of death was flooded with the radiance that brought life and immortality to light. In this light fear was displaced with joy. "They departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy."

Privilege and Duty

Privilege and duty are beautifully connected in the angel's message: "Come, see—Go quickly and tell." Thus privilege creates responsibility and vision creates venture. Furthermore privilege thus acted upon brings added privilege and blessing, for, "as they went to tell his disciples, behold Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him". If our religious experience is not an ever enlarging and progressive one it is because we have failed to act upon what we have already received.

A World Program

Forty days after Easter, Jesus having appeared to his disciples on various occasions, led them out to the Mount of Olives where he was strangely separated from them as he ascended into heaven with his hands outstretched in blessing upon them. His parting words were his commission to his disciples to evangelize the whole world through the preaching of his gospel with the assurance that all power was in heaven and in earth and the further assurance that they would have his unfailing presence with them to communicate this power throughout the ages. Here is a King indeed with a world program for all ages with power commensurate with his subjects' needs and the task's demands: "All power", "all nations", "all things", "always".

Lawrence County Farms And Farmers

EMERGENCY CROPS CAN BE PLANTED FOR HAY

Although hay prospects looked good in early spring, the dry weather has cut down seriously on the size of the crop in Lawrence county. Where red clover is fully headed out it will not grow much more, even if copious rains fall. Better quality hay will be secured by cutting clover in full bloom, and early cutting is the best way to promote a worthwhile second crop.

Where the shortage threatens to be serious, millet or Sudan grass may be sown as late as July 1 in an emergency. Success will, of course, depend on ample rainfall in the early stages of growth. Such crops have been sown in a wet summer, after harvesting an early hay crop. Some farmers may find it advantageous to sow soybeans, Sudan grass, or millet on the land prepared for buckwheat. The millet and Sudan grass should receive several hundred pounds of complete fertilizer unless the land is fairly rich.

Where hay is likely to be more urgently needed than grain, the oats, wheat, or rye may be cut for hay while still green. If cut in the milk stage, the hay is as good as timothy cut in bloom. Removing the small grain as hay may help, in a dry summer, to save the clover sown with it.

WESTFIELD LIVE-STOCK SHOW AND PICNIC

Arrangements are being completed for the second annual Westfield community live-stock show and picnic to be held June 22. The show and picnic will be held in the George Clark woods, along the Mt. Jackson-Enon Valley improved road, near Westfield church and Grange hall.

Dairy cattle from the Jersey, Guernsey, Holstein and Shorthorn breeds will be shown. There will also be classes of grade females representing these breeds.

One of the interesting cattle classes will be a production class. Individuals to be elligible for showing in this class must have either an official or a cow testing association record of 400 pounds butterfat or that equivalent in one year.

Horses will be an added attraction in the show this year. There will be classes for individual draft horses, matched teams, and mares and colts.

Farmers and their families in Lawrence county who are interested in dairy cattle or draft horses will not only have an opportunity of seeing these classes of live-stock exhibited and judged, but will also have the opportunity of enjoying a community picnic if they will plan to attend the show.

EGG CARE ESPECIALLY ESSENTIAL IN SUMMER

Warm weather at this season makes it very difficult to maintain fine egg quality. Each poultryman should do everything in his power to market his eggs in the best of condition.

Heat is very destructive of egg quality. An egg is laid at body temperature, which for the hen is about 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If the eggs are left in the nests for any length of time, and other birds sit on them the animal heat will not escape from the eggs.

Do not allow broody hens to stay in the nest any longer than is absolutely necessary. Then, too, gather the eggs about three times daily during warm weather. A good routine to follow, if it can be arranged without conflicting too much with the other work, is to gather the eggs about 9:30 or 10:00 in the morning, against just after dinner, and about the time the birds are fed at night.

Wire baskets or wire pails are very satisfactory containers for gathering eggs. These containers should be strong enough to hold their shape when being carried filled with eggs; otherwise, some of the eggs will be broken.

Remove the eggs to the cellar or wherever the eggs are held immediately after gathering. The ideal temperature for holding eggs is somewhere between 40 and 50 degrees.

A fairly high humidity is desirable. This may be increased by sprinkling a little water on the floor or by dipping burlap bags in water and then hanging them on the wall near the eggs.

As soon as the eggs have cooled down to room temperature, they should be packed. It is always a good plan to have a few egg cases in the cellar a day or two in advance. If the cases are very dry, they can absorb a little dampness from the cellar rather than from the eggs. The empty cases as well as the filled cases should be set on racks of 2 by 4 or 2 by 6 foot material.

Market the eggs twice a week during the summer. Carry the eggs to market during the coolest part of the day and also protect them from the hot sun rays while they are in transit.

CALVES ON PASTURE NEED EXTRA FEED

Pasture grass is an excellent feed for calves that are six months old or older. Shade and fresh water are also necessary for the comfort and best growth of the calves.

Too often, however, calves are turned on pasture and forgotten until fall except for an occasional salting. Many conditions may develop to keep the calves from being as thrifty in the fall as they were in the middle of the summer. The weather may become hot, the pasture dry and short, and flies bad, so that conditions are not favorable for growing good calves. These conditions must be recognized by dairymen and feeding judged accordingly.

It is often a wise plan to feed some grain to young heifers while on pasture. Equal parts of corn and oats or barley and oats usually are sufficient. High protein feeds are not necessary since pasture usually contains enough protein for the animal's needs. If pasture becomes quite short, some bran and a little linseed oil meal should be added to the home grains. Just enough grain should be fed daily to keep the calves growing normally. This will vary from 2 to 4 pounds daily, depending on the quality and quantity of the pasture.

Calves usually do better if the pasture is so located that some hay can be fed daily. Early cut, suncured, hay is best since it contains more digestible nutrients and the factors for growth and development. The hay should be fed in a rack to prevent trampling and soiling. The feeding of hay will also reduce the amount of grain necessary.

Salt is essential for growth and the health of the calf. A salt block or salt box should be so located that the calves can have access to it whenever they wish.

Many dairymen have found that calves often do better during the hot summer months if kept in a cool, well-ventilated stable during the day and turned out on pasture only at night. This will depend, of course, on the location of the pasture and the ease in handling.

Calves should not be fat but should grow normally and not receive any setbacks. If an animal has the inherited ability to produce milk there is a strong correlation between the size of a cow and her production. A cow does most of her growing prior to the time of the first calving. While she will continue to grow until 5 or 6 years of age, yet if stunted early she will seldom, if ever, reach her inherited size.

Remove the eggs to the cellar or wherever the eggs are held immediately after gathering. The ideal temperature for holding eggs is somewhere between 40 and 50 degrees.

A fairly high humidity is desirable. This may be increased by sprinkling a little water on the floor or by dipping burlap bags in water and then hanging them on the wall near the eggs.

As soon as the eggs have cooled down to room temperature, they should be packed. It is always a good plan to have a few egg cases in the cellar a day or two in advance. If the cases are very dry, they can absorb a little dampness from the cellar rather than from the eggs. The empty cases as well as the filled cases should be set on racks of 2 by 4 or 2 by 6 foot material.

Market the eggs twice a week during the summer. Carry the eggs to market during the coolest part of the day and also protect them from the hot sun rays while they are in transit.

CALVES ON PASTURE NEED EXTRA FEED

Pasture grass is an excellent feed for calves that are six months old or older. Shade and fresh water are also necessary for the comfort and best growth of the calves.

Too often, however, calves are turned on pasture and forgotten until fall except for an occasional salting. Many conditions may develop to keep the calves from being as thrifty in the fall as they were in the middle of the summer. The weather may become hot, the pasture dry and short, and flies bad, so that conditions are not favorable for growing good calves. These conditions must be recognized by dairymen and feeding judged accordingly.

It is often a wise plan to feed some grain to young heifers while on pasture. Equal parts of corn and oats or barley and oats usually are sufficient. High protein feeds are not necessary since pasture usually contains enough protein for the animal's needs. If pasture becomes quite short, some bran and a little linseed oil meal should be added to the home grains. Just enough grain should be fed daily to keep the calves growing normally. This will vary from 2 to 4 pounds daily, depending on the quality and quantity of the pasture.

Calves usually do better if the pasture is so located that some hay can be fed daily. Early cut, suncured, hay is best since it contains more digestible nutrients and the factors for growth and development. The hay should be fed in a rack to prevent trampling and soiling. The feeding of hay will also reduce the amount of grain necessary.

Salt is essential for growth and the health of the calf. A salt block or salt box should be so located that the calves can have access to it whenever they wish.

Many dairymen have found that calves often do better during the hot summer months if kept in a cool, well-ventilated stable during the day and turned out on pasture only at night. This will depend, of course, on the location of the pasture and the ease in handling.

Calves should not be fat but should grow normally and not receive any setbacks. If an animal has the inherited ability to produce milk there is a strong correlation between the size of a cow and her production. A cow does most of her growing prior to the time of the first calving. While she will continue to grow until 5 or 6 years of age, yet if stunted early she will seldom, if ever, reach her inherited size.

Lawrence County Farms And Farmers

By H. R. McCulloch, County Agent

EMERGENCY CROPS CAN BE PLANTED FOR HAY

Although hay prospects looked good in early spring, the dry weather has cut down seriously on the size of the crop in Lawrence county. Where red clover is fully headed out it will not grow much more, even if copious rains fall. Better quality hay will be secured by cutting clover in full bloom, and early cutting is the best way to promote a worthwhile second crop.

Where the shortage threatens to be serious, millet or Sudan grass may be sown as late as July 1 in an emergency. Success will, of course, depend on ample rainfall in the early stages of growth. Such crops have been sown in a wet summer, after harvesting an early hay crop. Some farmers may find it advantageous to sow soybeans, Sudan grass, or millet on the land prepared for buckwheat. The millet and Sudan grass should receive several hundred pounds of complete fertilizer unless the land is fairly rich.

Where hay is likely to be more urgently needed than grain, the oats, wheat, or rye may be cut for hay while still green. If cut in the milk stage, the hay is as good as timothy cut in bloom. Removing the small grain as hay may help, in a dry summer, to save the clover sown with it.

WESTFIELD LIVE-STOCK SHOW AND PICNIC

Arrangements are being completed for the second annual Westfield community live-stock show and picnic to be held June 22. The show and picnic will be held in the George Clark woods, along the Mt. Jackson-Enon Valley improved road, near Westfield church and Grange hall.

Dairy cattle from the Jersey, Guernsey, Holstein and Shorthorn breeds will be shown. There will also be classes of grade females representing these breeds.

One of the interesting cattle classes will be a production class. Individuals to be elligible for showing in this class must have either an official or a cow testing association record of 400 pounds butterfat or that equivalent in one year.

Horses will be an added attraction in the show this year. There will be classes for individual draft horses, matched teams, and mares and colts.

Farmers and their families in Lawrence county who are interested in dairy cattle or draft horses will not only have an opportunity of seeing these classes of live-stock exhibited and judged, but will also have the opportunity of enjoying a community picnic if they will plan to attend the show.

EGG CARE ESPECIALLY ESSENTIAL IN SUMMER

Warm weather at this season makes it very difficult to maintain fine egg quality. Each poultryman should do everything in his power to market his eggs in the best of condition.

Heat is very destructive of egg quality. An egg is laid at body temperature, which for the hen is about 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If the eggs are left in the nests for any length of time, and other birds sit on them the animal heat will not escape from the eggs.

Do not allow broody hens to stay in the nest any longer than is absolutely necessary. Then, too, gather the eggs about three times daily during warm weather. A good routine to follow, if it can be arranged without conflicting too much with the other work, is to gather the eggs about 9:30 or 10:00 in the morning, against just after dinner, and about the time the birds are fed at night.

Wire baskets or wire pails are very satisfactory containers for gathering eggs. These containers should be strong enough to hold their shape when being carried filled with eggs; otherwise, some of the eggs will be broken.

Remove the eggs to the cellar or wherever the eggs are held immediately after gathering. The ideal temperature for holding eggs is somewhere between 40 and 50 degrees.

A fairly high humidity is desirable. This may be increased by sprinkling a little water on the floor or by dipping burlap bags in water and then hanging them on the wall near the eggs.

As soon as the eggs have cooled down to room temperature, they should be packed. It is always a good plan to have a few egg cases in the cellar a day or two in advance. If the cases are very dry, they can absorb a little dampness from the cellar rather than from the eggs. The empty cases as well as the filled cases should be set on racks of 2 by 4 or 2 by 6 foot material.

Market the eggs twice a week during the summer. Carry the eggs to market during the coolest part of the day and also protect them from the hot sun rays while they are in transit.

Some Alarm In Washington Over Move By Germany

Declaring Of Moratorium For Six Months Causes Great Concern To Officials

INVESTORS WILL FEEL "PINCH"

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Germany's action in declaring a "moratorium"—regarded as a polite expression for default—on all her foreign indebtedness for six months is considered a serious matter by the administration.

Germany has somewhat over $1,000,000,000 in bonds floating about in the American investment market, and the moratorium means that the luckless American holders thereof will get no interest for six months, and probably not for a long time to come.

Despite the seriousness of the situation, Washington nevertheless is managing to get a few cynical chuckles out of the situation when it contemplates the great indignation and pained expressions going up on every side in London and Paris, and the threat of reprisals against Germany.

Big Powers Default.

Great Britain and France, the heaviest creditors of hapless Germany, have just defaulted on their obligations to the United States treasury, due today. They have, in effect, served notice that the United States need expect no further payments under the solemn treaties to pay which they signed in Washington ten years ago.

Now that the shoe is on the other foot, and they are on the receiving end of a default, there is great indignation in London and Paris, and plans are being laid to "retaliate."

That is the reason why administration officials were inclined to cynical smiles today over the German "moratorium" even as they gravely pronounced it a serious matter and studied what is to be done, if anything.

Home To Roost.

"The chickens have come home to roost," commented one high official who, of course, would not permit use of his name.

A billion dollars in German obligations, held by American investors is, it is conceded, important money, but, it was pointed out, the ten billions in French, British, Italian and other foreign obligations, now held in the U. S. treasury, is also important money—ten times as important to the American taxpayer.

Just what the American government's attitude in the German development is to be remains to be seen. If there is a formal protest by Germany's creditors—as there most certainly will be—it is probable that the United States will join in it, merely for purpose of the record. The state department has already protested to America's defaulting debtors, that is France, Britain and the rest, and in a technical sense, Germany now fails in that catagory.

Dr. Tells How He Enlisted Youngest Recruit In Army

(International News Service)

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 15.—The story of how he helped to "enlist" the youngest recruit ever to join the American Army in the history of the United States is told by Dr. John B. Nutt, local physician, who served with the medical corps in France during the world war.

The young soldier was a lusty, red-faced boy born to a French mother in a United States field hospital at Gondrecourt, France, in the fall of 1918 and listed in army records as 'private recruit."

Here is Dr. Nutts' story:

Late one afternoon officials of a private French hospital also located in Gondrecourt telephoned the army hospital to borrow an ambulance to bring a patient from a farm house near the town. A driver and orderly were dispatched with an ambulance.

On their arrival at the farm house the woman was brought out to the ambulance. A quick trip to the French hospital was made, but the patient was refused admission there.

With no where else to go, the ambulance men took the woman to the army hospital. A screened-off room was hastily prepared and in a few minutes the baby arrived.

The boy was listed as a fully-registered patient in the army hospital and records were forwarded to headquarters to that effect.

SEAL HERD BROUGHT NOISE OF "BIG CITY"

(International News Service)

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., June 15.—Residents of this town, many of whom moved here to escape the noises of the "big city", are now taking time to repent their decision.

Many people living in the beach section reported to police that they were being awakened by noises in the early hours. Patrolman Herbert C. Frazier was sent to the scene and found that seals were offshore and their barking was the cause of the excitement.

He fired a few shots in their general direction and the sea meeting dispersed.

9,717,000 soldiers were mobilized by France during the World war and of these 1,398,000 gave their lives.

BUILD IRON FENCE AROUND DENVER MINT

(International News Service)

DENVER, June 15.—A repetition of the Denver mint holdup of 1923, when unknown bandits escaped with $200,000, is becoming a more and more remote possibility as the government gradually strengthens the defenses about the gray stone building.

The latest move, announced by Superintendent Mark A. Skinner, is the construction of a 12-foot iron fence around the rear driveway of the building where armored cars call for and deliver money. Gates will be operated by electricity from inside the building.

MAY BUILD LARGEST STRATOSPHERE BALLOON

(International News Service)

MOSCOW, June 15—Proposals for bigger and better stratosphere balloons have been pouring in on the authorities ever since the record-breaking ascent and disaster of the Osoviakhim No. 1 last February. The latest project comes from the experienced builders of the Soviet's giant plane, the Maxim Gorky.

They suggest a balloon containing 50,000 cubic meters of hydrogen. If the proposal is accepted construction will begin this fall and an attempt will be made to ascend more than 25,000 meters.

ART GIVES INSIGHT ON LIFE IN TIBET

(International News Service)

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—An insight into the domestic life of the average citizen of Tibet is to be gained by viewing the various household articles, works of art and anthropological specimens now on display at the University of Michigan.

The collection of Tibetian art, one of the most extensive in the world, was obtained for the university by Dr. Walter N. Koelz during his expedition into the forbidden country.

"Despite the harsh climate and poverty, almost every Tibetian is an art lover and every home has some object highly prized for its beauty, even the beggars owning some bit of jewelry or religious equipment highly prized for its artistic value," the curator explained.

There are many deaths for which there is no exact proof of cause without an autopsy.

Kidnap Story Just a Dodge?

Horace E. Dodge, multimillionaire motor family scion, isn't seeking a haven in France to protect his children from kidnapers, as he indicated when he sailed, his estranged wife No. 2 (left) declares. "Everyone on Broadway knows the real reason," she adds; and Broadway says it is Mickey Devine, chorine, who is also in France and may become Mrs. Dodge No. 3. Miss Devine and Dodge are also shown.

Britain May Subsidize Ships To Meet Foreign Competition

(International News Service)

LONDON, June 15.—Subsidies to help British ships fight subsidized foreign competitors; loans for new ship-building—these are the proposals the government is preparing today to put before Parliament, it is understood.

The measures are partly retaliatory to increased government aid given to the American merchant marine.

Subsidies, however, will be granted to ships flying the Union Jack only on routes where there is direct competition with subsidized foreign lines.

In addition, the cabinet feels, subsidies would provide Britain with a weapon in bargaining for an all-round reduction of state grants.

Shipping subsidies are now costing the world $150,000,000 a year, it is estimated.

Loans, or guarantees of loans, are to be aimed at modernizing the British freight fleet. It is pointed out that world trade, which in 1929 was thirty per cent above the pre-war level, today is below the volume of 1913.

On the other hand, the total shipping tonnage, which in 1914 was 43,000,000, is now estimated at 64,000,000. In other words, there are nearly half again as many ships, yet less trade. It is for this reason the government favors scrapping obsolescent tonnage.

With this policy the shipping industry is not altogether in accord.

"The cause of our troubles is too little trade and too many ships," declared R. I. Dunlop, president of the chamber of shipping. "If we are to attempt to restore trade, it would be useless at the same time to stimulate the building of tonnage on an already over-glutted market."

While planning "fighting" subsidies, Britain is carefully avoiding any discrimination — for instance against foreign ships in intra-imperial trade — for fear of retaliation.

In any event, 90 per cent of empire trade, 50 per cent of sea-borne trade between the empire and foreign countries, and twenty per cent of trade among foreign countries are carried in British bottoms.

FEMININE PIONEER CHIDES DOCTOR OF 70

(International News Service)

VIENNA, June 15.—Marianna Hainisch, vice-president of the World Federation of Women, and a pioneer in the women's emancipation movement not only in Austria but in all Europe, recently celebrated her 85th birthday.

Though she is still active and quite healthy, she consulted the famous Vienna heart specialist, Prof. K. F. Wenckebach, who told her he intended to retire, as he was almost 70 years old. Marianne Hainisch shook her head and said:

"What ideas you young people get into your heads! Retiring at your age?"

So Prof. Wenchebach decided to start another ten or twenty years' activity.

The sun dance was the great annual religious ceremony common to all tribes of the plains with the exception of the Comanche and perhaps one or two others.

Some Alarm In Washington Over Move By Germany

INVESTORS WILL FEEL "PINCH"

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Germany's action in declaring a "moratorium"—regarded as a polite expression for default—on all her foreign indebtedness for six months is considered a serious matter by the administration.

Germany has somewhat over $1,000,000,000 in bonds floating about in the American investment market, and the moratorium means that the luckless American holders thereof will get no interest for six months, and probably not for a long time to come.

Despite the seriousness of the situation, Washington nevertheless is managing to get a few cynical chuckles out of the situation when it contemplates the great indignation and pained expressions going up on every side in London and Paris, and the threat of reprisals against Germany.

Big Powers Default.

Great Britain and France, the heaviest creditors of hapless Germany, have just defaulted on their obligations to the United States treasury, due today. They have, in effect, served notice that the United States need expect no further payments under the solemn treaties to pay which they signed in Washington ten years ago.

Now that the shoe is on the other foot, and they are on the receiving end of a default, there is great indignation in London and Paris, and plans are being laid to "retaliate."

That is the reason why administration officials were inclined to cynical smiles today over the German "moratorium" even as they gravely pronounced it a serious matter and studied what is to be done, if anything.

Home To Roost.

"The chickens have come home to roost," commented one high official who, of course, would not permit use of his name.

A billion dollars in German obligations, held by American investors is, it is conceded, important money, but, it was pointed out, the ten billions in French, British, Italian and other foreign obligations, now held in the U. S. treasury, is also important money—ten times as important to the American taxpayer.

Just what the American government's attitude in the German development is to be remains to be seen. If there is a formal protest by Germany's creditors—as there most certainly will be—it is probable that the United States will join in it, merely for purpose of the record. The state department has already protested to America's defaulting debtors, that is France, Britain and the rest, and in a technical sense, Germany now fails in that catagory.

Dr. Tells How He Enlisted Youngest Recruit In Army

(International News Service)

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 15.—The story of how he helped to "enlist" the youngest recruit ever to join the American Army in the history of the United States is told by Dr. John B. Nutt, local physician, who served with the medical corps in France during the world war.

The young soldier was a lusty, red-faced boy born to a French mother in a United States field hospital at Gondrecourt, France, in the fall of 1918 and listed in army records as 'private recruit."

Here is Dr. Nutts' story:

Late one afternoon officials of a private French hospital also located in Gondrecourt telephoned the army hospital to borrow an ambulance to bring a patient from a farm house near the town. A driver and orderly were dispatched with an ambulance.

On their arrival at the farm house the woman was brought out to the ambulance. A quick trip to the French hospital was made, but the patient was refused admission there.

With no where else to go, the ambulance men took the woman to the army hospital. A screened-off room was hastily prepared and in a few minutes the baby arrived.

The boy was listed as a fully-registered patient in the army hospital and records were forwarded to headquarters to that effect.

SEAL HERD BROUGHT NOISE OF "BIG CITY"

(International News Service)

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., June 15.—Residents of this town, many of whom moved here to escape the noises of the "big city", are now taking time to repent their decision.

Many people living in the beach section reported to police that they were being awakened by noises in the early hours. Patrolman Herbert C. Frazier was sent to the scene and found that seals were offshore and their barking was the cause of the excitement.

He fired a few shots in their general direction and the sea meeting dispersed.

9,717,000 soldiers were mobilized by France during the World war and of these 1,398,000 gave their lives.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Germany's action in declaring a "moratorium"—regarded as a polite expression for default—on all her foreign indebtedness for six months is considered a serious matter by the administration.

Germany has somewhat over $1,000,000,000 in bonds floating about in the American investment market, and the moratorium means that the luckless American holders thereof will get no interest for six months, and probably not for a long time to come.

Despite the seriousness of the situation, Washington nevertheless is managing to get a few cynical chuckles out of the situation when it contemplates the great indignation and pained expressions going up on every side in London and Paris, and the threat of reprisals against Germany.

Big Powers Default.

Great Britain and France, the heaviest creditors of hapless Germany, have just defaulted on their obligations to the United States treasury, due today. They have, in effect, served notice that the United States need expect no further payments under the solemn treaties to pay which they signed in Washington ten years ago.

Now that the shoe is on the other foot, and they are on the receiving end of a default, there is great indignation in London and Paris, and plans are being laid to "retaliate."

That is the reason why administration officials were inclined to cynical smiles today over the German "moratorium" even as they gravely pronounced it a serious matter and studied what is to be done, if anything.

Home To Roost.

"The chickens have come home to roost," commented one high official who, of course, would not permit use of his name.

A billion dollars in German obligations, held by American investors is, it is conceded, important money, but, it was pointed out, the ten billions in French, British, Italian and other foreign obligations, now held in the U. S. treasury, is also important money—ten times as important to the American taxpayer.

Just what the American government's attitude in the German development is to be remains to be seen. If there is a formal protest by Germany's creditors—as there most certainly will be—it is probable that the United States will join in it, merely for purpose of the record. The state department has already protested to America's defaulting debtors, that is France, Britain and the rest, and in a technical sense, Germany now fails in that catagory.

Dr. Tells How He Enlisted Youngest Recruit In Army

(International News Service)

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 15.—The story of how he helped to "enlist" the youngest recruit ever to join the American Army in the history of the United States is told by Dr. John B. Nutt, local physician, who served with the medical corps in France during the world war.

The young soldier was a lusty, red-faced boy born to a French mother in a United States field hospital at Gondrecourt, France, in the fall of 1918 and listed in army records as 'private recruit."

Here is Dr. Nutts' story:

Late one afternoon officials of a private French hospital also located in Gondrecourt telephoned the army hospital to borrow an ambulance to bring a patient from a farm house near the town. A driver and orderly were dispatched with an ambulance.

On their arrival at the farm house the woman was brought out to the ambulance. A quick trip to the French hospital was made, but the patient was refused admission there.

With no where else to go, the ambulance men took the woman to the army hospital. A screened-off room was hastily prepared and in a few minutes the baby arrived.

The boy was listed as a fully-registered patient in the army hospital and records were forwarded to headquarters to that effect.

SEAL HERD BROUGHT NOISE OF "BIG CITY"

(International News Service)

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., June 15.—Residents of this town, many of whom moved here to escape the noises of the "big city", are now taking time to repent their decision.

Many people living in the beach section reported to police that they were being awakened by noises in the early hours. Patrolman Herbert C. Frazier was sent to the scene and found that seals were offshore and their barking was the cause of the excitement.

He fired a few shots in their general direction and the sea meeting dispersed.

9,717,000 soldiers were mobilized by France during the World war and of these 1,398,000 gave their lives.

BUILD IRON FENCE AROUND DENVER MINT

(International News Service)

DENVER, June 15.—A repetition of the Denver mint holdup of 1923, when unknown bandits escaped with $200,000, is becoming a more and more remote possibility as the government gradually strengthens the defenses about the gray stone building.

The latest move, announced by Superintendent Mark A. Skinner, is the construction of a 12-foot iron fence around the rear driveway of the building where armored cars call for and deliver money. Gates will be operated by electricity from inside the building.

MAY BUILD LARGEST STRATOSPHERE BALLOON

(International News Service)

MOSCOW, June 15—Proposals for bigger and better stratosphere balloons have been pouring in on the authorities ever since the record-breaking ascent and disaster of the Osoviakhim No. 1 last February. The latest project comes from the experienced builders of the Soviet's giant plane, the Maxim Gorky.

They suggest a balloon containing 50,000 cubic meters of hydrogen. If the proposal is accepted construction will begin this fall and an attempt will be made to ascend more than 25,000 meters.

ART GIVES INSIGHT ON LIFE IN TIBET

(International News Service)

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—An insight into the domestic life of the average citizen of Tibet is to be gained by viewing the various household articles, works of art and anthropological specimens now on display at the University of Michigan.

The collection of Tibetian art, one of the most extensive in the world, was obtained for the university by Dr. Walter N. Koelz during his expedition into the forbidden country.

"Despite the harsh climate and poverty, almost every Tibetian is an art lover and every home has some object highly prized for its beauty, even the beggars owning some bit of jewelry or religious equipment highly prized for its artistic value," the curator explained.

There are many deaths for which there is no exact proof of cause without an autopsy.

Britain May Subsidize Ships To Meet Foreign Competition

(International News Service)

LONDON, June 15.—Subsidies to help British ships fight subsidized foreign competitors; loans for new ship-building—these are the proposals the government is preparing today to put before Parliament, it is understood.

The measures are partly retaliatory to increased government aid given to the American merchant marine.

Subsidies, however, will be granted to ships flying the Union Jack only on routes where there is direct competition with subsidized foreign lines.

In addition, the cabinet feels, subsidies would provide Britain with a weapon in bargaining for an all-round reduction of state grants.

Shipping subsidies are now costing the world $150,000,000 a year, it is estimated.

Loans, or guarantees of loans, are to be aimed at modernizing the British freight fleet. It is pointed out that world trade, which in 1929 was thirty per cent above the pre-war level, today is below the volume of 1913.

On the other hand, the total shipping tonnage, which in 1914 was 43,000,000, is now estimated at 64,000,000. In other words, there are nearly half again as many ships, yet less trade. It is for this reason the government favors scrapping obsolescent tonnage.

With this policy the shipping industry is not altogether in accord.

"The cause of our troubles is too little trade and too many ships," declared R. I. Dunlop, president of the chamber of shipping. "If we are to attempt to restore trade, it would be useless at the same time to stimulate the building of tonnage on an already over-glutted market."

While planning "fighting" subsidies, Britain is carefully avoiding any discrimination — for instance against foreign ships in intra-imperial trade — for fear of retaliation.

In any event, 90 per cent of empire trade, 50 per cent of sea-borne trade between the empire and foreign countries, and twenty per cent of trade among foreign countries are carried in British bottoms.

FEMININE PIONEER CHIDES DOCTOR OF 70

(International News Service)

VIENNA, June 15.—Marianna Hainisch, vice-president of the World Federation of Women, and a pioneer in the women's emancipation movement not only in Austria but in all Europe, recently celebrated her 85th birthday.

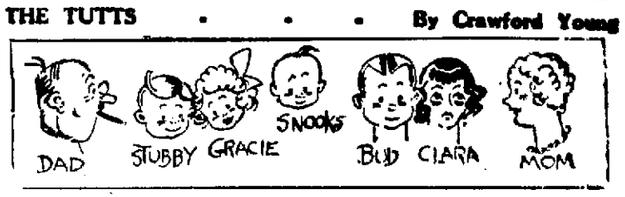

Though she is still active and quite healthy, she consulted the famous Vienna heart specialist, Prof. K. F. Wenckebach, who told her he intended to retire, as he was almost 70 years old. Marianne Hainisch shook her head and said:

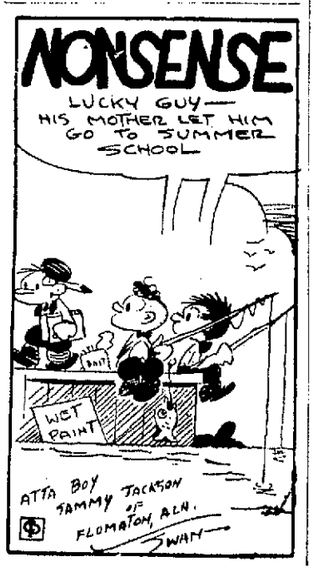

"What ideas you young people get into your heads! Retiring at your age?"

So Prof. Wenchebach decided to start another ten or twenty years' activity.

The sun dance was the great annual religious ceremony common to all tribes of the plains with the exception of the Comanche and perhaps one or two others.

JUDD HOON SWINGS AN AX

by

John Angus Mackaye

The Story of a Boy Who Knew How To Keep a Secret

A McClure R.P.A. Story

As he stumbled, Judd was at him. There was a scream as the ax lifted and then silence, except for the panting of the giant.

HE WAS obviously a youth with a man's body. The face was boyish with an innocence that might almost be simple. His smile was ingenuously alluring. His legs looked like two kegs supporting a barrel for a body, a pumpkin for a head and neck, unnecessary. Sunburned between the freckles, he looked to be built for labor. Just the kind of henchman for whom Rainey Kerrs had been looking to do a large job of woodchopping. Kerrs made this inventory as the boy ambled towards the farmhouse. Seeing two men seated on the porch the stranger stopped, took off his battered hat and drawled:

"I kin work, mister."

"What can you do?" To be impressive Kerrs snapped this.

"Chores, most any kind."

"Get paid for working?" Kerrs tried to be facetious for the benefit of his guest, sitting beside him.

"Got fifty cents oncet."

"What did you do with it?"

"Got it yit."

"Let me see?"

"Naw, you might wanta take it off'n me."

That is how Rainey Kerrs und Judd Hoon met. Rainey, as always, looking for a bargain in labor and Judd strictly on the defensive. The other man, with the Van Dyke beard and the riding costume, was a disapproving spectator of the meeting. He was a friend of the young farmer and his wife and slightly older than either. In the city hospital where Mrs. Kerrs had put in four years at nursing school, he had been a physician. To the young nurse he had been very attentive until she married the chum of her country school days. Since then, apparently he had been the friend of both.

In his opening, feint and parry conversation with Kerrs, the youth with the giant's body paid no attention, more than a sidelong glance, to the doctor on the porch. Much like a good dog who seems, instinctively, to know the dog lover from the man who gives dogs kicks. The distrust seemed to be mutual, for the doctor showed disapproval when the farmer invited the youth to eat in the kitchen.

Mrs. Letty Kerrs, the farmer's wife, saw to it that the newcomer got washed up at the kitchen sink, which seemed quite natural to the boy. Yellow soap did not dismay him and he accepted a towel with grace. With pondering, wistful eyes, like those of a six months old baby, he watched the woman as he dried himself.

"What's yaur name?" she asked.

"Judd....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....from Hoon Hollow."

Her countenance was unmoved but laughter rippled within her and her eyes danced. She wondered if all giants had simple minds. With a face as unmoved as her own, he exploded:

"You're good lookin'....an' kind....like my dawg....had plenty ears an' no tail.....wagged his ears when he laffed.....my dawg did."

He moved to the table and ate, prodigiously. Without a word as to wages he began to make himself at home, helping the woman to clean up and wash dishes after dinner was over for the family. He seemed to take it for granted they needed him.

Rainey Kerrs had just come into his own. His father had died two years before, leaving a dilapidated farm and a competence in securities and cash to his only son, after a miserly life. He had driven the boy hard as he drove everybody and everything under him. This had given the young man a distaste for farm drudgery. Young Kerrs had modernized the place since he took command and his gentle, young wife had loosened up his idea as to tight purse strings. The niggard trend did not come naturally but was imposed by the cheap way in which his father rated him in wages while he slaved. He clung to his money because he thought it was the only thing giving him power to avoid what he disliked.

His wife Letty was country bred but her four years in a city hospital had polished her and the male surgical ward had acted as a wire cutter on the barbed entanglements every maiden puts up, at first, before a man. Her body had a compactness suggesting strength, with a skin soft and clean as the petals of a morning glory in the risen sun. The sheen of ripe wheat glowed in her hair which canopied eyes like two of the blue bells of Scotland. From rather a large mouth came a firm, clear voice, muted by days and nights of seeing "quiet" on the risers of hospital steps and "silence" on the lintels of ward doors. A beckoning voice towards which men leaned, and especially Dr. Bruff Graeber since he first heard it in the throat of a young nurse.

Young Rainey Kerrs suspected nobody and permitted Graeber the freedom of his house and farm and Graeber took it. But the weak mouth, veiled by the Van Dyke, had whispered, more than once, that such surroundings were no background to the woman who was mistress of the farm. Her beauty, charm and talents were meant for other places to which he could lead her and where he would care for her in a befitting manner.

To Letty, even with her city training, these were simply overdrawn compliments. She never thought this friend would try to steal her from her husband. Yet, cunningly, the hypnotic doctor would refer to the miserly strain in the Kerrs family and to his own offhandedness. He was pushing his suit, hotly, with Letty when Judd Hoon came. Although disliking his remarks, Letty merely thought it was his way of looking at things. Her husband was too straightforward and too busy to see or suspect anything. The doctor was an honored friend.

The more Rainey Kerrs saw of his new chore boy the more he liked him. Somehow, vaguely, he pictured in this castaway a caricature of himself when, almost without pay and usually in old clothes, he had slaved for his father. The only difference was, this boy was a born woodsman, used to the outdoors, familiar with animals and trees, inured to the waste places by day or night, at any season. Simple according to civilization's rating but wise in taking care of himself.

Looking like the flotsam left by a great flood the pile of lumber from old chicken houses, wagon sheds, granaries and barns razed by the young man since his father's death made an impressive mound. It did not seem to overawe Judd when Rainey led him there, set him at the block to start chopping up the smaller stuff. Judd's hands were friendly with the ax. Rainey watched him work, methodically, slowly and without effort.

Three days later, on bigger stuff, Rainey took the end of a crosscut saw, opposite Judd. He was amazed at the pull the kid put into his end and the knack he had of getting everything out of the belly of the tool as it bit a deep carf. The boy made Rainey sweat. He forced his boss to work harder than he had in years. Judd did not seem to realize this. Rainey was glad the boy did not seem to know that in this one thing, at least, he was a better man. The jagged mound dwindled. For two days they worked and spoke only necessary words. On the third day of sawing, at supper time, as he gave the order to stop, Rainey said, admiringly:

"Judd, you're an honest-to-goodness sawyer."

The barrel bodied youth nodded, turned towards supper and said, calmly:

"Yep, and if I could on'y fizz like sody I'd be wi' th' circus."

While eating, Rainey plied his laborer with questions. Judd said he was an orphan from Hoon Hollow. There he had chored for everybody, from herding community cows to sweeping out the schoolhouse and cutting wood for the preacher. He was friendly with all animals and wild life and claimed to be intimate with chipmunks which, he said, are 'cute cussers when crossed'.

Rainey knew Hoon Hollow by repute. A partisan place where they hated intruders, mostly intermarried, disregarded such laws and codes as were inconvenient and classed all outsiders as "yinks" who were ignorant of this exclusive paradise. It was a narrow region of tumble-down shacks, weedy truck patches, poor farms and superstitious people who had little money and less worry. From this recital, the forlorn boy got even more of Rainey's sympathy.

Judd would do anything for Letty Kerrs. All the house chores he took upon himself to make things easier for her. Judd seemed almost to anticipate her wishes or commands, so eagerly did he watch, to aid her. It was the absolute devotion of a good dog with the human element added to make it superlative. As the days wore on it was evident he would cheerfully have died for his mistress. Never before had he lived in a real home with a steady job and kind treatment. He never mentioned wages.

When it rained Judd placidly wheelbarrowed grain to make chop remarking as the cause of the downpour:

"U-m-m, somebuddy's tromped on a bulltoad. Trompin' 'em allus brings rain. Nobuddy should tromp on bulltoads."

It was at this stage of his sojourn that Judd first spoke with Dr. Bruff Graeber. The youthful colossus was at the pump, one evening, getting many buckets of water when the doctor rode into the yard. He rode straight at the boy.

"Out of the way there," he snarled and made as if to ride down the boy. Judd went round the pump to put it between himself and the horseman. Like all giants he was slow to anger.

"Take this horse, you nut," and the doctor swung from his saddle.

"Chipmunks eat nuts.....they're cute cussers.....chipmunks is .....when they're crossed.....cute cussers, like you.....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

"You're impudent," and the doctor advanced with raised riding crop. With an amazingly quick movement for one of his size, Judd took a stride to meet him, wrested the whip from him with one dexterous twist and broke it across his knee.

"Chipmunks thinks they own ever'thin'....the earth an' th' trees ....an' th' fences.....lissen oncet.....lissen.....if y' git a chipmunk down oncet.....you've got 'im.....I knows chipmunks..... I kin handle 'em....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

Judd went back to his water buckets. Turning, he said again:

"'Tend yer hoss ye'self." Turning his back to the infuriated man he went on pumping water. The curious thing was the doctor looked after his horse and said nothing to Letty or Rainey about the encounter. The hired man spoke to nobody about it.

The following day, while washing dishes after supper, Judd confided to his mistress:

"Looks like a sad preacher....th' chipmunk man....preachers is allus sad.....sad frum th' ol' country.....killed a peddler there.... killed a peddler.....an' stole his pack."

"Who looks like a preacher?" asked the puzzled Letty.

"The cute cusser.....like a chipmunk.....comes on a hoss."

It was the first realization Letty had that Judd did not like her complimentary friend, the doctor.

"Why, Judd, he's an old friend."

"Cusses like a chipmunk.....I ain't crossed 'im....yit."

The wood pile had vanished and by this time Judd was cutting trees close to where the bridle path led through the woods. Deft with an ax, used to the job, he toppled and trimmed with a tireless persistency. And yet he took time off for his own queer inclinations. One of these fancies was a great hole in the ground, which he excavated at leisure. He bottomed and lined it with small branches from the trees he felled so easily. It was to be his larder, filled with apples, cabbage, potatoes and other necessities which might be required in times of stress during a hard winter. Undoubtedly it was the squirrel's hoarding idea transmuted from instinct into intelligence goaded by times of need in the past. Judd never had a home he could remember. Now he was comfortable for the first time in his life and yet—there was a fear that things would not always go so smoothly. They never had in the past and he was getting ready, slowly but surely. He would have a larder if everything else failed.

In Hoon Hollow they could not give because they did not have but they shared their pitiful allowances. "Missy," as Judd called Letty, always gave him plenty and he adored her for this. Both she and Rainey were kind to him, a tolerance he had never known and that touched him so deeply it was beyond expression for him. He could only show it. The occasion had not arisen when he could prove what struggled in his mind, as gratitude. But it was there, however deeply covered. Judd had no thought of theft as he prepared to fill his larder hole from Kerrs' fields. They could share with him. It would be merely by his foresight the hoard was buried. It was a great pit he dug beside the edge of the wood where he chopped the trees.

Letty had other things to take her attention so that the evident hostility between the hired man and the friend of the family did not dwell long in her mind. On the market page of a newspaper was an item telling of a shortage of eggs in the city and Rainey and she were in the wholesale egg business. She was mistress of a real chicken farm. Down river hens had failed in their duty and prices were soaring. She advised Rainey to get in communication with someone in the populous center and sell direct. Rainey's pet extravagance, since their marriage, was a fine car and this would be a rare chance to take a trip to the city. Letty would stay home, as she liked to do, and look after things while he was away. He could start the next morning. Dr. Graeber was present while this was being discussed and told his friend, Rainey, it would be a real business stroke.

The doctor also saw, with satisfaction, a chance to put in a stroke for himself. He got few chances to talk alone with Letty and he was always maneuvering for a chance. Rainey was never far away nor for long. The trip of the farmer would give him a clear field to press his suit. He felt no compunction in laying plans to steal the wife of his friend. He was of the type whose interest wanes once possession is gained. Neither Letty nor Rainey had any thought of what was burning in the furnace of the doctor's mind when they said goodnight to him that evening, as he mounted to ride home.

As Rainey motored to the distant town Dr. Bruff Graeber was letting it be known among his acquaintances he had been called to make a trip which might take several days or even weeks. Curiously, he said nothing about this to Mrs. Kerrs when he called the same day.

"I can't understand, Letty, why you stay here like some old apple woman," said the doctor getting fast to his point.

"Why, Bruff, what a comparison to make."

"I could take you to all the lovely places in the earth and make you happy and it would make me happy to do it."

"Bruff Graeber, you must not say such things to me nor think them."

"You'll fade away in this place. I'm telling you the truth. You ought to be where your charm and personality would shine and outshine all other women. You're made for it—to be a queen."

"Are you crazy?"

"Yes, crazy. Crazy about you. Crazy since I first met you in the hospital. Crazier when you married this clod. Now I'm crazy...."

"You insult my husband and you insult me by doing it."

"Your husband! He'd be nothing if it were not for you."

"Leave my house!"

"You're going with me. You're going tonight, before your.... husband ...comes back. Think it over and you'll see I'm right. You'll be willing to come. I love you as no other man could and I think you love me."

Letty, dumfounded, alarmed and ashamed, ran into the house and climbed to her room, breathless. She was in a panic. It seemed as if all the conventions had been torn to shreds. This best friend and adviser had suddenly become a menace. Perhaps all men were like him. All men—except Rainey. The city must be a cesspool and she had not found it out, cloistered in a hospital.

The doctor went his way, humming to himself. They all acted that way at first. He was sure of his power. She would go with him that night. As he reached the edge of the wood through which went the bridle path, there was a strange sound in the air. It was almost like howling and yet rhythmic. It had the measure of a bartaking the place of drum throbs. Judd was felling a great tree with skill and ease. The noise was his singing, Judd's idea of singing. The doctor finally caught the words, repeated over and over:

"I boated up t' Dordrecht,
"The Dutchmen called it Dort;
"Then tacked for Fortaleza,
"A shark infested port.
"Rolled down to San Heronimo,
"They said 'It's Saint Jerome.'
I slit my nose at all o' 'em
"And—sailed—back—home."

The last word was stretched into what was almost a long drawn scream. It was the only word in all the verse Judd understood—home. The rest of the chant was meaningless to him. The contribution to Hoon Hollow of some vagrant son who had returned from far afloat and learned by Judd syllable by syllable. Always wanting a home, Judd began to think he now had one and he stressed the word as if it were honey in his mouth.

For some time the doctor watched the giant work. He had a notion to taunt him but he wielded the ax with such skill and ease he reconsidered. There was a memory of the riding crop incident slumbering in the doctor's brain. Judd had lighted a fire close to the great branch-lined hole and the doctor wondered what the pit might be for. It looked so like a grave. He shivered.

"This fool might be dangerous," he thought and pushed his horse into the bridle path.

When the giant was through he put his ax under some bark in the lee of a felled trunk to protect it in the traditional woods fashion. He had let the fire die down and did not scatter the coals. Then he ambled towards the house and supper.

When the giant reached the house, he was uneasy at not seeing "Missy," as he called Mrs. Kerrs, who usually saw to it he got enough to eat and he was a good trencherman. But he did his chores and started for his truck room.

At the top of the stairs there was a sound that disturbed him and caused him to pause.

Somebody was weeping softly. He listened until he located the grief as being in Missy's room. Judd began to weave his body from side to side, uneasily. He never wept and it always affected him strangely, in others. When he realized that Missy must be in tears, hurt, afraid, or in danger, it shrivelled him to the marrow. The weaving became almost grotesque. He did not move his feet but the rest of his body swayed in a figure of eight motion. It was his way of crying out, in sympathy. Voiceless comradeship, like that of a fine dog. Judd had never presumed to approach the private rooms. Urged by his almost overwhelming devotion to Missy, who had been so good to him, he tiptoed to the door and timidly rapped.

"Who's there?" Very evidently from the tone, Letty was really alarmed. She had forgotten about Judd and thought it was Bruff Graeber come to force her from home.

"Jes' Judd.....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....somethin' bad, Missy?"

Mrs. Kerrs opened the door and the evidences of her grief were plain, even to the prosaic boy. His body began to weave again.

"Kin Judd help?"

She had never thought of him. The boy might be a defense. If she could keep him around, perhaps Graeber would be afraid to do anything.

"Judd, you must never tell anyone you saw me crying."

"Hoon Hollow folks say nothin'.....'bout nothin'....tell nothin' t' nobuddy....in Hoon Hollow....secrets is secrets."

"Judd, this is a Hoon Hollow secret."

Letty, in her room, heard Judd go downstairs and move about the kitchen. She heard him go outside and walk away. He went round the house and she could not follow him, in the dusk, from her window. It made her feel afraid again. Perhaps he had not understood what she had asked him to do. She waited to hear him return. But the minutes piled one on another and he did not come She began to fear. She locked herself in the room, lest Graeber come and Judd be away. Her self control was giving way again. Graeber would force her to go with him and nothing would explain the situation to Rainey even if she managed to elude Graeber, later.

Time lengthened and there was no sound around the house. Her imagination ran riot. Country bred as she was, her fears now dominated her so that she was afraid to venture into the dark. She could neither run away nor find out what had happened to Judd. She sensed clutching hands on every side.

The telephone tinkled downstairs.

To her it sounded like a fire alarm.

It rang again. She thought it was some ruse Graeber was using to get her to come down to meet him. It continued to ring as if demanding her presence. She unlocked her door and listened, holding her breath, it sounded so loud. There was no sound but the insistent ringing of that bell. She would have to go downstairs.

"This is Mrs. Kerrs talking." What a trembling, faint and awed voice she heard as her own.

"Hello, honey. This is Rainey at Gary Crossroads and I'll be home in an hour." She was so astonished and relieved she nearly collapsed.

"Hurry, Rainey, hurry, I'm so scared here alone."

"Ain't Judd there?"

"He....he.....he went.....he went out somewhere and hasn't come back."

"Ha, ha, huntin' chipmunks, I'll bet. Comin' right home, honey."

When Judd left Letty he went down to the kitchen and prowled around muttering:

"It's yit....yit time....yit time, now....for t'yink."

He was looking for something he could not find. There was no weapon big enough for him. His hands were clutching. Softly he opened the door and went to the woodpile. No club seemed heavy enough and the woodpile suggested the ax. He was proud of that ax which Rainey had given him. It was at the edge of the woods. Loping strides took him swiftly to where the dying coals of his fire glowed. Deftly he put small pieces of bark against the embers and soon there was a blaze beginning. He took his ax from under its bark hangar and tossed it up and down in his hand.

He heard steps on the bridle path and slid behind the bole of a tree. The bulk of a man appeared, dimly, at the edge of the trees. The prowler hesitated as he saw the fire glow. There was no sound. The figure came forward. It was the chipmunk man.

The hair on Judd's neck bristled. He ground his teeth. The man came closer. Judd's eyes were blazing. His neck craned from his crouch behind the tree. The doctor paused as he came to the blaze.

With that same swiftness he had shown when taking the riding crop from Graeber Judd was in front of him, keeping the fire behind the doctor.

"Like a snake....suckin' eggs.....you yink....I've crossed ye now." It was a bellow and the doctor stepped backward from the infuriated giant. He went against the pile of earth Judd had taken from the great pit that was meant for a larder. As he stumbled Judd was at him.

There was a scream from the doctor as the ax lifted and then silence except for the panting of the giant. Judd was amazed at the inertness of the thing that lay before him. He bundled earth, flesh and ax into the hole. He did a labor of Hercules, in case some one might come along. He raked the fire over the spot where he had his larder and built a bonfire in its place.

Rainey reached home just as Judd came into the yard, laughing to himself and covered with mud.

Letty heard her husband's voice and came running downstairs.

"Judd's been out huntin' chipmunks," laughed the farmer.

"Sure," chuckled Judd. "But don't tell n'buddy. Secrets is secrets."

JUDD HOON SWINGS AN AX

by

John Angus Mackaye

The Story of a Boy Who Knew How To Keep a Secret

A McClure R.P.A. Story

As he stumbled, Judd was at him. There was a scream as the ax lifted and then silence, except for the panting of the giant.

HE WAS obviously a youth with a man's body. The face was boyish with an innocence that might almost be simple. His smile was ingenuously alluring. His legs looked like two kegs supporting a barrel for a body, a pumpkin for a head and neck, unnecessary. Sunburned between the freckles, he looked to be built for labor. Just the kind of henchman for whom Rainey Kerrs had been looking to do a large job of woodchopping. Kerrs made this inventory as the boy ambled towards the farmhouse. Seeing two men seated on the porch the stranger stopped, took off his battered hat and drawled:

"I kin work, mister."

"What can you do?" To be impressive Kerrs snapped this.

"Chores, most any kind."

"Get paid for working?" Kerrs tried to be facetious for the benefit of his guest, sitting beside him.

"Got fifty cents oncet."

"What did you do with it?"

"Got it yit."

"Let me see?"

"Naw, you might wanta take it off'n me."

That is how Rainey Kerrs und Judd Hoon met. Rainey, as always, looking for a bargain in labor and Judd strictly on the defensive. The other man, with the Van Dyke beard and the riding costume, was a disapproving spectator of the meeting. He was a friend of the young farmer and his wife and slightly older than either. In the city hospital where Mrs. Kerrs had put in four years at nursing school, he had been a physician. To the young nurse he had been very attentive until she married the chum of her country school days. Since then, apparently he had been the friend of both.

In his opening, feint and parry conversation with Kerrs, the youth with the giant's body paid no attention, more than a sidelong glance, to the doctor on the porch. Much like a good dog who seems, instinctively, to know the dog lover from the man who gives dogs kicks. The distrust seemed to be mutual, for the doctor showed disapproval when the farmer invited the youth to eat in the kitchen.

Mrs. Letty Kerrs, the farmer's wife, saw to it that the newcomer got washed up at the kitchen sink, which seemed quite natural to the boy. Yellow soap did not dismay him and he accepted a towel with grace. With pondering, wistful eyes, like those of a six months old baby, he watched the woman as he dried himself.

"What's yaur name?" she asked.

"Judd....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....from Hoon Hollow."

Her countenance was unmoved but laughter rippled within her and her eyes danced. She wondered if all giants had simple minds. With a face as unmoved as her own, he exploded:

"You're good lookin'....an' kind....like my dawg....had plenty ears an' no tail.....wagged his ears when he laffed.....my dawg did."

He moved to the table and ate, prodigiously. Without a word as to wages he began to make himself at home, helping the woman to clean up and wash dishes after dinner was over for the family. He seemed to take it for granted they needed him.

Rainey Kerrs had just come into his own. His father had died two years before, leaving a dilapidated farm and a competence in securities and cash to his only son, after a miserly life. He had driven the boy hard as he drove everybody and everything under him. This had given the young man a distaste for farm drudgery. Young Kerrs had modernized the place since he took command and his gentle, young wife had loosened up his idea as to tight purse strings. The niggard trend did not come naturally but was imposed by the cheap way in which his father rated him in wages while he slaved. He clung to his money because he thought it was the only thing giving him power to avoid what he disliked.

His wife Letty was country bred but her four years in a city hospital had polished her and the male surgical ward had acted as a wire cutter on the barbed entanglements every maiden puts up, at first, before a man. Her body had a compactness suggesting strength, with a skin soft and clean as the petals of a morning glory in the risen sun. The sheen of ripe wheat glowed in her hair which canopied eyes like two of the blue bells of Scotland. From rather a large mouth came a firm, clear voice, muted by days and nights of seeing "quiet" on the risers of hospital steps and "silence" on the lintels of ward doors. A beckoning voice towards which men leaned, and especially Dr. Bruff Graeber since he first heard it in the throat of a young nurse.

Young Rainey Kerrs suspected nobody and permitted Graeber the freedom of his house and farm and Graeber took it. But the weak mouth, veiled by the Van Dyke, had whispered, more than once, that such surroundings were no background to the woman who was mistress of the farm. Her beauty, charm and talents were meant for other places to which he could lead her and where he would care for her in a befitting manner.

To Letty, even with her city training, these were simply overdrawn compliments. She never thought this friend would try to steal her from her husband. Yet, cunningly, the hypnotic doctor would refer to the miserly strain in the Kerrs family and to his own offhandedness. He was pushing his suit, hotly, with Letty when Judd Hoon came. Although disliking his remarks, Letty merely thought it was his way of looking at things. Her husband was too straightforward and too busy to see or suspect anything. The doctor was an honored friend.

The more Rainey Kerrs saw of his new chore boy the more he liked him. Somehow, vaguely, he pictured in this castaway a caricature of himself when, almost without pay and usually in old clothes, he had slaved for his father. The only difference was, this boy was a born woodsman, used to the outdoors, familiar with animals and trees, inured to the waste places by day or night, at any season. Simple according to civilization's rating but wise in taking care of himself.

Looking like the flotsam left by a great flood the pile of lumber from old chicken houses, wagon sheds, granaries and barns razed by the young man since his father's death made an impressive mound. It did not seem to overawe Judd when Rainey led him there, set him at the block to start chopping up the smaller stuff. Judd's hands were friendly with the ax. Rainey watched him work, methodically, slowly and without effort.

Three days later, on bigger stuff, Rainey took the end of a crosscut saw, opposite Judd. He was amazed at the pull the kid put into his end and the knack he had of getting everything out of the belly of the tool as it bit a deep carf. The boy made Rainey sweat. He forced his boss to work harder than he had in years. Judd did not seem to realize this. Rainey was glad the boy did not seem to know that in this one thing, at least, he was a better man. The jagged mound dwindled. For two days they worked and spoke only necessary words. On the third day of sawing, at supper time, as he gave the order to stop, Rainey said, admiringly:

"Judd, you're an honest-to-goodness sawyer."

The barrel bodied youth nodded, turned towards supper and said, calmly:

"Yep, and if I could on'y fizz like sody I'd be wi' th' circus."

While eating, Rainey plied his laborer with questions. Judd said he was an orphan from Hoon Hollow. There he had chored for everybody, from herding community cows to sweeping out the schoolhouse and cutting wood for the preacher. He was friendly with all animals and wild life and claimed to be intimate with chipmunks which, he said, are 'cute cussers when crossed'.

Rainey knew Hoon Hollow by repute. A partisan place where they hated intruders, mostly intermarried, disregarded such laws and codes as were inconvenient and classed all outsiders as "yinks" who were ignorant of this exclusive paradise. It was a narrow region of tumble-down shacks, weedy truck patches, poor farms and superstitious people who had little money and less worry. From this recital, the forlorn boy got even more of Rainey's sympathy.

Judd would do anything for Letty Kerrs. All the house chores he took upon himself to make things easier for her. Judd seemed almost to anticipate her wishes or commands, so eagerly did he watch, to aid her. It was the absolute devotion of a good dog with the human element added to make it superlative. As the days wore on it was evident he would cheerfully have died for his mistress. Never before had he lived in a real home with a steady job and kind treatment. He never mentioned wages.

When it rained Judd placidly wheelbarrowed grain to make chop remarking as the cause of the downpour:

"U-m-m, somebuddy's tromped on a bulltoad. Trompin' 'em allus brings rain. Nobuddy should tromp on bulltoads."

It was at this stage of his sojourn that Judd first spoke with Dr. Bruff Graeber. The youthful colossus was at the pump, one evening, getting many buckets of water when the doctor rode into the yard. He rode straight at the boy.

"Out of the way there," he snarled and made as if to ride down the boy. Judd went round the pump to put it between himself and the horseman. Like all giants he was slow to anger.

"Take this horse, you nut," and the doctor swung from his saddle.

"Chipmunks eat nuts.....they're cute cussers.....chipmunks is .....when they're crossed.....cute cussers, like you.....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

"You're impudent," and the doctor advanced with raised riding crop. With an amazingly quick movement for one of his size, Judd took a stride to meet him, wrested the whip from him with one dexterous twist and broke it across his knee.

"Chipmunks thinks they own ever'thin'....the earth an' th' trees ....an' th' fences.....lissen oncet.....lissen.....if y' git a chipmunk down oncet.....you've got 'im.....I knows chipmunks..... I kin handle 'em....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

Judd went back to his water buckets. Turning, he said again:

"'Tend yer hoss ye'self." Turning his back to the infuriated man he went on pumping water. The curious thing was the doctor looked after his horse and said nothing to Letty or Rainey about the encounter. The hired man spoke to nobody about it.

The following day, while washing dishes after supper, Judd confided to his mistress:

"Looks like a sad preacher....th' chipmunk man....preachers is allus sad.....sad frum th' ol' country.....killed a peddler there.... killed a peddler.....an' stole his pack."

"Who looks like a preacher?" asked the puzzled Letty.

"The cute cusser.....like a chipmunk.....comes on a hoss."

It was the first realization Letty had that Judd did not like her complimentary friend, the doctor.

"Why, Judd, he's an old friend."

"Cusses like a chipmunk.....I ain't crossed 'im....yit."

The wood pile had vanished and by this time Judd was cutting trees close to where the bridle path led through the woods. Deft with an ax, used to the job, he toppled and trimmed with a tireless persistency. And yet he took time off for his own queer inclinations. One of these fancies was a great hole in the ground, which he excavated at leisure. He bottomed and lined it with small branches from the trees he felled so easily. It was to be his larder, filled with apples, cabbage, potatoes and other necessities which might be required in times of stress during a hard winter. Undoubtedly it was the squirrel's hoarding idea transmuted from instinct into intelligence goaded by times of need in the past. Judd never had a home he could remember. Now he was comfortable for the first time in his life and yet—there was a fear that things would not always go so smoothly. They never had in the past and he was getting ready, slowly but surely. He would have a larder if everything else failed.

In Hoon Hollow they could not give because they did not have but they shared their pitiful allowances. "Missy," as Judd called Letty, always gave him plenty and he adored her for this. Both she and Rainey were kind to him, a tolerance he had never known and that touched him so deeply it was beyond expression for him. He could only show it. The occasion had not arisen when he could prove what struggled in his mind, as gratitude. But it was there, however deeply covered. Judd had no thought of theft as he prepared to fill his larder hole from Kerrs' fields. They could share with him. It would be merely by his foresight the hoard was buried. It was a great pit he dug beside the edge of the wood where he chopped the trees.

Letty had other things to take her attention so that the evident hostility between the hired man and the friend of the family did not dwell long in her mind. On the market page of a newspaper was an item telling of a shortage of eggs in the city and Rainey and she were in the wholesale egg business. She was mistress of a real chicken farm. Down river hens had failed in their duty and prices were soaring. She advised Rainey to get in communication with someone in the populous center and sell direct. Rainey's pet extravagance, since their marriage, was a fine car and this would be a rare chance to take a trip to the city. Letty would stay home, as she liked to do, and look after things while he was away. He could start the next morning. Dr. Graeber was present while this was being discussed and told his friend, Rainey, it would be a real business stroke.

The doctor also saw, with satisfaction, a chance to put in a stroke for himself. He got few chances to talk alone with Letty and he was always maneuvering for a chance. Rainey was never far away nor for long. The trip of the farmer would give him a clear field to press his suit. He felt no compunction in laying plans to steal the wife of his friend. He was of the type whose interest wanes once possession is gained. Neither Letty nor Rainey had any thought of what was burning in the furnace of the doctor's mind when they said goodnight to him that evening, as he mounted to ride home.

As Rainey motored to the distant town Dr. Bruff Graeber was letting it be known among his acquaintances he had been called to make a trip which might take several days or even weeks. Curiously, he said nothing about this to Mrs. Kerrs when he called the same day.

"I can't understand, Letty, why you stay here like some old apple woman," said the doctor getting fast to his point.

"Why, Bruff, what a comparison to make."

"I could take you to all the lovely places in the earth and make you happy and it would make me happy to do it."

"Bruff Graeber, you must not say such things to me nor think them."

"You'll fade away in this place. I'm telling you the truth. You ought to be where your charm and personality would shine and outshine all other women. You're made for it—to be a queen."

"Are you crazy?"

"Yes, crazy. Crazy about you. Crazy since I first met you in the hospital. Crazier when you married this clod. Now I'm crazy...."

"You insult my husband and you insult me by doing it."

"Your husband! He'd be nothing if it were not for you."

"Leave my house!"

"You're going with me. You're going tonight, before your.... husband ...comes back. Think it over and you'll see I'm right. You'll be willing to come. I love you as no other man could and I think you love me."

Letty, dumfounded, alarmed and ashamed, ran into the house and climbed to her room, breathless. She was in a panic. It seemed as if all the conventions had been torn to shreds. This best friend and adviser had suddenly become a menace. Perhaps all men were like him. All men—except Rainey. The city must be a cesspool and she had not found it out, cloistered in a hospital.

The doctor went his way, humming to himself. They all acted that way at first. He was sure of his power. She would go with him that night. As he reached the edge of the wood through which went the bridle path, there was a strange sound in the air. It was almost like howling and yet rhythmic. It had the measure of a barbaric chant or savage song of victory with the thumps of an ax taking the place of drum throbs. Judd was felling a great tree with skill and ease. The noise was his singing, Judd's idea of singing. The doctor finally caught the words, repeated over and over:

"I boated up t' Dordrecht,
"The Dutchmen called it Dort;
"Then tacked for Fortaleza,
"A shark infested port.
"Rolled down to San Heronimo,
"They said 'It's Saint Jerome.'
I slit my nose at all o' 'em
"And—sailed—back—home."

The last word was stretched into what was almost a long drawn scream. It was the only word in all the verse Judd understood—home. The rest of the chant was meaningless to him. The contribution to Hoon Hollow of some vagrant son who had returned from far afloat and learned by Judd syllable by syllable. Always wanting a home, Judd began to think he now had one and he stressed the word as if it were honey in his mouth.

For some time the doctor watched the giant work. He had a notion to taunt him but he wielded the ax with such skill and ease he reconsidered. There was a memory of the riding crop incident slumbering in the doctor's brain. Judd had lighted a fire close to the great branch-lined hole and the doctor wondered what the pit might be for. It looked so like a grave. He shivered.

"This fool might be dangerous," he thought and pushed his horse into the bridle path.

When the giant was through he put his ax under some bark in the lee of a felled trunk to protect it in the traditional woods fashion. He had let the fire die down and did not scatter the coals. Then he ambled towards the house and supper.

When the giant reached the house, he was uneasy at not seeing "Missy," as he called Mrs. Kerrs, who usually saw to it he got enough to eat and he was a good trencherman. But he did his chores and started for his truck room.

At the top of the stairs there was a sound that disturbed him and caused him to pause.

Somebody was weeping softly. He listened until he located the grief as being in Missy's room. Judd began to weave his body from side to side, uneasily. He never wept and it always affected him strangely, in others. When he realized that Missy must be in tears, hurt, afraid, or in danger, it shrivelled him to the marrow. The weaving became almost grotesque. He did not move his feet but the rest of his body swayed in a figure of eight motion. It was his way of crying out, in sympathy. Voiceless comradeship, like that of a fine dog. Judd had never presumed to approach the private rooms. Urged by his almost overwhelming devotion to Missy, who had been so good to him, he tiptoed to the door and timidly rapped.

"Who's there?" Very evidently from the tone, Letty was really alarmed. She had forgotten about Judd and thought it was Bruff Graeber come to force her from home.

"Jes' Judd.....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....somethin' bad, Missy?"

Mrs. Kerrs opened the door and the evidences of her grief were plain, even to the prosaic boy. His body began to weave again.

"Kin Judd help?"

She had never thought of him. The boy might be a defense. If she could keep him around, perhaps Graeber would be afraid to do anything.

"Judd, you must never tell anyone you saw me crying."

"Hoon Hollow folks say nothin'.....'bout nothin'....tell nothin' t' nobuddy...in Hoon Hollow....secrets is secrets."

"Judd, this is a Hoon Hollow secret."

Letty, in her room, heard Judd go downstairs and move about the kitchen. She heard him go outside and walk away. He went round the house and she could not follow him, in the dusk, from her window. It made her feel afraid again. Perhaps he had not understood what she had asked him to do. She waited to hear him return. But the minutes piled one on another and he did not come She began to fear. Convention Fine Success

County Sabbath School Sessions At Ellwood Exceptionally Good

AWARDS ARE MADE DURING MEETING

There have been ninety-six conventions of the Lawrence County Sabbath School Association held, and it seemed to be the concensus of opinion that the one held at the First Presbyterian church, Ellwood City, in the way of program, entertainment and inspiration was one of the best.

Beginning at the morning session a very high note was struck by the first speaker, and this was continued throughout the convention and was climaxed with the inspirational address to adults given by Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College, on the subject "Straigthway." There was excellent attendance at all the sessions, and especially at the afternoon and evening sessions the seating capacity of the church was taxed to its limit.

Under the leadership of John W. Owens the singing was inspiring and at the evening session a trio, a quartette and an anthem were rendered by choir members and the choir of the First Baptist church of New Castle.

Awards Made

At the afternoon session a beautiful award was presented to J. H. Lusk, president of the Wilmington District and to Rankin Johnson, the treasurer of the Wilmington District or having one hundred percentage collections in contributions to the state and county work.

The award to the district having the best percentage of attendance at the convention was presented to George P. Wilson, president of the Ellwood district, for his district, as they had over two hundred registered delegates.

All eight districts of the county were represented by splendid delegations and there were vistors from Beaver Falls, Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Grove City.

The two awards for the women's adult classes having the best percentage of attendance were won by the Wurtemburg U. P. and the Wurtemburg M. E., the former having an enrollment of fifteen and seventeen present, the extra two being visiting teachers.

The awards at the evening session for the men's adult Bible classes were won by the New Wilmington M. E. with a one hundred per cent attendance and the Wurtemburg U. P.

The installation of officers was conducted by Rev. E. H. Bonsall, the state representative, who also delivered an inspiring address, "Christian Youth and a New World"

Inspiring Address

Dr. Galbreath's address, which followed, gave a stirring challenge to go forward, linking with the convention theme "Upward and Onward" and the convention next "And He Set His face Steadfast To Go." Those attending were stirred by his message.

An additional resolution was passed at the convention on Thursday afternoon, expressing commendation of The New Castle News in its policy of not publishing liquor advertisements.

The newly elected president, Robt. M. Strickler, Jr., extended hearty thanks and appreciation to the pastor of the convention church, Rev. A. M. Stevenson, and Mrs. Stevenson, to George P. Wilson, chairman of the local committee, to J. S. Bowater, Sunday school superintendent of the convention church, to Rev. Robert Little, pastor of the First M. E. church to the ladies of the First Presbyterian church and the First Methodist Episcopal church who served the splendid meals, to the song leaders, John W. Owens and D. S. Williams, to the visiting singers from New Castle, to the Boy Scouts, to the New Castle News, Ellwood City Ledger and New Wilmington Globe, and to all who had a part in making the convention so outstanding.

The convention closed with a special flag ceremony at Legion park, across from the church, with Miss Ethel Mae Murphy of Ellwood City in charge. The choir of the First Baptist church of New Castle assisted Mr. Owens in the song service. Miss Marjorie Streeter of Ellwood presided at the organ.

It was a memorable day for Ellwood City. Besides it being one of the most successful conventions of the type held from the standpoint of program, attendance and entertainment, Ellwood had sort of a field day in winning awards. Four prizes were won by this district.

Want County Library.

The executive committee of the convention was delegated to plan a definite Bible reading system. They also acted on signing a pledge in favoring a county library. In the near future the district association of the county will act on the possibility of securing the present New Castle post office for the library after the post office occupies its new quarters. It was pointed out that this can be obtained at a nominal cost. This would mean an increase in the county levy one-fourth of one per cent.

The volumes of the library will contain much religious education besides the customary type of books. The library will be at the disposal of anyone in the county. It is planned to have a rural delivery to people in the outlying districts by truck. The county library is to work in conjunction with the present libraries.

A move will be started to obtain signatures of three per cent of the voters in the county, which is all that is required to have the question of the county library go on the next ballot.

Twelve Teachers Elected By Board

Superintendent And Committee Recommends Selection After Exams Are Taken

TRANSACT OTHER BUSINESS THURSDAY

ELLWOOD CITY, June 15.—The board of education of Ellwood City elected 12 teachers to fill vacancies in the local school system for the next school term, at their monthly meeting in the Lincoln school Thursday evening.

Ten of the 12 were elected to fill present vacancies. The other two will be needed when the new wing to the high school is completed. The 12 teachers were recommended by Supt. of Schools Vaughn R. DeLong and the educational committee, headed by Director J. W. Mayne, as a result of having attained the best mark in a competitive examination which was taken by 153 applicants. The board unanimously approved the recommendation.

Eight of the 12 teachers elected were Ellwood City residents. The local applicants were given a ten point advantage over those from out of town, and if their total score in the examination was lower than someone else's, they were not recommended. There were 33 local applicants for teaching positions. All of the eight local applicants selected are college graduates and seven of these have had previous experience.

The teachers elected were Eloida Barberio, Kenneth Zahniser, Beatrice Brunton, Morrison Bradley, Helen Brown, Isabel McDonald, Genevieve Curry, Catherine Czar, James Ansell, Lois Gillespie, Anna Sullivan and Helen Mayne.

Fire Destroys Turkey Farm

Two Hundred Little Turkeys Perish In Brooding Houses Of James Friday

BUCKET BRIGADE SAVES BIG TURKEYS

ELLWOOD CITY, June 15—Hungry flames leveled to the ground the turkey farm of James Friday on the Ellwood-New Castle road about two miles from the city limits, shortly after 9 o'clock last night and consumed with it 200 little turkeys.

Two of the three brooding houses were completely demolished. The third was saved by a bucket brigade who moved it away from the two burning buildings and extinguished the flames before any serious damage was done.

The fire had not been discovered until it had made considerable progress. A bucket brigate was hurriedly formed by the neighbors who worked desperately to check the flames, all to no avail. They bodily moved one brooder containing the larger turkeys, away from the flames. The other two were already smouldering and little could be done to save them.

There had been no means there with which to combat a fire therefore the local fire department was not summoned. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective oil brooder lamp. The lamp adjuster is believed to have become overheated and melted the solder, causing a leak. It would, therefore not take long to ignite the straw and wood.

Damage to the brooder houses was estimated at $400.

Convention Fine Success

AWARDS ARE MADE DURING MEETING

There have been ninety-six conventions of the Lawrence County Sabbath School Association held, and it seemed to be the concensus of opinion that the one held at the First Presbyterian church, Ellwood City, in the way of program, entertainment and inspiration was one of the best.

Beginning at the morning session a very high note was struck by the first speaker, and this was continued throughout the convention and was climaxed with the inspirational address to adults given by Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College, on the subject "Straigthway." There was excellent attendance at all the sessions, and especially at the afternoon and evening sessions the seating capacity of the church was taxed to its limit.

Fire Destroys Turkey Farm

BUCKET BRIGADE SAVES BIG TURKEYS

ELLWOOD CITY, June 15—Hungry flames leveled to the ground the turkey farm of James Friday on the Ellwood-New Castle road about two miles from the city limits, shortly after 9 o'clock last night and consumed with it 200 little turkeys.

Two of the three brooding houses were completely demolished. The third was saved by a bucket brigade who moved it away from the two burning buildings and extinguished the flames before any serious damage was done.

The fire had not been discovered until it had made considerable progress. A bucket brigate was hurriedly formed by the neighbors who worked desperately to check the flames, all to no avail. They bodily moved one brooder containing the larger turkeys, away from the flames. The other two were already smouldering and little could be done to save them.

There had been no means there with which to combat a fire therefore the local fire department was not summoned. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective oil brooder lamp. The lamp adjuster is believed to have become overheated and melted the solder, causing a leak. It would, therefore not take long to ignite the straw and wood.

Damage to the brooder houses was estimated at $400.

JUDD HOON SWINGS AN AX

by

John Angus Mackaye

The Story of a Boy Who Knew How To Keep a Secret

A McClure R.P.A. Story

As he stumbled, Judd was at him. There was a scream as the ax lifted and then silence, except for the panting of the giant.

HE WAS obviously a youth with a man's body. The face was boyish with an innocence that might almost be simple. His smile was ingenuously alluring. His legs looked like two kegs supporting a barrel for a body, a pumpkin for a head and neck, unnecessary. Sunburned between the freckles, he looked to be built for labor. Just the kind of henchman for whom Rainey Kerrs had been looking to do a large job of woodchopping. Kerrs made this inventory as the boy ambled towards the farmhouse. Seeing two men seated on the porch the stranger stopped, took off his battered hat and drawled:

"I kin work, mister."

"What can you do?" To be impressive Kerrs snapped this.

"Chores, most any kind."

"Get paid for working?" Kerrs tried to be facetious for the benefit of his guest, sitting beside him.

"Got fifty cents oncet."

"What did you do with it?"

"Got it yit."

"Let me see?"

"Naw, you might wanta take it off'n me."

That is how Rainey Kerrs und Judd Hoon met. Rainey, as always, looking for a bargain in labor and Judd strictly on the defensive. The other man, with the Van Dyke beard and the riding costume, was a disapproving spectator of the meeting. He was a friend of the young farmer and his wife and slightly older than either. In the city hospital where Mrs. Kerrs had put in four years at nursing school, he had been a physician. To the young nurse he had been very attentive until she married the chum of her country school days. Since then, apparently he had been the friend of both.

In his opening, feint and parry conversation with Kerrs, the youth with the giant's body paid no attention, more than a sidelong glance, to the doctor on the porch. Much like a good dog who seems, instinctively, to know the dog lover from the man who gives dogs kicks. The distrust seemed to be mutual, for the doctor showed disapproval when the farmer invited the youth to eat in the kitchen.

Mrs. Letty Kerrs, the farmer's wife, saw to it that the newcomer got washed up at the kitchen sink, which seemed quite natural to the boy. Yellow soap did not dismay him and he accepted a towel with grace. With pondering, wistful eyes, like those of a six months old baby, he watched the woman as he dried himself.

"What's yaur name?" she asked.

"Judd....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....from Hoon Hollow."

Her countenance was unmoved but laughter rippled within her and her eyes danced. She wondered if all giants had simple minds. With a face as unmoved as her own, he exploded:

"You're good lookin'....an' kind....like my dawg....had plenty ears an' no tail.....wagged his ears when he laffed.....my dawg did."

He moved to the table and ate, prodigiously. Without a word as to wages he began to make himself at home, helping the woman to clean up and wash dishes after dinner was over for the family. He seemed to take it for granted they needed him.

Rainey Kerrs had just come into his own. His father had died two years before, leaving a dilapidated farm and a competence in securities and cash to his only son, after a miserly life. He had driven the boy hard as he drove everybody and everything under him. This had given the young man a distaste for farm drudgery. Young Kerrs had modernized the place since he took command and his gentle, young wife had loosened up his idea as to tight purse strings. The niggard trend did not come naturally but was imposed by the cheap way in which his father rated him in wages while he slaved. He clung to his money because he thought it was the only thing giving him power to avoid what he disliked.

His wife Letty was country bred but her four years in a city hospital had polished her and the male surgical ward had acted as a wire cutter on the barbed entanglements every maiden puts up, at first, before a man. Her body had a compactness suggesting strength, with a skin soft and clean as the petals of a morning glory in the risen sun. The sheen of ripe wheat glowed in her hair which canopied eyes like two of the blue bells of Scotland. From rather a large mouth came a firm, clear voice, muted by days and nights of seeing "quiet" on the risers of hospital steps and "silence" on the lintels of ward doors. A beckoning voice towards which men leaned, and especially Dr. Bruff Graeber since he first heard it in the throat of a young nurse.

Young Rainey Kerrs suspected nobody and permitted Graeber the freedom of his house and farm and Graeber took it. But the weak mouth, veiled by the Van Dyke, had whispered, more than once, that such surroundings were no background to the woman who was mistress of the farm. Her beauty, charm and talents were meant for other places to which he could lead her and where he would care for her in a befitting manner.

To Letty, even with her city training, these were simply overdrawn compliments. She never thought this friend would try to steal her from her husband. Yet, cunningly, the hypnotic doctor would refer to the miserly strain in the Kerrs family and to his own offhandedness. He was pushing his suit, hotly, with Letty when Judd Hoon came. Although disliking his remarks, Letty merely thought it was his way of looking at things. Her husband was too straightforward and too busy to see or suspect anything. The doctor was an honored friend.

The more Rainey Kerrs saw of his new chore boy the more he liked him. Somehow, vaguely, he pictured in this castaway a caricature of himself when, almost without pay and usually in old clothes, he had slaved for his father. The only difference was, this boy was a born woodsman, used to the outdoors, familiar with animals and trees, inured to the waste places by day or night, at any season. Simple according to civilization's rating but wise in taking care of himself.

Looking like the flotsam left by a great flood the pile of lumber from old chicken houses, wagon sheds, granaries and barns razed by the young man since his father's death made an impressive mound. It did not seem to overawe Judd when Rainey led him there, set him at the block to start chopping up the smaller stuff. Judd's hands were friendly with the ax. Rainey watched him work, methodically, slowly and without effort.

Three days later, on bigger stuff, Rainey took the end of a crosscut saw, opposite Judd. He was amazed at the pull the kid put into his end and the knack he had of getting everything out of the belly of the tool as it bit a deep carf. The boy made Rainey sweat. He forced his boss to work harder than he had in years. Judd did not seem to realize this. Rainey was glad the boy did not seem to know that in this one thing, at least, he was a better man. The jagged mound dwindled. For two days they worked and spoke only necessary words. On the third day of sawing, at supper time, as he gave the order to stop, Rainey said, admiringly:

"Judd, you're an honest-to-goodness sawyer."

The barrel bodied youth nodded, turned towards supper and said, calmly:

"Yep, and if I could on'y fizz like sody I'd be wi' th' circus."

While eating, Rainey plied his laborer with questions. Judd said he was an orphan from Hoon Hollow. There he had chored for everybody, from herding community cows to sweeping out the schoolhouse and cutting wood for the preacher. He was friendly with all animals and wild life and claimed to be intimate with chipmunks which, he said, are 'cute cussers when crossed'.

Rainey knew Hoon Hollow by repute. A partisan place where they hated intruders, mostly intermarried, disregarded such laws and codes as were inconvenient and classed all outsiders as "yinks" who were ignorant of this exclusive paradise. It was a narrow region of tumble-down shacks, weedy truck patches, poor farms and superstitious people who had little money and less worry. From this recital, the forlorn boy got even more of Rainey's sympathy.

Judd would do anything for Letty Kerrs. All the house chores he took upon himself to make things easier for her. Judd seemed almost to anticipate her wishes or commands, so eagerly did he watch, to aid her. It was the absolute devotion of a good dog with the human element added to make it superlative. As the days wore on it was evident he would cheerfully have died for his mistress. Never before had he lived in a real home with a steady job and kind treatment. He never mentioned wages.

When it rained Judd placidly wheelbarrowed grain to make chop remarking as the cause of the downpour:

"U-m-m, somebuddy's tromped on a bulltoad. Trompin' 'em allus brings rain. Nobuddy should tromp on bulltoads."

It was at this stage of his sojourn that Judd first spoke with Dr. Bruff Graeber. The youthful colossus was at the pump, one evening, getting many buckets of water when the doctor rode into the yard. He rode straight at the boy.

"Out of the way there," he snarled and made as if to ride down the boy. Judd went round the pump to put it between himself and the horseman. Like all giants he was slow to anger.

"Take this horse, you nut," and the doctor swung from his saddle.

"Chipmunks eat nuts.....they're cute cussers.....chipmunks is .....when they're crossed.....cute cussers, like you.....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

"You're impudent," and the doctor advanced with raised riding crop. With an amazingly quick movement for one of his size, Judd took a stride to meet him, wrested the whip from him with one dexterous twist and broke it across his knee.

"Chipmunks thinks they own ever'thin'....the earth an' th' trees ....an' th' fences.....lissen oncet.....lissen.....if y' git a chipmunk down oncet.....you've got 'im.....I knows chipmunks..... I kin handle 'em....an' I ain't crossed ye.....yit."

Judd went back to his water buckets. Turning, he said again:

"'Tend yer hoss ye'self." Turning his back to the infuriated man he went on pumping water. The curious thing was the doctor looked after his horse and said nothing to Letty or Rainey about the encounter. The hired man spoke to nobody about it.

The following day, while washing dishes after supper, Judd confided to his mistress:

"Looks like a sad preacher....th' chipmunk man....preachers is allus sad.....sad frum th' ol' country.....killed a peddler there.... killed a peddler.....an' stole his pack."

"Who looks like a preacher?" asked the puzzled Letty.

"The cute cusser.....like a chipmunk.....comes on a hoss."

It was the first realization Letty had that Judd did not like her complimentary friend, the doctor.

"Why, Judd, he's an old friend."

"Cusses like a chipmunk.....I ain't crossed 'im....yit."

The wood pile had vanished and by this time Judd was cutting trees close to where the bridle path led through the woods. Deft with an ax, used to the job, he toppled and trimmed with a tireless persistency. And yet he took time off for his own queer inclinations. One of these fancies was a great hole in the ground, which he excavated at leisure. He bottomed and lined it with small branches from the trees he felled so easily. It was to be his larder, filled with apples, cabbage, potatoes and other necessities which might be required in times of stress during a hard winter. Undoubtedly it was the squirrel's hoarding idea transmuted from instinct into intelligence goaded by times of need in the past. Judd never had a home he could remember. Now he was comfortable for the first time in his life and yet—there was a fear that things would not always go so smoothly. They never had in the past and he was getting ready, slowly but surely. He would have a larder if everything else failed.

In Hoon Hollow they could not give because they did not have but they shared their pitiful allowances. "Missy," as Judd called Letty, always gave him plenty and he adored her for this. Both she and Rainey were kind to him, a tolerance he had never known and that touched him so deeply it was beyond expression for him. He could only show it. The occasion had not arisen when he could prove what struggled in his mind, as gratitude. But it was there, however deeply covered. Judd had no thought of theft as he prepared to fill his larder hole from Kerrs' fields. They could share with him. It would be merely by his foresight the hoard was buried. It was a great pit he dug beside the edge of the wood where he chopped the trees.

Letty had other things to take her attention so that the evident hostility between the hired man and the friend of the family did not dwell long in her mind. On the market page of a newspaper was an item telling of a shortage of eggs in the city and Rainey and she were in the wholesale egg business. She was mistress of a real chicken farm. Down river hens had failed in their duty and prices were soaring. She advised Rainey to get in communication with someone in the populous center and sell direct. Rainey's pet extravagance, since their marriage, was a fine car and this would be a rare chance to take a trip to the city. Letty would stay home, as she liked to do, and look after things while he was away. He could start the next morning. Dr. Graeber was present while this was being discussed and told his friend, Rainey, it would be a real business stroke.

The doctor also saw, with satisfaction, a chance to put in a stroke for himself. He got few chances to talk alone with Letty and he was always maneuvering for a chance. Rainey was never far away nor for long. The trip of the farmer would give him a clear field to press his suit. He felt no compunction in laying plans to steal the wife of his friend. He was of the type whose interest wanes once possession is gained. Neither Letty nor Rainey had any thought of what was burning in the furnace of the doctor's mind when they said goodnight to him that evening, as he mounted to ride home.

As Rainey motored to the distant town Dr. Bruff Graeber was letting it be known among his acquaintances he had been called to make a trip which might take several days or even weeks. Curiously, he said nothing about this to Mrs. Kerrs when he called the same day.

"I can't understand, Letty, why you stay here like some old apple woman," said the doctor getting fast to his point.

"Why, Bruff, what a comparison to make."

"I could take you to all the lovely places in the earth and make you happy and it would make me happy to do it."

"Bruff Graeber, you must not say such things to me nor think them."

"You'll fade away in this place. I'm telling you the truth. You ought to be where your charm and personality would shine and outshine all other women. You're made for it—to be a queen."

"Are you crazy?"

"Yes, crazy. Crazy about you. Crazy since I first met you in the hospital. Crazier when you married this clod. Now I'm crazy...."

"You insult my husband and you insult me by doing it."

"Your husband! He'd be nothing if it were not for you."

"Leave my house!"

"You're going with me. You're going tonight, before your.... husband ...comes back. Think it over and you'll see I'm right. You'll be willing to come. I love you as no other man could and I think you love me."

Letty, dumfounded, alarmed and ashamed, ran into the house and climbed to her room, breathless. She was in a panic. It seemed as if all the conventions had been torn to shreds. This best friend and adviser had suddenly become a menace. Perhaps all men were like him. All men—except Rainey. The city must be a cesspool and she had not found it out, cloistered in a hospital.

The doctor went his way, humming to himself. They all acted that way at first. He was sure of his power. She would go with him that night. As he reached the edge of the wood through which went the bridle path, there was a strange sound in the air. It was almost like howling and yet rhythmic. It had the measure of a barbaric chant or savage song of victory with the thumps of an ax taking the place of drum throbs. Judd was felling a great tree with skill and ease. The noise was his singing, Judd's idea of singing. The doctor finally caught the words, repeated over and over:

"I boated up t' Dordrecht,
"The Dutchmen called it Dort;
"Then tacked for Fortaleza,
"A shark infested port.
"Rolled down to San Heronimo,
"They said 'It's Saint Jerome.'
I slit my nose at all o' 'em
"And—sailed—back—home."

The last word was stretched into what was almost a long drawn scream. It was the only word in all the verse Judd understood—home. The rest of the chant was meaningless to him. The contribution to Hoon Hollow of some vagrant son who had returned from far afloat and learned by Judd syllable by syllable. Always wanting a home, Judd began to think he now had one and he stressed the word as if it were honey in his mouth.

For some time the doctor watched the giant work. He had a notion to taunt him but he wielded the ax with such skill and ease he reconsidered. There was a memory of the riding crop incident slumbering in the doctor's brain. Judd had lighted a fire close to the great branch-lined hole and the doctor wondered what the pit might be for. It looked so like a grave. He shivered.

"This fool might be dangerous," he thought and pushed his horse into the bridle path.

When the giant was through he put his ax under some bark in the lee of a felled trunk to protect it in the traditional woods fashion. He had let the fire die down and did not scatter the coals. Then he ambled towards the house and supper.

When the giant reached the house, he was uneasy at not seeing "Missy," as he called Mrs. Kerrs, who usually saw to it he got enough to eat and he was a good trencherman. But he did his chores and started for his truck room.

At the top of the stairs there was a sound that disturbed him and caused him to pause.

Somebody was weeping softly. He listened until he located the grief as being in Missy's room. Judd began to weave his body from side to side, uneasily. He never wept and it always affected him strangely, in others. When he realized that Missy must be in tears, hurt, afraid, or in danger, it shrivelled him to the marrow. The weaving became almost grotesque. He did not move his feet but the rest of his body swayed in a figure of eight motion. It was his way of crying out, in sympathy. Voiceless comradeship, like that of a fine dog. Judd had never presumed to approach the private rooms. Urged by his almost overwhelming devotion to Missy, who had been so good to him, he tiptoed to the door and timidly rapped.

"Who's there?" Very evidently from the tone, Letty was really alarmed. She had forgotten about Judd and thought it was Bruff Graeber come to force her from home.

"Jes' Judd.....Judd Hoon.....the chore boy.....somethin' bad, Missy?"

Mrs. Kerrs opened the door and the evidences of her grief were plain, even to the prosaic boy. His body began to weave again.

"Kin Judd help?"

She had never thought of him. The boy might be a defense. If she could keep him around, perhaps Graeber would be afraid to do anything.

"Judd, you must never tell anyone you saw me crying."

"Hoon Hollow folks say nothin'.....'bout nothin'....tell nothin' t' nobuddy....in Hoon Hollow....secrets is secrets."

"Judd, this is a Hoon Hollow secret."

Letty, in her room, heard Judd go downstairs and move about the kitchen. She heard him go outside and walk away. He went round the house and she could not follow him, in the dusk, from her window. It made her feel afraid again. Perhaps he had not understood what she had asked him to do. She waited to hear him return. But the minutes piled one on another and he did not come. She began to fear. She locked herself in the room, lest Graeber come and Judd be away. Her self control was giving way again. Graeber would force her to go with him and nothing would explain the situation to Rainey even if she managed to elude Graeber, later.

Time lengthened and there was no sound around the house. Her imagination ran riot. Country bred as she was, her fears now dominated her so that she was afraid to venture into the dark. She could neither run away nor find out what had happened to Judd. She sensed clutching hands on every side.

The telephone tinkled downstairs.

To her it sounded like a fire alarm.

It rang again. She thought it was some ruse Graeber was using to get her to come down to meet him. It continued to ring as if demanding her presence. She unlocked her door and listened, holding her breath, it sounded so loud. There was no sound but the insistent ringing of that bell. She would have to go downstairs.

"This is Mrs. Kerrs talking." What a trembling, faint and awed voice she heard as her own.

"Hello, honey. This is Rainey at Gary Crossroads and I'll be home in an hour." She was so astonished and relieved she nearly collapsed.

"Hurry, Rainey, hurry, I'm so scared here alone."

"Ain't Judd there?"

"He....he.....he went.....he went out somewhere and hasn't come back."

"Ha, ha, huntin' chipmunks, I'll bet. Comin' right home, honey."

When Judd left Letty he went down to the kitchen and prowled around muttering:

"It's yit....yit time....yit time, now....for t'yink."

He was looking for something he could not find. There was no weapon big enough for him. His hands were clutching. Softly he opened the door and went to the woodpile. No club seemed heavy enough and the woodpile suggested the ax. He was proud of that ax which Rainey had given him. It was at the edge of the woods. Loping strides took him swiftly to where the dying coals of his fire glowed. Deftly he put small pieces of bark against the embers and soon there was a blaze beginning. He took his ax from under the bark hangar and tossed it up and down in his hand.

He heard steps on the bridle path and slid behind the hole of a tree. The bulk of a man appeared, dimly, at the edge of the trees. The prowler hesitated as he saw the fire glow. There was no sound. The figure came forward. It was the chipmunk man.

The hair on Judd's neck bristled. He ground his teeth. The man came closer. Judd's eyes were blazing. His neck craned from his crouch behind the tree. The doctor paused as he came to the blaze.

With that same swiftness he had shown when taking the riding crop from Graeber Judd was in front of him, keeping the fire behind the doctor.

"Like a snake....suckin' eggs.....you yink....I've crossed ye now." It was a bellow and the doctor stepped backward from the infuriated giant. He went against the pile of earth Judd had taken from the great pit that was meant for a larder. As he stumbled Judd was at him.

There was a scream from the doctor as the ax lifted and then silence except for the panting of the giant. Judd was amazed at the inertness of the thing that lay before him. He bundled earth, flesh and ax into the hole. He did a labor of Hercules, in case some one might come along. He raked the fire over the spot where he had his larder and built a bonfire in its place.

Rainey reached home just as Judd came into the yard, laughing to himself and covered with mud.

Letty heard her husband's voice and came running downstairs.

"Judd's been out huntin' chipmunks," laughed the farmer.

"Sure," chuckled Judd. "But don't tell n'buddy. Secrets is secrets."

Finland Only Nation To Make Payment On War Debt Today

"TOKEN PAYING" NATIONS DEFAULT

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15—Today was Europe's pay-day to the United States but Uncle Sam found only one debtor at the paying-teller's window, little Finland.

For the rest it was a payless payday. Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Poland and practically all the others joined in united default, the acknowledged purpose of which was to force this government into granting drastic reduction of the 11 billion dollars owed American taxpayers.

Huge Defaults.

The United States was to receive less than one-tenth of one per cent on the $175,000,000 June 15 installments due, bringing the total amount on which Europe has defaulted to nearly half a billion dollars.

None of the debtors took advantage of Secretary of State Hull's offer to consider payments in goods or services, an offer aimed at challenging the sincerity of the debtors' claim that they would meet their obligations if they could, but cash payment was impossible.

Only one debtor, Czechoslovakia, mentioned the desirability of discussing this method of payment.

Finland was the only debtor from which notice had been received of intention to pay actual cash. A representative of that little republic, which has met in full all its obligations without complaint, will hand over to the New York Federal Reserve bank a draft for $166,538, the amount due.

Token Payers Also Default.

The intentions of only one country were in doubt. That was Lithuania. It has not yet approached the paying-teller's window, but dispatches from Kovno said it intended to make a small partial payment. It made a "token" payment of $7,000 on $105,474 due last December. Even if it repeated such a payment, the United States would still receive less than one-tenth of one per cent of the total amount due from the debtors.

The former so-called "token" payers who defaulted outright on today's payments were Great Britain, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Latvia. Their notes explained they took this action because of the Johnson act, closing the money markets of the United States to all the debt defaulting nations, including those who have sought to escape the penalties of dafault by drop-in-the-bucket payments. However, the "token" payments made by these five debtors last December amounted to only about $8,600,000 on $152,952,637 due.

France, Belgium, Poland, Estonia and Hungary defaulted outright for the fourth time.

State Chairman Here Saturday

Hon. David L. Lawrence To Meet Lawrence County Democratic Committee

Darley VanDivort, secretary of the Democratic County Committee, which meets for reorganization Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the count house, announced this morning that the Hon. David L. Lawrence, newly elected state chairman of the Democratic party, will attend the meeting, and address the same. He is very desirous of meeting the committeemen.

Lawrence county is singularly honored in having Mr. Lawrence, as it will be the first County Committee meeting after his elevation to the chairmanship. It is also coincident that Lawrence county was the first county by the action of their County Committee to officially endorse the state ticket last February.

Mr. Lawrence is a young man, he has been chairman of the Allegheny County Committee for several terms and was re-elected on May 15th, last Saturday the State Committee elevated him to the chairmanship.

Bingo Will Be Played At Red Cross Benefit

Legion Of Honor To Take Charge Of Feature Of Program Next Week

The Legion of Honor, through Ches C. Sweesy, has offered their services and equipment for the evening, assuring that this part of the program will be well handled.

Mrs. John S. Crowl, general chairman, stated today that the arrangements for the big party are well in hand, and that tickets are going well indicating that the attendance will be large.

The proceeds of this party is to be used by the nursing committee of the Lawrence County Chapter, American Red Cross, in the purchase of an automobile for the use of the nursing department. The Red Cross is the only organization furnishing bedside care for patients in the city and county at the present time and the Chapter nurse is called to various sections of the county daily to administer to the sick and needy ones.

Jurors Are Notified Services Not Needed

Trial List Completed This Week Owing To Eight Pleas Having Been Taken

Owing to eight pleas having been entered at county court this week all the cases ready to be tried have been disposed of and it will be unnecessary to call a jury for next week.

After these facts have been laid before the court by District Attorney Mont L. Alley, Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard was instructed to notify the jurors called for next week that they need not appear.

Court was shortened through the good work of County Detective [illegible] Leslie and District Attorney Alley in securing the pleas. In addition to the cases on which true bills had been found at the present term of court, several cases that had been continued from March term were heard.

Cancelling the jury for next week will amount to a considerable saving to the county, as 70 were called and they get $3 per day or $210 a day. In addition there will be a saving on tipstaves and other expenses amounting to around $300 per day.

Convention Fine Success

AWARDS ARE MADE DURING MEETING

There have been ninety-six conventions of the Lawrence County Sabbath School Association held, and it seemed to be the concensus of opinion that the one held at the First Presbyterian church, Ellwood City, in the way of program, entertainment and inspiration was one of the best.

Beginning at the morning session a very high note was struck by the first speaker, and this was continued throughout the convention and was climaxed with the inspirational address to adults given by Dr. Robert F. Galbreath, president of Westminster College, on the subject "Straigthway." There was excellent attendance at all the sessions, and especially at the afternoon and evening sessions the seating capacity of the church was taxed to its limit.

Under the leadership of John W. Owens the singing was inspiring and at the evening session a trio, a quartette and an anthem were rendered by choir members and the choir of the First Baptist church of New Castle.

Awards Made

At the afternoon session a beautiful award was presented to J. H. Lusk, president of the Wilmington District and to Rankin Johnson, the treasurer of the Wilmington District or having one hundred percentage collections in contributions to the state and county work.

The award to the district having the best percentage of attendance at the convention was presented to George P. Wilson, president of the Ellwood district, for his district, as they had over two hundred registered delegates.

All eight districts of the county were represented by splendid delegations and there were vistors from Beaver Falls, Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Grove City.

The two awards for the women's adult classes having the best percentage of attendance were won by the Wurtemburg U. P. and the Wurtemburg M. E., the former having an enrollment of fifteen and seventeen present, the extra two being visiting teachers.

The awards at the evening session for the men's adult Bible classes were won by the New Wilmington M. E. with a one hundred per cent attendance and the Wurtemburg U. P.

The installation of officers was conducted by Rev. E. H. Bonsall, the state representative, who also delivered an inspiring address, "Christian Youth and a New World"

Inspiring Address

Dr. Galbreath's address, which followed, gave a stirring challenge to go forward, linking with the convention theme "Upward and Onward" and the convention next "And He Set His face Steadfast To Go." Those attending were stirred by his message.

An additional resolution was passed at the convention on Thursday afternoon, expressing commendation of The New Castle News in its policy of not publishing liquor advertisements.

The newly elected president, Robt. M. Strickler, Jr., extended hearty thanks and appreciation to the pastor of the convention church. Rev. A. M. Stevenson, and Mrs. Stevenson, to George P. Wilson, chairman of the local committee, to J. S. Bowater, Sunday school superintendent of the convention church, to Rev. Robert Little, pastor of the First M. E. church to the ladies of the First Presbyterian church and the First Methodist Episcopal church who served the splendid meals, to the song leaders, John W. Owens and D. S. Williams, to the visiting singers from New Castle, to the Boy Scouts, to the New Castle News, Ellwood City Ledger and New Wilmington Globe, and to all who had a part in making the convention so outstanding.

The convention closed with a special flag ceremony at Legion park, across from the church, with Miss Ethel Mae Murphy of Ellwood City in charge. The choir of the First Baptist church of New Castle assisted Mr. Owens in the song service. Miss Marjorie Streeter of Ellwood presided at the organ.

It was a memorable day for Ellwood City. Besides it being one of the most successful conventions of the type held from the standpoint of program, attendance and entertainment, Ellwood had sort of a field day in winning awards. Four prizes were won by this district.

Want County Library.

The executive committee of the convention was delegated to plan a definite Bible reading system. They also acted on signing a pledge in favoring a county library. In the near future the district association of the county will act on the possibility of securing the present New Castle post office for the library after the post office occupies its new quarters. It was pointed out that this can be obtained at a nominal cost. This would mean an increase in the county levy one-fourth of one per cent.

The volumes of the library will contain much religious education besides the customary type of books. The library will be at the disposal of anyone in the county. It is planned to have a rural delivery to people in the outlying districts by truck. The county library is to work in conjunction with the present libraries.

A move will be started to obtain signatures of three per cent of the voters in the county, which is all that is required to have the question of the county library go on the next ballot.

Twelve Teachers Elected By Board

TRANSACT OTHER BUSINESS THURSDAY

ELLWOOD CITY, June 15.—The board of education of Ellwood City elected 12 teachers to fill vacancies in the local school system for the next school term, at their monthly meeting in the Lincoln school Thursday evening.

Ten of the 12 were elected to fill present vacancies. The other two will be needed when the new wing to the high school is completed. The 12 teachers were recommended by Supt. of Schools Vaughn R. DeLong and the educational committee, headed by Director J. W. Mayne, as a result of having attained the best mark in a competitive examination which was taken by 153 applicants. The board unanimously approved the recommendation.

Eight of the 12 teachers elected were Ellwood City residents. The local applicants were given a ten point advantage over those from out of town, and if their total score in the examination was lower than someone else's, they were not recommended. There were 33 local applicants for teaching positions. All of the eight local applicants selected are college graduates and seven of these have had previous experience.

The teachers elected were Elolda Barberio, Kenneth Zahniser, Beatrice Brunton, Morrison Bradley, Helen Brown, Isabel McDonald, Genevieve Curry, Catherine Czar, James Ansell, Lois Gillespie, Anna Sullivan and Helen Mayne.

The recommendation of the superintendent and committee was also approved in the re-election of Dr. W. G. Evans as medical inspector and C. C. Lash as truant officer. Mr. Lash will again be given the authorization to make the annual school census.

The resignations of teachers Grace Anderson, Virginia Johnston and Dorothy Tomb, who are to be married this summer, were accepted by the board.

The board referred Former Tax Collector McConahy's exoneration list of $4300 for further consideration. Mr. McConahy requested the exoneration so that he would be able to obtain his 1934 tax collector's bond.

The building committee headed by Dr. H. E. Helling reported that the federal inspector for the new wing construction will soon be on the job. The excavating for the addition is going deeper than expected in order to have a good solid foundation. Concrete pouring has started. It was reported that with the exception of two foremen all of the labor for this project is local. The athletic field has been top soiled and grass is already appearing. The track is being completed and the placing in of the ramp. The fence around the field will be painted. Consideration for a new gym floor will be given in the near future, the board signified.

The board recommended a plan of re-circulating the air in the Lincoln and Hartman schools for the purpose of giving greater heat efficiency and saving fuel. The plan was recommended by Mr. McElroy, a consulting engineer.

Secretary Hancher announced that a company has applied for the purchase of the bonds being used in the construction of the new wing. These bonds have been sold to the government. He also stated that an advance in the state appropriation has been refused. This was needed for the June payroll. There is every possibility that the surrounding townships may make payments to the local school district which will enable them to meet the payroll.

Fire Destroys Turkey Farm

BUCKET BRIGADE SAVES BIG TURKEYS

ELLWOOD CITY, June 15—Hungry flames leveled to the ground the turkey farm of James Friday on the Ellwood-New Castle road about two miles from the city limits, shortly after 9 o'clock last night and consumed with it 200 little turkeys.

Two of the three brooding houses were completely demolished. The third was saved by a bucket brigade who moved it away from the two burning buildings and extinguished the flames before any serious damage was done.

The fire had not been discovered until it had made considerable progress. A bucket brigade was hurriedly formed by the neighbors who worked desperately to check the flames, all to no avail. They bodily moved one brooder containing the larger turkeys, away from the flames. The other two were already smouldering and little could be done to save them.

There had been no means there with which to combat a fire therefore the local fire department was not summoned. The fire is believed to have been caused by a defective oil brooder lamp. The lamp adjuster is believed to have become overheated and melted the solder, causing a leak. It would, therefore not take long to ignite the straw and wood.

Damage to the brooder houses was estimated at $400.

Carrie Nation May Have Secured Idea From These Women

Filled With Religious Enthusiasm They Smash Wesleyville Saloons

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—A yellowed newspaper clipping here conveys the impression that Carrie Nation, militant, hatchet-wielding dry, whose name was anathema to saloon-keepers late in the last century, owes the idea of her spectacular destructive raids to women residents of Wesleyville.

Evidence that Wesleyville was not always quiet and sedate is offered by S. V. Travis, who has lived half a century in that borough.

Back in 1856, the clipping states, church women armed with axes, entered a saloon and wrecked everything in sight "except the heads of the whisky guzzlers, of whom there were many," during a revival service which lent inspiration to the plan.

As one woman said: "The ladies waded in whisky up to their shoe tops, but like all enemies pursued by truth it sunk beneath their winged feet and vanished from sight forever."

So great was the excitement the minister was forced to abandon his revival campaign.

An arms embargo is a method of saying: "Take a licking from your neighbors or learn to make your own guns."

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending at 3:30 p. m. June 14, six arrests on charges as follows: suspicion 4, drunkenness 1, drunkeness and suspicion 1.

Having been in Harrisburg, members of council convened in city hall today. No business was transacted at Monday's meeting owing to the convention of the State Association of Planning commissions.

A thorough survey of places where cars may park for a certain time might show that yellow lines have been placed where they have no right to have been painted.

As predicted in this column a few days ago two young men, alleged to have been concerned in an auto theft have been apprehended. Police now are seeking car riflers. The arm of the law is not too short for anyone.

Annually about this time playgrounds have opened but indications are none will be operated this season. Thousands of children are affected. Mothers must continue to keep children at home instead of sending them to playgrounds.

Today is Parents-Kiddie day at Cascade Park, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Citizen. It is the first time the children have had a chance to romp at the recreation center since school was dismissed for the vacation period.

Mathew Gunton, renamed president of the State planners pronounces that the convention held here recently as most successful. While the attendance was not large the proceedings were very interesting.

City policemen have been reporting bad conditions in sidewalks and cartways. Drinking fountains also have come in for their inspection. Some have been found to leak. The information is turned over daily to the proper authorities.

Willis McMullen, detectives chief is a man o'all trades. He went out yesterday and took photographs of a hole in South Jefferson street where an automobile figured in an accident which resulted in a demolished store-front.

The city of New Castle does not pay for clothing of policemen ruined when they are on duty. In some tussles officers have clothing torn. The idea of making the obstreperous pay for repairs or new clothing is not a bad idea.

Local Young Man Graduates Today

Joseph Mastrangelo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Mastrangelo, of 912 South Mercer street, is among the 28 members of the 1934 class of the St. Fedilis Seminary, Herman, Pa., who received diplomas at exercises today.

The local young man will enter St. Vincent college, Latrobe, Pa., next fall. During the past six years, Mr. Mastrangelo has made an average of 90% in his studies. He will return home with his parents who attended the exercises, today.

MURAL-DECORATORS ARE PAID $12,000

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, June 15.—Pittsburgh, if the PWA has anything to do with it, will soon be more conscious of its mural-decorated public buildings than of its glowing hearth furnaces and smoke-billowing stacks.

The "Steel City" has been awakened to the real needs of its artists by the government's expenditure, through the public works administration, of $12,000 for the painting of murals for public buildings in this district.

In all, 27 murals are in the process of completion in district No. 8, comprising western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Sixty artists were employed in the government's program for aiding needy painters.

About one-half of the world's supply of borax comes from a single source in Chile.

Carrie Nation May Have Secured Idea From These Women

Filled With Religious Enthusiasm They Smash Wesleyville Saloons

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—A yellowed newspaper clipping here conveys the impression that Carrie Nation, militant, hatchet-wielding dry, whose name was anathema to saloon-keepers late in the last century, owes the idea of her spectacular destructive raids to women residents of Wesleyville.

Evidence that Wesleyville was not always quiet and sedate is offered by S. V. Travis, who has lived half a century in that borough.

Back in 1856, the clipping states, church women armed with axes, entered a saloon and wrecked everything in sight "except the heads of the whisky guzzlers, of whom there were many," during a revival service which lent inspiration to the plan.

As one woman said: "The ladies waded in whisky up to their shoe tops, but like all enemies pursued by truth it sunk beneath their winged feet and vanished from sight forever."

So great was the excitement the minister was forced to abandon his revival campaign.

An arms embargo is a method of saying: "Take a licking from your neighbors or learn to make your own guns."

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending at 3:30 p. m. June 14, six arrests on charges as follows: suspicion 4, drunkenness 1, drunkeness and suspicion 1.

Having been in Harrisburg, members of council convened in city hall today. No business was transacted at Monday's meeting owing to the convention of the State Association of Planning commissions.

A thorough survey of places where cars may park for a certain time might show that yellow lines have been placed where they have no right to have been painted.

As predicted in this column a few days ago two young men, alleged to have been concerned in an auto theft have been apprehended. Police now are seeking car riflers. The arm of the law is not too short for anyone.

Annually about this time playgrounds have opened but indications are none will be operated this season. Thousands of children are affected. Mothers must continue to keep children at home instead of sending them to playgrounds.

Today is Parents-Kiddie day at Cascade Park, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Citizen. It is the first time the children have had a chance to romp at the recreation center since school was dismissed for the vacation period.

Mathew Gunton, renamed president of the State planners pronounces that the convention held here recently as most successful. While the attendance was not large the proceedings were very interesting.

City policemen have been reporting bad conditions in sidewalks and cartways. Drinking fountains also have come in for their inspection. Some have been found to leak. The information is turned over daily to the proper authorities.

Willis McMullen, detectives chief is a man o'all trades. He went out yesterday and took photographs of a hole in South Jefferson street where an automobile figured in an accident which resulted in a demolished store-front.

The city of New Castle does not pay for clothing of policemen ruined when they are on duty. In some tussles officers have clothing torn. The idea of making the obstreperous pay for repairs or new clothing is not a bad idea.

Local Young Man Graduates Today

Joseph Mastrangelo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Mastrangelo, of 912 South Mercer street, is among the 28 members of the 1934 class of the St. Fedilis Seminary, Herman, Pa., who received diplomas at exercises today.

The local young man will enter St. Vincent college, Latrobe, Pa., next fall. During the past six years, Mr. Mastrangelo has made an average of 90% in his studies. He will return home with his parents who attended the exercises, today.

Finland Only Nation To Make Payment On War Debt Today

"TOKEN PAYING" NATIONS DEFAULT

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 15—Today was Europe's pay-day to the United States but Uncle Sam found only one debtor at the paying-teller's window, little Finland.

For the rest it was a payless pay-day. Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Poland and practically all the others joined in united default, the acknowledged purpose of which was to force this government into granting drastic reduction of the 11 billion dollars owed American taxpayers.

Huge Defaults.

The United States was to receive less than one-tenth of one per cent on the $175,000,000 June 15 installments due, bringing the total amount on which Europe has defaulted to nearly half a billion dollars.

None of the debtors took advantage of Secretary of State Hull's offer to consider payments in goods or services, an offer aimed at challenging the sincerity of the debtors' claim that they would meet their obligations if they could, but cash payment was impossible.

Only one debtor, Czechoslovakia, mentioned the desirability of discussing this method of payment.

Finland was the only debtor from which notice had been received of intention to pay actual cash. A representative of that little republic, which has met in full all its obligations without complaint, will hand over to the New York Federal Reserve bank a draft for $166,538, the amount due.

Token Payers Also Default.

The intentions of only one country were in doubt. That was Lithuania. It has not yet approached the paying-teller's window, but dispatches from Kovno said it intended to make a small partial payment. It made a "token" payment of $7,000 on $105,474 due last December. Even if it repeated such a payment, the United States would still receive less than one-tenth of one per cent of the total amount due from the debtors.

The former so-called "token" payers who defaulted outright on today's payments were Great Britain, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Latvia. Their notes explained they took this action because of the Johnson act, closing the money markets of the United States to all the debt defaulting nations, including those who have sought to escape the penalties of default by drop-in-the-bucket payments. However, the "token" payments made by these five debtors last December amounted to only about $8,600,000 on $152,952,637 due.

France, Belgium, Poland, Estonia and Hungary defaulted outright for the fourth time.

State Chairman Here Saturday

Hon. David L. Lawrence To Meet Lawrence County Democratic Committee

Darley VanDivort, secretary of the Democratic County Committee, which meets for reorganization Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the count house, announced this morning that the Hon. David L. Lawrence, newly elected state chairman of the Democratic party, will attend the meeting, and address the same. He is very desirous of meeting the committeemen.

Lawrence county is singularly honored in having Mr. Lawrence, as it will be the first County Committee meeting after his elevation to the chairmanship. It is also coincident that Lawrence county was the first county by the action of their County Committee to officially endorse the state ticket last February.

Mr. Lawrence is a young man, he has been chairman of the Allegheny County Committee for several terms and was re-elected on May 15th, last Saturday the State Committee elevated him to the chairmanship.

Bingo Will Be Played At Red Cross Benefit

Legion Of Honor To Take Charge Of Feature Of Program Next Week

In addition to cards and fortune telling, Bingo will be featured at the Red Cross benefit card party in the Cathedral next Wednesday evening, June 20.

The Legion of Honor, through Ches C. Sweesy, has offered their services and equipment for the evening, assuring that this part of the program will be well handled.

Mrs. John S. Crowl, general chairman, stated today that the arrangements for the big party are well in hand, and that tickets are going well indicating that the attendance will be large.

The proceeds of this party is to be used by the nursing committee of the Lawrence County Chapter, American Red Cross, in the purchase of an automobile for the use of the nursing department. The Red Cross is the only organization furnishing bedside care for patients in the city and county at the present time and the Chapter nurse is called to various sections of the county daily to administer to the sick and needy ones.

Jurors Are Notified Services Not Needed

Trial List Completed This Week Owing To Eight Pleas Having Been Taken

Owing to eight pleas having been entered at county court this week all the cases ready to be tried have been disposed of and it will be unnecessary to call a jury for next week.

After these facts have been laid before the court by District Attorney Mont L. Alley, Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard was instructed to notify the jurors called for next week that they need not appear.

Court was shortened through the good work of County Detective [illegible] Leslie and District Attorney Alley in securing the pleas. In addition to the cases on which true bills had been found at the present term of court, several cases that had been continued from March term were heard.

Cancelling the jury for next week will amount to a considerable saving to the county, as 70 were called and they get $3 per day or $210 a day. In addition there will be a saving on tipstaves and other expenses amounting to around $300 per day.

Doctors Fight Common Colds On New Ground

Opium Given Sufferers Of Cold Has Proven Beneficial, Doctors Say

By ERNEST H. FISK
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—Medical science's battle against the pernicious common cold is making surprising headway through an alliance with the outlaw-opium.

This statement was made here Thursday before the American Medical Association by Dr. Harold S. Diehl of Minneapolis, Minn., who reported results of experiments made with opium on common cold cases.

He declared that definite improvement was shown by 71.5 per cent of the patients who were given opium derivatives while only 40 per cent of those receiving 12 other well known remedies experienced any relief.

"The amount of opium administered," Dr. Diehl said, "was too small to cause any danger of addiction to the drug." The opium derivates employed in the experiments were codeine and papaverine, he explained.

"The effect of this combination," he said, "is to increase or eliminate completely the congestion and nasal discharge which are the chief sources of discomfort to the victim. The greatest improvement occurred in those who took the medicine on the first day of their colds when, in many cases, the cold seemed to be arrested."

Fight On Cancer.

Of outstanding interest among scientific reports at the convention, was the statement of Dr. William Carpenter MacCarty of Rochester, Minn., that cancer might be wiped out in 30 or 50 years if present-known facts are properly and extensively applied.

Dr. McCarty pointed out that though no specific cause for cancer has been discovered, its behavior is now quite thoroughly understood. The cancer problem today has been reduced, he said, to several distinct phases.

First, he urged education of lay persons and practicing physicians in the recognition or diagnosis of the disease.

Secondly, science has an accurate knowledge of cancer's statistical frequency, and while "nothing can be done about the 100,000 or so persons who will die of the disease this year, the group to be considered is that which have cancers the size of a quarter and which is unconsciously waiting to die five, ten, or 15 years hence."

Limit Cancer Study.

The doctor indicated American Medical schools for limiting the study of future physicians to cancers in late stages. "By the time the cancer has reached its late stages," he said, "it is too late to do anything."

Leukemia, the inevitably fatal disease which attacks children, can be successfully combated with X-ray treatments, Dr. Nathan Rosenthal and Dr. William Harris of New York told the convention. Though nothing is known that will cure the disease, their report said, "X-Ray treatment in favorable cases brings about improvement in the symptoms which may last several months."

Motorized House Brings Joy To A Helpless Cripple

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—The mechanical age has brought motorized seven-league boots to Lloyd Jensen, 21, helpless cripple for four years.

His outlook on life undimmed by complete helplessness for the past year, Lloyd smiles as he proudly points out the special trailer limousine his father, an electric firm employe, built for him.

The trailer is equipped with a sink, running water, refrigerator, stove, cupboards, clothes press, studio couch, radio and has an especially constructed apparatus upon which his cot rests, to eliminate road noise and shock. A special wire runs from a buzzer in the lad's hand to the driver of the towing automobile in front, making it possible to carry on a single conversation.

Lloyd was stricken with arthritis while attending high school in 1927.

A return to the era of competing armaments destroys the moral strength of any and all formal international agreements.

Carrie Nation May Have Secured Idea From These Women

Filled With Religious Enthusiasm They Smash Wesleyville Saloons

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—A yellowed newspaper clipping here conveys the impression that Carrie Nation, militant, hatchet-wielding dry, whose name was anathema to saloon-keepers late in the last century, owes the idea of her spectacular destructive raids to women residents of Wesleyville.

Evidence that Wesleyville was not always quiet and sedate is offered by S. V. Travis, who has lived half a century in that borough.

Back in 1856, the clipping states, church women armed with axes, entered a saloon and wrecked everything in sight "except the heads of the whisky guzzlers, of whom there were many," during a revival service which lent inspiration to the plan.

As one woman said: "The ladies waded in whisky up to their shoe tops, but like all enemies pursued by truth it sunk beneath their winged feet and vanished from sight forever."

So great was the excitement the minister was forced to abandon his revival campaign.

An arms embargo is a method of saying: "Take a licking from your neighbors or learn to make your own guns."

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending at 3:30 p. m. June 14, six arrests on charges as follows: suspicion 4, drunkenness 1, drunkeness and suspicion 1.

Having been in Harrisburg, members of council convened in city hall today. No business was transacted at Monday's meeting owing to the convention of the State Association of Planning commissions.

A thorough survey of places where cars may park for a certain time might show that yellow lines have been placed where they have no right to have been painted.

As predicted in this column a few days ago two young men, alleged to have been concerned in an auto theft have been apprehended. Police now are seeking car riflers. The arm of the law is not too short for anyone.

Annually about this time playgrounds have opened but indications are none will be operated this season. Thousands of children are affected. Mothers must continue to keep children at home instead of sending them to playgrounds.

Today is Parents-Kiddie day at Cascade Park, now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Citizen. It is the first time the children have had a chance to romp at the recreation center since school was dismissed for the vacation period.

Mathew Gunton, renamed president of the State planners pronounces that the convention held here recently as most successful. While the attendance was not large the proceedings were very interesting.

City policemen have been reporting bad conditions in sidewalks and cartways. Drinking fountains also have come in for their inspection. Some have been found to leak. The information is turned over daily to the proper authorities.

Willis McMullen, detectives chief is a man o'all trades. He went out yesterday and took photographs of a hole in South Jefferson street where an automobile figured in an accident which resulted in a demolished store-front.

The city of New Castle does not pay for clothing of policemen ruined when they are on duty. In some tussles officers have clothing torn. The idea of making the obstreperous pay for repairs or new clothing is not a bad idea.

Local Young Man Graduates Today

Joseph Mastrangelo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Mastrangelo, of 912 South Mercer street, is among the 28 members of the 1934 class of the St. Fedilis Seminary, Herman, Pa., who received diplomas at exercises today.

The local young man will enter St. Vincent college, Latrobe, Pa., next fall. During the past six years, Mr. Mastrangelo has made an average of 90% in his studies. He will return home with his parents who attended the exercises, today.

MURAL-DECORATORS ARE PAID $12,000

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, June 15.—Pittsburgh, if the PWA has anything to do with it, will soon be more conscious of its mural-decorated public buildings than of its glowing hearth furnaces and smoke-billowing stacks.

The "Steel City" has been awakened to the real needs of its artists by the government's expenditure, through the public works administration, of $12,000 for the painting of murals for public buildings in this district.

In all, 27 murals are in the process of completion in district No. 8, comprising western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Sixty artists were employed in the government's program for aiding needy painters.

Max Baer Wins From Carnera

Becomes World's Heavyweight King When Referee Stops Fight

END COMES IN ELEVENTH ROUND

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 15—Weakly, his mind a blank, his grotesque feet shod with unseen rockers, all that remained of the giant who had been Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world, gestured feebly with his right hand in the eleventh round last night. Stiffly, his bruised and battered lips moved but made no sound.

"I've had enough," they tried to say and referee Arthur Donovan, who had been a most understanding man all evening, did not fail the stricken Mammoth now. With one hand, he pushed Max Baer, the new champion, away and with the other escorted the old and broken and bereft leader to his corner. It was the end. Carnera had been knocked down until mind conquered instinct and refused to admire the outrage longer. He had been down perhaps a dozen times to establish a modern championship record.

A tragic end to the Italian's countrymen who sat stunned while around them a crowd of 50,000 reveled and reeled in front of this climax to the wildest evening the heavyweight championship division yet has known, the Dempsey-Firpo shambles not excluded. An abject end, too, for this great Oaf, 263-odd pounds on the scales yesterday and almost 6 feet 7 inches tall. He stopped on his feet, he surrendered; "resigned, I believe is the term they use abroad.

On His Feet

"I'm finished," the gesture said, mutely, and so to the loss of his championship and his prestige and self-approval was added the ignominy of being the first of his kind to admit defeat in this manner. No champion ever before has asked to lose. Willard didn't come out of his corner at Toledo. But the assumption was that he couldn't. Primo, when he requested a cessation, was on his feet. Maybe the novelty was too much for him. He had been on his back most of the night.

But perhaps I draw too stark a picture of one whose incentive was great. A moment before the end, he had been knocked down from the wind of a missed punch. He was about to go again, probably for the last time, after being clipped with an overhead right. But he refused. Probably the memory of him would have been kinder if he hadn't.

Helpless On Ropes

In all, Carnera was down anywhere from nine to thirteen times, depending on whether one counted football tackles or the times when referee Donovan, a surprisingly tolerant man, was becoming confused in his duties to a point where he seemed to be acting as Carnera's

chief second. Once in the first round, he did not employe himself with a count while Carnera lay supine and helpless in the ropes but, instead, fell to with a will, tugging and hauling until he got the giant upon his feet.

Again in the tenth, while Carnera leaned upon the ropes, his back to the encounter, and gazed with sightless eyes out upon the crowd, Mr. Donovan used one hand with which to restrain Baer and, with the other, managed to turn the tottering hulk around and inspire it with some semblance of life.

$400,000 Gate Receipts.

However, these extra-official acts did not affect the end, but merely delayed it. For this lashing, slashing Baer, an even money bet with the great crowd that paid well over $400,000 for the best gate since 1930, was the ordained winner from the start, just as his counselor, Dempsey, had been at far off Toledo. In fact, it was the Willard debacle all over again, with sound effects.

More than that, it was a stone mason wielding his mallet on a statue of of Goliath. Baer literally seemed to chip pieces off Carnera's profile as he continued to knock this giant to the floor until, out there in the crowd, the senses reeled and became numb with the needless execution.

A year ago, Baer had done something of the same thing to Max Schmeling, a former champion; yet they derided him this time because, in the training camp, he fiddled and fooled, one of our esteemed boxing commissioners even going so far as to use the term "bum" and to suggest that the fight be called off.

Down In First.

What the commissioner thought in the first round when Carnera was hit with a right hand and rebounded from the canvas, I do not know. Maybe the commissioner stopped thinking; maybe he never started. Anyhow, Max Adelber Baer is something new in pugilism, a Peter Pan, equipped with the hammer of Thor. If that's a little garbled, please remember that the evening was madness.

Baer was a study in strange contrasts. He either didn't fight at all or he went completely mad but, either way, there was design back of it all. Twice in the first round he hurled the giant to the floor and fell on top of him. Many times thereafter he lulled the Italian into a sense of fancied security by letting the latter lead at will, only to exact frightful toll with left hooks to the body and right swings that seldom missed the chin. Counting almost everything, even the times when he wasn't actually hurt, Carnera was down thrice in the first, once in the fourth, three times in the tenth and twice in the 11th.

Beaten Decisively.

The 11th was only fairly well along when the last series of right handers brought about the end. One of them dropped Carnera for a count of two. A second missed and dropped him anyhow. A third came down from above and all but drove his chin into his bosom.

He was ready to go down again, probably to stay, but it was then that he reached a discreet and, for all I know, a justifiable decision. He decided that enough was a very great deal.

So within the year and in the same ring where he won the title on a knockout over Jack Sharkey, Carnera, the Gargantuan, became no more and, in simple justice to the many fine things he did last night and the one thing he didn't, I would add this epitaph:

"He died with his boots on—and his feet under him."

Livermore, Cal., Is Celebrating

Maxie Baer's Old Home Town Swells Up With Pride, May Be Baerville

(International News Service)

LIVERMORE, Cal., June 15.—Livermore declared a holiday.

This town of 1500 population belonged to Max Baer today, he was reared here.

Some enthusiastic citizens even suggested that the town's name be changed to Baerville in honor of the "Livermore larruper."

The celebration last night started in the first round when Baer began hammering the world's heavyweight crown from Primo Carnera's head.

"We knew he'd do it," was the unanimous acclaim.

Baer's Thoughts On Hollywood

Champion Declares He Was Not Hurt In Battle Last Night

CARNERA WANTS SECOND FIGHT

By PAT ROBINSON
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 15.—"Give my regards to Hollywood, boys and tell all the gals I'll be there."

Thus Max Baer, paraphrasing that other noted thespian, George M. Cohan, ten minutes after winning the heavyweight championship of the world.

With the sweat of battle still glistening on his body, with thousands of maniacs drunk with the lust of carnage sighting outside his dressing room, the curley headed champion's first thought was for the ladies and the films. He was even wearing the dressing gown he wore in his last picture.

A great fighter some of the time, but an actor first, last and all the time.

Let's open the door of the dressing room.

Jack Dempsey is talking but hands over the "mike" to the cool, smiling and unruffled Californian. In a few well chosen words he reassures his mother in Denver, expresses his satisfaction over bringing the title back to America, compliments Dempsey, pays tribute to Carnera's gameness, advises the fans to listen into his next broadcast—still the business man, you see—introduces his Dad and then—

"For heaven's sake, will somebody bring me a beer. I want a beer. Here, cut off these gloves. Look at that. Just one little strip of bandage. They (the boxing commission) though they were hurting me by not giving me enough bandages but they were really making Primo a sure bet to lose. My hands are sore, though.

He grins impishly. "Too bad I wasn't in condition, eh?" he winks. "Ask Commissioner Brown if I didn't look pretty good for a big bum?" (He was quoting the commissioner on that one).

"No, Primo never hurt me. I thought I was in one of those Hollywood clinches, though, every time he dragged me to the floor with him. What a sucker he was for a right hand. Also a left. But, boy, can he take it!"

So much for a champion. Thirty feet away in another dressing room sits an ex-champion. Gone are the hangers-on who once patted him on the back and were proud to get a smile from him.

The big fellow is still in a daze as DeFoe cuts off the gloves.

"No," he mumbles through thickened lips. "He didn't hurt me. Yeh, he punches heavy, not hard."

Soresi chimes in. "We want to fight him again. We'll come back."

Primo paws him aside, "Me, I'm not right. That throat (the doctors said he had pharyngitis) I no can get the breath. I am weak. No speed. I'm sick."

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—The state superior court Thursday allowed a stay in the order of Judge Harry S. McDevitt granting Shibe Park, home grounds of the American League Baseball Club, a license to sell beer.

Pugilistic stock took an upward surge last night when Max Baer captured the world's heavyweight boxing championship from Primo Carnera by a technical knockout in the eleventh round in the Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island. The referee stopped the fight. The American had the much bigger Italian down 10 times. Some of the local boys had a hunch that Baer, despite his absence from the ring and alleged lack of condition, would stow Carnera away. This is what they said in this column yesterday: "Jimmie Dime believes that if Max Baer fights Carnera like he did Max Schmeling the present contender will be the champion of the world at midnight. I like him because he is the best puncher but he is such a clown I don't know what he might do." Tom McMahon picked Baer to win but Bob Latera picked Carnera. Ed. Fritz, Sports Editor of The News and engineer of this column wrote that "the writer likes Baer tonight, providing he goes in and fights. To do this he will have to keep walking into the champion throwing punches all of the time. He cannot afford to try to box with Carnera or do any backing away."

DISCOVERS SOURCE OF PLACER GOLD

(International News Service)

SEWARD, Alaska—The source of Kodiak beach placer gold has been discovered by Fred Fenton, who has, for many years mined the placer gold, revealed by high seas lashing the coast.

Tracing the placer back a distance from the beach, Fenton discovered a rich quartz ledge, showing unmistakeable signs of having deposited the placer gravels from erosion. The beach diggings have been mined for many years, disgorging good returns immediately after a severe storm.

Broaca Hurls One-Hit Game

PIRATES LOSE TO BROOKLYN

By GENE LAWRENCE
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 15—A performance worthy of a great reward had been paid in full today as the New York Yankees again topped the American League following Young Johnny Broaca's 7-0 one hit victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The near perfect effort of Broaca's lifted the New Yorkers from second place to first while the leaders, Detroit Tigers were idle because of the cancellation of their game at Boston on account of rain.

Broaco pitched like a seasoned veteran at his best, allowing five walks, fanning ten and working with effect while men were on bases.

Ruth Hits Homer

Babe Ruth's 10th homer with Crosetti and Rolfe on base in the first started Broaca on his way to victory.

Two homers by Hal Trosky and a double by Willie Kamm accounted for the Cleveland Indians 11-7 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Scoring all their runs in their last three innings at bat, the Washington Senators beat the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1.

Making the most of the soft touches, the New York Giants tightened their grip on first place in the national league blanking the Cincinnati Reds, 3-0.

Cubs Win Game

Homers by Chuck Klein, Don Hurst and Babe Herman swpert the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joe Strippe's single drove in Sa. Leslie with the winning run in the tenth to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Van Mungo hurled effectively, allowing only five hits.

At St. Louis, the Cardinals won a free hitting contest from the Boston Braves, 12 to 9. Thirty-two hits, including three home runs, a triple and ten doubles featured the attacks of the two clubs.

VETERANS ASKED TO RE-REGISTER

Unemployed veterans of the county, who are now without employment, are asked to re-register with the veterans representative of the State Employment Bureau. Room 207, Johnson Building.

Max Baer Wins From Carnera

Becomes World's Heavyweight King When Referee Stops Fight

END COMES IN ELEVENTH ROUND

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 15—Weakly, his mind a blank, his grotesque feet shod with unseen rockers, all that remained of the giant who had been Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world, gestured feebly with his right hand in the eleventh round last night. Stiffly, his bruised and battered lips moved but made no sound.

"I've had enough," they tried to say and referee Arthur Donovan, who had been a most understanding man all evening, did not fail the stricken Mammoth now. With one hand, he pushed Max Baer, the new champion, away and with the other escorted the old and broken and bereft leader to his corner. It was the end. Carnera had been knocked down until mind conquered instinct and refused to admire the outrage longer. He had been down perhaps a dozen times to establish a modern championship record.

A tragic end to the Italian's countrymen who sat stunned while around them a crowd of 50,000 reveled and reeled in front of this climax to the wildest evening the heavyweight championship division yet has known, the Dempsey-Firpo shambles not excluded. An abject end, too, for this great Oaf, 263-odd pounds on the scales yesterday and almost 6 feet 7 inches tall. He stopped on his feet, he surrendered; "resigned, I believe is the term they use abroad.

On His Feet

"I'm finished," the gesture said, mutely, and so to the loss of his championship and his prestige and self-approval was added the ignominy of being the first of his kind to admit defeat in this manner. No champion ever before has asked to lose. Willard didn't come out of his corner at Toledo. But the assumption was that he couldn't. Primo, when he requested a cessation, was on his feet. Maybe the novelty was too much for him. He had been on his back most of the night.

But perhaps I draw too stark a picture of one whose incentive was great. A moment before the end, he had been knocked down from the wind of a missed punch. He was about to go again, probably for the last time, after being clipped with an overhead right. But he refused. Probably the memory of him would have been kinder if he hadn't.

Helpless On Ropes

In all, Carnera was down anywhere from nine to thirteen times, depending on whether one counted football tackles or the times when referee Donovan, a surprisingly tolerant man, was becoming confused in his duties to a point where he seemed to be acting as Carnera's

chief second. Once in the first round, he did not employe himself with a count while Carnera lay supine and helpless in the ropes but, instead, fell to with a will, tugging and hauling until he got the giant upon his feet.

Again in the tenth, while Carnera leaned upon the ropes, his back to the encounter, and gazed with sightless eyes out upon the crowd, Mr. Donovan used one hand with which to restrain Baer and, with the other, managed to turn the tottering hulk around and inspire it with some semblance of life.

$400,000 Gate Receipts.

However, these extra-official acts did not affect the end, but merely delayed it. For this lashing, slashing Baer, an even money bet with the great crowd that paid well over $400,000 for the best gate since 1930, was the ordained winner from the start, just as his counselor, Dempsey, had been at far off Toledo. In fact, it was the Willard debacle all over again, with sound effects.

More than that, it was a stone mason wielding his mallet on a statue of of Goliath. Baer literally seemed to chip pieces off Carnera's profile as he continued to knock this giant to the floor until, out there in the crowd, the senses reeled and became numb with the needless execution.

A year ago, Baer had done something of the same thing to Max Schmeling, a former champion; yet they derided him this time because, in the training camp, he fiddled and fooled, one of our esteemed boxing commissioners even going so far as to use the term "bum" and to suggest that the fight be called off.

Down In First.

What the commissioner thought in the first round when Carnera was hit with a right hand and rebounded from the canvas, I do not know. Maybe the commissioner stopped thinking; maybe he never started. Anyhow, Max Adelber Baer is something new in pugilism, a Peter Pan, equipped with the hammer of Thor. If that's a little garbled, please remember that the evening was madness.

Baer was a study in strange contrasts. He either didn't fight at all or he went completely mad but, either way, there was design back of it all. Twice in the first round he hurled the giant to the floor and fell on top of him. Many times thereafter he lulled the Italian into a sense of fancied security by letting the latter lead at will, only to exact frightful toll with left hooks to the body and right swings that seldom missed the chin. Counting almost everything, even the times when he wasn't actually hurt, Carnera was down thrice in the first, once in the fourth, three times in the tenth and twice in the 11th.

Beaten Decisively.

The 11th was only fairly well along when the last series of right handers brought about the end. One of them dropped Carnera for a count of two. A second missed and dropped him anyhow. A third came down from above and all but drove his chin into his bosom.

He was ready to go down again, probably to stay, but it was then that he reached a discreet and, for all I know, a justifiable decision. He decided that enough was a very great deal.

So within the year and in the same ring where he won the title on a knockout over Jack Sharkey, Carnera, the Gargantuan, became no more and, in simple justice to the many fine things he did last night and the one thing he didn't, I would add this epitaph:

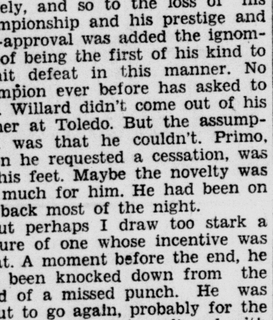

"He died with his boots on—and his feet under him."

Livermore, Cal., Is Celebrating

Maxie Baer's Old Home Town Swells Up With Pride, May Be Baerville

(International News Service)

LIVERMORE, Cal., June 15.—Livermore declared a holiday.

This town of 1500 population belonged to Max Baer today, he was reared here.

Some enthusiastic citizens even suggested that the town's name be changed to Baerville in honor of the "Livermore larruper."

The celebration last night started in the first round when Baer began hammering the world's heavyweight crown from Primo Carnera's head.

"We knew he'd do it," was the unanimous acclaim.

CARNERA WANTS SECOND FIGHT

NEW YORK, June 15.—"Give my regards to Hollywood, boys and tell all the gals I'll be there."

Thus Max Baer, paraphrasing that other noted thespian, George M. Cohan, ten minutes after winning the heavyweight championship of the world.

With the sweat of battle still glistening on his body, with thousands of maniacs drunk with the lust of carnage sighting outside his dressing room, the curley headed champion's first thought was for the ladies and the films. He was even wearing the dressing gown he wore in his last picture.

A great fighter some of the time, but an actor first, last and all the time.

Sportsmen To Attend Shoot

Consider Proposition Of Building Range For All Year Shooting In County

Lawrence County sportsmen interested in skeet and shooting are considering the matter of establishing a range, for all year round enjoyment of the sport. A considerable number will visit the Lakeside Skeet Club shoot, on June 17, at 2:30 o'clock, to witness the operation of a modern gun club. The club is located one mile northwest of Coitsville, on route 422.

DISCOVERS SOURCE OF PLACER GOLD

(International News Service)

SEWARD, Alaska—The source of Kodiak beach placer gold has been discovered by Fred Fenton, who has, for many years mined the placer gold, revealed by high seas lashing the coast.

Tracing the placer back a distance from the beach, Fenton discovered a rich quartz ledge, showing unmistakeable signs of having deposited the placer gravels from erosion. The beach diggings have been mined for many years, disgorging good returns immediately after a severe storm.

Broaca Hurls One-Hit Game

Johnny Broaca, Fresh From Yale, Allows St. Louis Browns One Hit

PIRATES LOSE TO BROOKLYN

By GENE LAWRENCE
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 15—A performance worthy of a great reward had been paid in full today as the New York Yankees again topped the American League following Young Johnny Broaca's 7-0 one hit victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The near perfect effort of Broaca's lifted the New Yorkers from second place to first while the leaders, Detroit Tigers were idle because of the cancellation of their game at Boston on account of rain.

Broaco pitched like a seasoned veteran at his best, allowing five walks, fanning ten and working with effect while men were on bases.

Ruth Hits Homer

Babe Ruth's 10th homer with Crosetti and Rolfe on base in the first started Broaca on his way to victory.

Two homers by Hal Trosky and a double by Willie Kamm accounted for the Cleveland Indians 11-7 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Scoring all their runs in their last three innings at bat, the Washington Senators beat the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1.

Making the most of the soft touches, the New York Giants tightened their grip on first place in the national league blanking the Cincinnati Reds, 3-0.

Cubs Win Game

Homers by Chuck Klein, Don Hurst and Babe Herman swpert the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joe Strippe's single drove in Sa Leslie with the winning run in the tenth to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Van Mungo hurled effectively, allowing only five hits.

At St. Louis, the Cardinals won a free hitting contest from the Boston Braves, 12 to 9. Thirty-two hits, including three home runs, a triple and ten doubles featured the attacks of the two clubs.

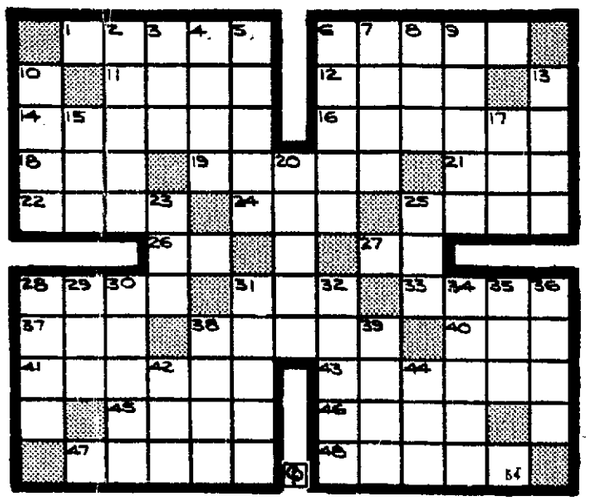

VETERANS ASKED TO RE-REGISTER

Unemployed veterans of the county, who are now without employment, are asked to re-register with the veterans representative of the State Employment Bureau, Room 207, Johnson Building.

Beaver Trappers Collect $64,000

Game Commission Says 6408 Animals Were Caught During The Season

By JOHN W. SCOTZIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, June 15.—Pennsylvania's first open season for beaver last spring, in which almost half the total population fell victims of steel traps, was an outstanding ecological and financial success, in the opinion of the state game commission.

However, thinning out of the animals did not come near wiping out the species, the commission asserted, explaining that the animals double their numbers annually.

Two factors were cited by the commission to substantiate its belief the season ended a success. The total of 6,408 beavers killed made possible a more satisfactory control of the animals, thereby reducing to a great extent the property damage they have been committing, and extra thousands of dollars were made available to trappers by the sale of pelts, the commission pointed out.

Commission statistics showed that the skins brought an average price of $10 each, or more than $64,000 for the total kill. Most of the animals taken were well-furred and prices ranged from $5 for "kits" up to $18 for the larger pelts.

Beavers were trapped and killed in 50 of the 67 counties of the state, the commission reported. Potter county reported the largest kill, 1092, or more than one-sixth of the total.

Other counties having large kills were:—Sullivan, 483; Centre, 358; Elk, 356; Warren, 336, and Cameron, 327.

Only one was taken in Beaver county. None were trapped in Allegheny, Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Erie, Forest, Greene, Lancaster, Lawrence, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, Sommerset, Washington or Westmoreland counties.

The largest beaver trapped weighed 71 pounds and was caught on the Loyalsock Creek. Many tipped the scales from 60 to 65 pounds. Normally, two-year-old beavers will weigh around 30 pounds; three-year-olds about 40, and adults from 50 to 65 pounds, the commission said.

It was believed there were few dams, if any, in which all the inhabitants were captured. Once disturbed, the animals instinctively became trap shy and found hiding places, showing little activity while the season was in progress, according to the commission.

A great majority of the kill was taken in the land of the soft-woods—the aspens and birches in the northern tier counties—the reports showed. Furriers contended they could determine by the color of the pelt in what part of the state the animal was caught.

The commission expressed gratitude at the manner in which the trappers adhered to the rules and regulations laid down for the special season. Comparatively few prosecutions were reported. Twenty-five pelts were confiscated because they were taken illegally.

May Close Season On Bears In State

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—What, no bears? Yes, no b'ars—at least none to shoot.

An extensive survey of the number of black bears in Pennsylvania, nearing completion by the game commission, indicates that a closed season will be ordered this fall on these animals.

Field officers of the commission and many sportsmen from districts in which bear hunting is popular have become alarmed over the rapid decrease in the number of bruins in the state. The present survey shows that last season's ideal hunting weather brought death to 586 bears—nearly half the state's entire population.

Population Dwindling

Sportsmen and conservation officials fear that another active season comparable to last year would virtually wipe out the bears in the state and render fruitless efforts which started in 1905 to protect this type of game.

Indication today also pointed to a possible curtailment of the limit of rabbits hunters may kill in one day this fall. Reports from the field are that the state's cottontail population is dwindling and needs a year of protection to recoup its numbers. The commission, however, has not delved seriously into the rabbit situation as yet.

CREWS READY FOR REGATTA

Eighteen Entries For Boat Races At Poughkeepsie On Saturday

(International News Service)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 15.—With the arrival of the Pennsylvania frosh contingent, the entire list of eighteen entries in tomorrow's regatta was completed. As the Quakers took an impressive spin down the river, bucking a four mile ebb-tide, Coach Rusty Callow, newly elected president of the association of American Rowing Coaches which was formed Thursday night, watched his yearlings with pride.

With the exception of Syracuse, all the crews tapered off their training routine to almost nothing.

Washington, the bookies' choice to lead the varsity field, today seemed to convey the opinion that they fear the Cornellians more than they do their western neighbors from California.

EXHIBIT SKULL OF 3-HORNED DINOSAUR

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 15.—The monster skull and jaws of a new type of triple-horned dinosaur, a giant four-legged and dragon-tailed reptile which grazed in the lowlands of eastern Wyoming more than sixty million years ago, will be placed on exhibit at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard. The skull is 58 inches long and 53 inches wide, and was mounted in life on a dinosaur about eighteen feet long and ten feet high.

Discovery of this rare and important specimen, which has an unusually wide head, was made in Wyoming in 1930 by Erich M. Schlaikjer on field research for the museum, but has not been made public until now.

Jump Into Lead Last Evening As Rieck-McJunkin Splits With Shenango

By virtue of their victory over Pennsylvania Power as the Rieck-McJunkin team was halving their match with Shenango Tin, the Unions took undisputed possession of first place in the New Castle Golf League last evening. They are just one point ahead of the leaders, however, and four teams are pounding right at their heels, eager to take advantage of the slightest slip.

The present race is one of the keenest that has been witnessed in the city league since its organization three years ago. East Side Service is right behind the leaders following their win last evening, while Universal Sanitary went up the ladder, too.

Some fine golf was shot last evening, with several of the players being just a point above the par mark.

Charles Kay was again medalist with a 37 on the back nine, one over par, while Mose Mancine and Bill Nunn were one over par on the first nine with 38. Herman Green also shot a brilliant 38 to tie for honors.

Other low scores were: Kelly, Thompson, and Billy Schoenfelt, 40; Jimmy Pageley, Molesworth, Conn, Hughes, Twaddle, Cartwright, Hill, Honkonen, 41; Crombie, Shook, Ed. Long, Walt Vogan, and Tucker Nolan 42.

The Hardware men defeated New Castle News, 4½ to 1½; Reynolds, Summers, and McCann, 4; McCoy's 2; Universal Sanitary Pottery 4, Pennsylvania R. R., 2; Union Brewery 4, Pennsylvania Power, 2; East Side Service, 3½, Blair Strip Steel, 2½; Rieck-McJunkin, 3, Shenango Tin, 3.

SPYING ON SPORTS

Once more rowing blades will flash in competition over the Hudson river hard by the little town with the peculiar name of Poughkeepsie.

For the first time since June of 1932 the intercollegiate varsity championship race will be held over the course which has seen victories of the greatest crews America has produced.

There wasn't any 'Keepsie regatta last year. The depression or, rather, it's effect on college athlete treasuries, was responsible. Since rowing is one collegiate sport in which gate receipts are virtually non-existent, the 1933 galley classic was called off.

This decision caused a great hue and cry among rowing enthusiasts. It was almost as though—judging by the amount of weeping and wailing—the United States had decided to get along without a supreme court.

So, with slightly fatter athletic treasuries, the New Deal and all, the rowing schools have come back to Poughkeepsie again.

However, the 1934 regatta is not as pretentious as were some of the big shell shows off Poughkeepsie in the good old days when the sweep-swingers, sweating mightily under their rigorous tasks, could console themselves with thoughts of how much easier life would be when they became bond salesmen with velvet offices and pretty secretaries.

Only three schools of the seven crews with boats in the varsity race have three shells entered in the regatta. Columbia, Cornell and Syracuse each have entered boats in the varsity, junior varsity and freshmen races.

Navy and California have varsity and jay-vee crews on hand, while Pennsylvania and Washington are content with varsity and frosh representation.

Rutgers, come back to rowing after a long lapse, has entered an eight in the freshman sprint, alone. Wisconsin, the mid-west's lone Poughkeepsie representative for many years, is not in the big show this year.

In other respects, one of them favorable to the public, the Poughkeepsie regatta of 1934 is not as pretentious an event as it has been.

The observation train has been cut from 40 to 20 cars. Where the break for the spectator comes in is the fact that train tickets have dropped from $5.50 to less than $5.

But rowing men do not care. The Poughkeepsie regatta is back. That's all that matters.

Two factors were cited by the commission to substantiate its belief the season ended a success. The total of 6,408 beavers killed made possible a more satisfactory control of the animals, thereby reducing to a great extent the property damage they have been committing, and extra thousands of dollars were made available to trappers by the sale of pelts, the commission pointed out.

Commission statistics showed that the skins brought an average price of $10 each, or more than $64,000 for the total kill. Most of the animals taken were well-furred and prices ranged from $5 for "kits" up to $18 for the larger pelts.

Beavers were trapped and killed in 50 of the 67 counties of the state, the commission reported. Potter county reported the largest kill, 1092, or more than one-sixth of the total.

Other counties having large kills were:—Sullivan, 483; Centre, 358; Elk, 356; Warren, 336, and Cameron, 327.

Only one was taken in Beaver county. None were trapped in Allegheny, Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Erie, Forest, Greene, Lancaster, Lawrence, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, Sommerset, Washington or Westmoreland counties.

The largest beaver trapped weighed 71 pounds and was caught on the Loyalsock Creek. Many tipped the scales from 60 to 65 pounds. Normally, two-year-old beavers will weigh around 30 pounds; three-year-olds about 40, and adults from 50 to 65 pounds, the commission said.

It was believed there were few dams, if any, in which all the inhabitants were captured. Once disturbed, the animals instinctively became trap shy and found hiding places, showing little activity while the season was in progress, according to the commission.

A great majority of the kill was taken in the land of the soft-woods—the aspens and birches in the northern tier counties—the reports showed. Furriers contended they could determine by the color of the pelt in what part of the state the animal was caught.

The commission expressed gratitude at the manner in which the trappers adhered to the rules and regulations laid down for the special season. Comparatively few prosecutions were reported. Twenty-five pelts were confiscated because they were taken illegally.

May Close Season On Bears In State

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—What, no bears? Yes, no b'ars—at least none to shoot.

An extensive survey of the number of black bears in Pennsylvania, nearing completion by the game commission, indicates that a closed season will be ordered this fall on those animals.

Field officers of the commission and many sportsmen from districts in which bear hunting is popular have become alarmed over the rapid decrease in the number of bruins in the state. The present survey shows that last season's ideal hunting weather brought death to 586 bears—nearly half the state's entire population.

Population Dwindling

Sportsmen and conservation officials fear that another active season comparable to last year would virtually wipe out the bears in the state and render fruitless efforts which started in 1905 to protect this type of game.

Indication today also pointed to a possible curtailment of the limit of rabbits hunters may kill in one day this fall. Reports from the field are that the state's cottontail population is dwindling and needs a year of protection to recoup its numbers. The commission, however, has not delved seriously into the rabbit situation as yet.

CREWS READY FOR REGATTA

Eighteen Entries For Boat Races At Poughkeepsie On Saturday

(International News Service)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 15.—With the arrival of the Pennsylvania frosh contingent, the entire list of eighteen entries in tomorrow's regatta was completed. As the Quakers took an impressive spin down the river, bucking a four mile ebb-tide, Coach Rusty Callow, newly elected president of the association of American Rowing Coaches which was formed Thursday night, watched his yearlings with pride.

With the exception of Syracuse, all the crews tapered off their training routine to almost nothing.

Washington, the bookies' choice to lead the varsity field, today seemed to convey the opinion that they fear the Cornellians more than they do their western neighbors from California.

Two Feature Games In American Loop

Two feature games will be played tonight in the American softball league with the league leading Scarazzos at Canyon field against the up and coming Tolan A. C. and the colored boys feel confident of taking the measure of the Scarazzos tonight, according to Henry Engs, the energetic Tolan manager.

The Audias will entertain the Unions at the B. & O. field, and the Oak A. C. and Pump Stations will meet at Gaston Park. Al Ritchie will pitch for the Unions against S. Pezzone of the Audias. This is the fourth meeting of the two teams.

EXHIBIT SKULL OF 3-HORNED DINOSAUR

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 15.—The monster skull and jaws of a new type of triple-horned dinosaur, a giant four-legged and dragon-tailed reptile which grazed in the lowlands of eastern Wyoming more than sixty million years ago, will be placed on exhibit at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard. The skull is 58 inches long and 53 inches wide, and was mounted in life on a dinosaur about eighteen feet long and ten feet high.

Discovery of this rare and important specimen, which has an unusually wide head, was made in Wyoming in 1930 by Erich M. Schlaikjer on field research for the museum, but has not been made public until now.

UNION SEXTET LEADS LEAGUE

Jump Into Lead Last Evening As Rieck-McJunkin Splits With Shenango

By virtue of their victory over Pennsylvania Power as the Rieck-McJunkin team was halving their match with Shenango Tin, the Unions took undisputed possession of first place in the New Castle Golf League last evening. They are just one point ahead of the leaders, however, and four teams are pounding right at their heels, eager to take advantage of the slightest slip.

The present race is one of the keenest that has been witnessed in the city league since its organization three years ago. East Side Service is right behind the leaders following their win last evening, while Universal Sanitary went up the ladder, too.

Some fine golf was shot last evening, with several of the players being just a point above the par mark.

Charles Kay was again medalist with a 37 on the back nine, one over par, while Mose Mancine and Bill Nunn were one over par on the first nine with 38. Herman Green also shot a brilliant 38 to tie for honors.

Other low scores were: Kelly, Thompson, and Billy Schoenfelt, 40; Jimmy Pageley, Molesworth, Conn, Hughes, Twaddle, Cartwright, Hill, Honkonen, 41; Crombie, Shook, Ed. Long, Walt Vogan, and Tucker Nolan 42.

The Hardware men defeated New Castle News, 4½ to 1½; Reynolds, Summers, and McCann, 4 McCoy's 2; Universal Sanitary Pottery 4, Pennsylvania R. R., 2; Union Brewery 4, Pennsylvania Power, 2; East Side Service, 3½, Blair Strip Steel, 2½; Rieck-McJunkin, 3, Shenango Tin, 3.

The standing and schedule for next week is as follows:

	W.	L.
Union Brewery	20	10
Rieck-McJunkin	19	11
Blair Strip Steel	18	12
McCoy's	17½	12½

SPYING ON SPORTS

Once more rowing blades will flash in competition over the Hudson river hard by the little town with the peculiar name of Poughkeepsie.

For the first time since June of 1932 the intercollegiate varsity championship race will be held over the course which has seen victories of the greatest crews America has produced.

There wasn't any 'Keepsie regatta last year. The depression or, rather, it's effect on college athlete treasuries, was responsible. Since rowing is one collegiate sport in which gate receipts are virtually non-existent, the 1933 galley classic was called off.

This decision caused a great hue and cry among rowing enthusiasts. It was almost as though—judging by the amount of weeping and wailing—the United States had decided to get along without a supreme court.

So, with slightly fatter athletic treasuries, the New Deal and all, the rowing schools have come back to Poughkeepsie again.

However, the 1934 regatta is not as pretentious as were some of the big shell shows off Poughkeepsie in the good old days when the sweep-swingers, sweating mightily under their rigorous tasks, could console themselves with thoughts of how much easier life would be when they became bond salesmen with velvet offices and pretty secretaries.

Only three schools of the seven crews with boats in the varsity race have three shells entered in the regatta. Columbia, Cornell and Syracuse each have entered boats in the varsity, junior varsity and freshmen races.

Navy and California have varsity and jay-vee crews on hand, while Pennsylvania and Washington are content with varsity and frosh representation.

Rutgers, come back to rowing after a long lapse, has entered an eight in the freshman sprint, alone. Wisconsin, the mid-west's lone Poughkeepsie representative for many years, is not in the big show this year.

In other respects, one of them favorable to the public, the Poughkeepsie regatta of 1934 is not as pretentious an event as it has been.

The observation train has been cut from 40 to 20 cars. Where the break for the spectator comes in is the fact that train tickets have dropped from $5.50 to less than $5.

But rowing men do not care. The Poughkeepsie regatta is back. That's all that matters.

Doctors Fight Common Colds On New Ground

By ERNEST H. FISK
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—Medical science's battle against the pernicious common cold is making surprising headway through an alliance with the outlaw-opium.

This statement was made here Thursday before the American Medical Association by Dr. Harold S. Diehl of Minneapolis, Minn., who reported results of experiments made with opium on common cold cases.

He declared that definite improvement was shown by 71.5 per cent of the patients who were given opium derivatives while only 40 per cent of those receiving 12 other well known remedies experienced any relief.

"The amount of opium administered," Dr. Diehl said, "was too small to cause any danger of addiction to the drug." The opium derivates employed in the experiments were codeine and papaverine, he explained.

"The effect of this combination," he said, "is to increase or eliminate completely the congestion and nasal discharge which are the chief sources of discomfort to the victim. The greatest improvement occurred in those who took the medicine on the first day of their colds when, in many cases, the cold seemed to be arrested."

Fight On Cancer.

Of outstanding interest among scientific reports at the convention, was the statement of Dr. William Carpenter MacCarty of Rochester, Minn., that cancer might be wiped out in 30 or 50 years if present-known facts are properly and extensively applied.

Dr. McCarty pointed out that though no specific cause for cancer has been discovered, its behavior is now quite thoroughly understood. The cancer problem today has been reduced, he said, to several distinct phases.

First, he urged education of lay persons and practicing physicians in the recognition or diagnosis of the disease.

Secondly, science has an accurate knowledge of cancer's statistical frequency, and while "nothing can be done about the 100,000 or so persons who will die of the disease this year, the group to be considered is that which have cancers the size of a quarter and which is unconsciously waiting to die five, ten, or 15 years hence."

Limit Cancer Study.

The doctor indicated American Medical schools for limiting the study of future physicians to cancers in late stages. "By the time the cancer has reached its late stages," he said, "it is too late to do anything."

Leukemia, the inevitably fatal disease which attacks children, can be successfully combated with X-ray treatments, Dr. Nathan Rosenthal and Dr. William Harris of New York told the convention. Though nothing is known that will cure the disease, their report said, "X-Ray treatment in favorable cases brings about improvement in the symptoms which may last several months."

Motorized House Brings Joy To A Helpless Cripple

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., June 15.—The mechanical age has brought motorized seven-league boots to Lloyd Jensen, 21, helpless cripple for four years.

His outlook on life undimmed by complete helplessness for the past year, Lloyd smiles as he proudly points out the special trailer limousine his father, an electric firm employe, built for him.

The trailer is equipped with a sink, running water, refrigerator, stove, cupboards, clothes press, studio couch, radio and has an especially constructed apparatus upon which his cot rests, to eliminate road noise and shock. A special wire runs from a buzzer in the lad's hand to the driver of the towing automobile in front, making it possible to carry on a single conversation.

WELL, folks, there was surely some excitement at Frank (Fleetwing) Dewberry's camp yesterday. The boys were playing pirate on a little island in the creek below the house when they came across an old Morris chair that had been washed down in high water. You remember those old Morris chairs, don't you, the ones that tipped back and you could take a nap and wake up with a cramp? Well, they took the cushion out and under and in it and in the cracks of the chair they found 10 nickels, 2 quarters, 4 dimes and 1 quarter. And there they a happy bunch of boys! Now they are planning a Morris chair hunt. They say it beats Treasure Island. 1t—6

WELL, folks, there was surely some excitement at Frank (Fleetwing) Dewberry's camp yesterday. The boys were playing pirate on a little island in the creek below the house when they came across an old Morris chair that had been washed down in high water. You remember those old Morris chairs, don't you, the ones that tipped back and you could take a nap and wake up with a cramp? Well, they took the cushion out and under and in it and in the cracks of the chair they found 10 nickels, 2 quarters, 4 dimes and 1 quarter. And were they a happy bunch of boys! Now they are planning a Morris chair hunt. They say it beats Treasure Island. 1t—6

Becomes World's Heavyweight King When Referee Stops Fight

END COMES IN ELEVENTH ROUND

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 15—Weakly, his mind a blank, his grotesque feet shod with unseen rockers, all that remained of the giant who had been Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion of the world, gestured feebly with his right hand in the eleventh round last night. Stiffly, his bruised and battered lips moved but made no sound.

"I've had enough," they tried to say and referee Arthur Donovan, who had been a most understanding man all evening, did not fail the stricken Mammoth now. With one hand, he pushed Max Baer, the new champion, away and with the other escorted the old and broken and bereft leader to his corner. It was the end. Carnera had been knocked down until mind conquered instinct and refused to admire the outrage longer. He had been down perhaps a dozen times to establish a modern championship record.

A tragic end to the Italian's countrymen who sat stunned while around them a crowd of 50,000 reveled and reeled in front of this climax to the wildest evening the heavyweight championship division yet has known, the Dempsey-Firpo shambles not excluded. An abject end, too, for this great Oaf, 263-odd pounds on the scales yesterday and almost 6 feet 7 inches tall. He stopped on his feet, he surrendered; "resigned, I believe is the term they use abroad.

On His Feet

"I'm finished," the gesture said, mutely, and so to the loss of his championship and his prestige and self-approval was added the ignominy of being the first of his kind to admit defeat in this manner. No champion ever before has asked to lose. Willard didn't come out of his corner at Toledo. But the assumption was that he couldn't. Primo, when he requested a cessation, was on his feet. Maybe the novelty was too much for him. He had been on his back most of the night.

But perhaps I draw too stark a picture of one whose incentive was great. A moment before the end, he had been knocked down from the wind of a missed punch. He was about to go again, probably for the last time, after being clipped with an overhead right. But he refused. Probably the memory of him would have been kinder if he hadn't.

Helpless On Ropes

In all, Carnera was down anywhere from nine to thirteen times, depending on whether one counted football tackles or the times when referee Donovan, a surprisingly tolerant man, was becoming confused in his duties to a point where he seemed to be acting as Carnera's

chief second. Once in the first round, he did not employe himself with a count while Carnera lay supine and helpless in the ropes but, instead, fell to with a will, tugging and hauling until he got the giant upon his feet.

Again in the tenth, while Carnera leaned upon the ropes, his back to the encounter, and gazed with sightless eyes out upon the crowd, Mr. Donovan used one hand with which to restrain Baer and, with the other, managed to turn the tottering hulk around and inspire it with some semblance of life.

$400,000 Gate Receipts.

However, these extra-official acts did not affect the end, but merely delayed it. For this lashing, slashing Baer, an even money bet with the great crowd that paid well over $400,000 for the best gate since 1930, was the ordained winner from the start, just as his counselor, Dempsey, had been at far off Toledo. In fact, it was the Willard debacle all over again, with sound effects.

More than that, it was a stone mason wielding his mallet on a statue of of Goliath. Baer literally seemed to chip pieces off Carnera's profile as he continued to knock this giant to the floor until, out there in the crowd, the senses reeled and became numb with the needless execution.

A year ago, Baer had done something of the same thing to Max Schmeling, a former champion; yet they derided him this time because, in the training camp, he fiddled and fooled, one of our esteemed boxing commissioners even going so far as to use the term "bum" and to suggest that the fight be called off.

Down In First.

What the commissioner thought in the first round when Carnera was hit with a right hand and rebounded from the canvas, I do not know. Maybe the commissioner stopped thinking; maybe he never started. Anyhow, Max Adelber Baer is something new in pugilism, a Peter Pan, equipped with the hammer of Thor. If that's a little garbled, please remember that the evening was madness.

Baer was a study in strange contrasts. He either didn't fight at all or he went completely mad but, either way, there was design back of it all. Twice in the first round he hurled the giant to the floor and fell on top of him. Many times thereafter he lulled the Italian into a sense of fancied security by letting the latter lead at will, only to exact frightful toll with left hooks to the body and right swings that seldom missed the chin. Counting almost everything, even the times when he wasn't actually hurt, Carnera was down thrice in the first, once in the fourth, three times in the tenth and twice in the 11th.

Beaten Decisively.

The 11th was only fairly well along when the last series of right handers brought about the end. One of them dropped Carnera for a count of two. A second missed and dropped him anyhow. A third came down from above and all but drove his chin into his bosom.

He was ready to go down again, probably to stay, but it was then that he reached a discreet and, for all I know, a justifiable decision. He decided that enough was a very great deal.

So within the year and in the same ring where he won the title on a knockout over Jack Sharkey, Carnera, the Gargantuan, became no more and, in simple justice to the many fine things he did last night and the one thing he didn't, I would add this epitaph:

"He died with his boots on—and his feet under him."

Livermore, Cal., Is Celebrating

Maxie Baer's Old Home Town Swells Up With Pride, May Be Baerville

(International News Service)

LIVERMORE, Cal., June 15.—Livermore declared a holiday.

This town of 1500 population belonged to Max Baer today, he was reared here.

Some enthusiastic citizens even suggested that the town's name be changed to Baerville in honor of the "Livermore larruper."

The celebration last night started in the first round when Baer began hammering the world's heavyweight crown from Primo Carnera's head.

"We knew he'd do it," was the unanimous acclaim.

Baer's Thoughts On Hollywood

Champion Declares He Was Not Hurt In Battle Last Night

CARNERA WANTS SECOND FIGHT

By PAT ROBINSON
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 15.—"Give my regards to Hollywood, boys and tell all the gals I'll be there."

Thus Max Baer, paraphrasing that other noted thespian, George M. Cohan, ten minutes after winning the heavyweight championship of the world.

With the sweat of battle still glistening on his body, with thousands of maniacs drunk with the lust of carnage sighting outside his dressing room, the curley headed champion's first thought was for the ladies and the films. He was even wearing the dressing gown he wore in his last picture.

A great fighter some of the time, but an actor first, last and all the time.

Let's open the door of the dressing room.

Jack Dempsey is talking but hands over the "mike" to the cool, smiling and unruffled Californian. In a few well chosen words he reassures his mother in Denver, expresses his satisfaction over bringing the title back to America, compliments Dempsey, pays tribute to Carnera's gameness, advises the fans to listen into his next broadcast—still the business man, you see—introduces his Dad and then—

"For heaven's sake, will somebody bring me a beer. I want a beer. Here, cut off these gloves. Look at that. Just one little strip of bandage. They (the boxing commission) though they were hurting me by not giving me enough bandages but they were really making Primo a sure bet to lose. My hands are sore, though.

He grins impishly. "Too bad I wasn't in condition, eh?" he winks. "Ask Commissioner Brown if I didn't look pretty good for a big bum?" (He was quoting the commissioner on that one).

"No, Primo never hurt me. I thought I was in one of those Hollywood clinches, though, every time he dragged me to the floor with him. What a sucker he was for a right hand. Also a left. But, boy, can he take it!"

So much for a champion. Thirty feet away in another dressing room sits an ex-champion. Gone are the hangers-on who once patted him on the back and were proud to get a smile from him.

The big fellow is still in a daze as DeFoe cuts off the gloves.

"No," he mumbles through thickened lips. "He didn't hurt me. Yeh, he punches heavy, not hard."

Soresi chimes in. "We want to fight him again. We'll come back."

Primo paws him aside, "Me, I'm not right. That throat (the doctors said he had pharyngitis) I no can get the breath. I am weak. No speed. I'm sick."

No Beer Sales In Shibe Park

Patrons Of Games In Philadelphia American League Park Must Go Thirsty

(International News Service)

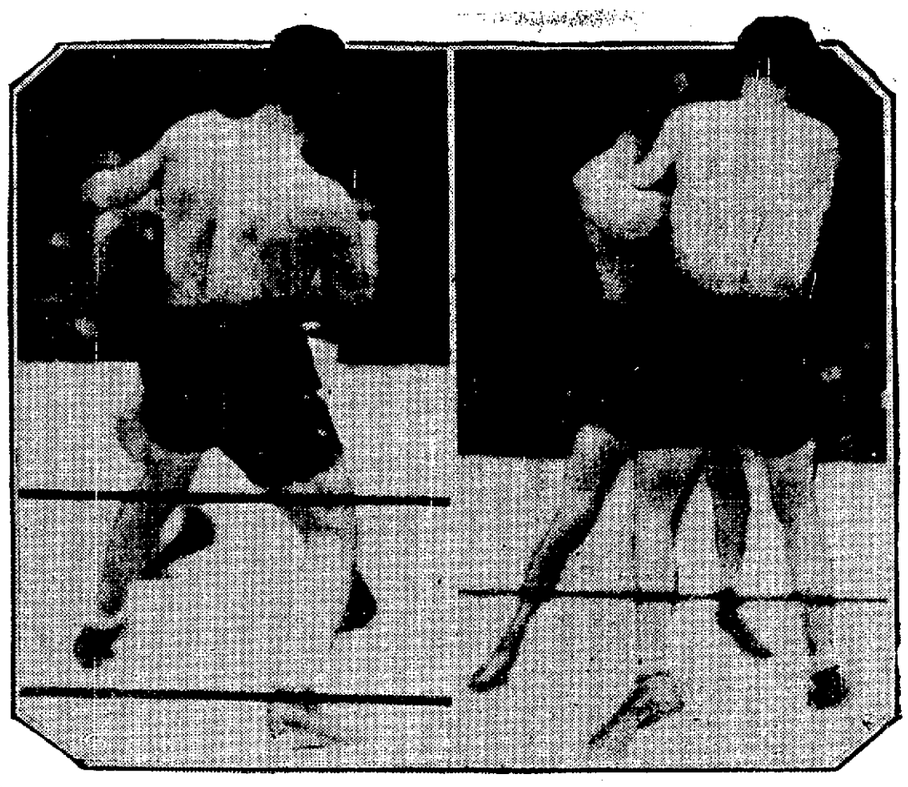

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—The state superior court Thursday allowed a stay in the order of Judge Harry S. McDevitt granting Shibe Park, home grounds of the American League Baseball Club, a license to sell beer.

The court order, concurred in by four judges permits the appeal of City Treasurer Will B. Hadley to act as a supersedeas, staying Judge McDevitt's order.

Thursday's decision, it was said, will prevent the sale of beer at the A's grounds this season. Although formal argument may be heard on the application when the superior court convenes July 12. It was regarded as unlikely that the final decision will be handed down before next fall.

Previous to Judge McDevitt's decision, Madley had refused the baseball park a license under the act of 1881 which forbids the issuing of beer licenses to places of amusement.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Pugilistic stock took an upward surge last night when Max Baer captured the world's heavyweight boxing championship from Primo Carnera by a technical knockout in the eleventh round in the Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island. The referee stopped the fight. The American had the much bigger Italian down 10 times. Some of the local boys had a hunch that Baer, despite his absence from the ring and alleged lack of condition, would stow Carnera away. This is what they said in this column yesterday: "Jimmie Dime believes that if Max Baer fights Carnera like he did Max Schmeling the present contender will be the champion of the world at midnight. I like him because he is the best puncher but he is such a clown I don't know what he might do." Tom McMahon picked Baer to win but Bob Latera picked Carnera. Ed. Fritz, Sports Editor of The News and engineer of this column wrote that "the writer likes Baer tonight, providing he goes in and fights. To do this he will have to keep walking into the champion throwing punches all of the time. He cannot afford to try to box with Carnera or do any backing away."

Among the big golf shots who will play in the Western Golf tourney are Walter Hagen, Harry Cooper, Ralph Guldahl, Horton Smith, Abe and Al Espinosas, Willie Hunter, Wild Bill Mehlhorn, Tommy Armour and Johnny Revolta. McDonald Smith, present champion, will be unable to defend his crown.

DISCOVERS SOURCE OF PLACER GOLD

(International News Service)

SEWARD, Alaska—The source of Kodiak beach placer gold has been discovered by Fred Fenton, who has, for many years mined the placer gold, revealed by high seas lashing the coast.

Tracing the placer back a distance from the beach, Fenton discovered a rich quartz ledge, showing unmistakeable signs of having deposited the placer gravels from erosion. The beach diggings have been mined for many years, disgorging good returns immediately after a severe storm.

Broaca Hurls One-Hit Game

Johnny Broaca, Fresh From Yale, Allows St. Louis Browns One Hit

PIRATES LOSE TO BROOKLYN

By GENE LAWRENCE
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 15—A performance worthy of a great reward had been paid in full today as the New York Yankees again topped the American League following Young Johnny Broaca's 7-0 one hit victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The near perfect effort of Broaca's lifted the New Yorkers from second place to first while the leaders, Detroit Tigers were idle because of the cancellation of their game at Boston on account of rain.

Broaco pitched like a seasoned veteran at his best, allowing five walks, fanning ten and working with effect while men were on bases.

Ruth Hits Homer

Babe Ruth's 10th homer with Crosetti and Rolfe on base in the first started Broaca on his way to victory.

Two homers by Hal Trosky and a double by Willie Kamm accounted for the Cleveland Indians 11-7 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics.

Scoring all their runs in their last three innings at bat, the Washington Senators beat the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 1.

Making the most of the soft touches, the New York Giants tightened their grip on first place in the national league blanking the Cincinnati Reds, 3-0.

Cubs Win Game

Homers by Chuck Klein, Don Hurst and Babe Herman swpert the Chicago Cubs to a 6-4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joe Strippe's single drove in Sam Leslie with the winning run in the tenth to give the Brooklyn Dodgers a 3-2 triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Van Mungo hurled effectively, allowing only five hits.

At St. Louis, the Cardinals won a free hitting contest from the Boston Braves, 12 to 9. Thirty-two hits, including three home runs, a triple and ten doubles featured the attacks of the two clubs.

VETERANS ASKED TO RE-REGISTER

Unemployed veterans of the county, who are now without employment, are asked to re-register with the veterans representative of the State Employment Bureau. Room 207, Johnson Building.

Stock Market Rallies Today

Strength In Wheat Market Serves To Rally Stock Market Slightly Higher

STEEL GIVES GOOD ACCOUNT

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Strength in the wheat market served to rally the stock market after early hesitancy today.

Opening fractionally lower the list drifted downward moderately during the first hour when a stronger tone in wheat manifested itself.

The chemical shares were again the leaders of the advance with United Carbon jumping more than a point and DuPont a slightly smaller amount. Both gains were scored on turnovers of a few hundred shares.

The utility stocks also were taken in hand again with Consolidated Gas, Peoples Light and several others reaching their best levels on the movement.

Atchison, a weak spot in the rails yesterday after getting nearly a point, today rallied sharply at the end of the first hour to convert its early loss into a fractional gain.

United States Steel gave a better account of itself in the light trading recovering an early loss. American Can, however, was depressed by a steady dribble of stock.

In the commodity markets wheat opened fractionally higher and then extended this a cent a bushel.

Stock Market Rallies Today

STEEL GIVES GOOD ACCOUNT

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Strength in the wheat market served to rally the stock market after early hesitancy today.

Opening fractionally lower the list drifted downward moderately during the first hour when a stronger tone in wheat manifested itself.

The chemical shares were again the leaders of the advance with United Carbon jumping more than a point and DuPont a slightly smaller amount. Both gains were scored on turnovers of a few hundred shares.

The utility stocks also were taken in hand again with Consolidated Gas, Peoples Light and several others reaching their best levels on the movement.

Atchison, a weak spot in the rails yesterday after getting nearly a point, today rallied sharply at the end of the first hour to convert its early loss into a fractional gain.

United States Steel gave a better account of itself in the light trading recovering an early loss. American Can, however, was depressed by a steady dribble of stock.

In the commodity markets wheat opened fractionally higher and then extended this a cent a bushel.

Beaver Trappers Collect $64,000

Game Commission Says 6408 Animals Were Caught During The Season

By JOHN W. SCOTZIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, June 15.—Pennsylvania's first open season for beaver last spring, in which almost half the total population fell victims of steel traps, was an outstanding ecological and financial success, in the opinion of the state game commission.

However, thinning out of the animals did not come near wiping out the species, the commission asserted, explaining that the animals double their numbers annually.

Two factors were cited by the commission to substantiate its belief the season ended a success. The total of 6,408 beavers killed made possible a more satisfactory control of the animals, thereby reducing to a great extent the property damage they have been committing, and extra thousands of dollars were made available to trappers by the sale of pelts, the commission pointed out.

Commission statistics showed that the skins brought an average price of $10 each, or more than $64,000 for the total kill. Most of the animals taken were well-furred and prices ranged from $5 for "kits" up to $18 for the larger pelts.

Beavers were trapped and killed in 50 of the 67 counties of the state, the commission reported. Potter county reported the largest kill, 1092, or more than one-sixth of the total.

Other counties having large kills were:—Sullivan, 483; Centre, 358; Elk, 356; Warren, 336, and Cameron, 327.

Only one was taken in Beaver county. None were trapped in Allegheny, Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Erie, Forest, Greene, Lancaster, Lawrence, Montgomery, Northampton, Philadelphia, Sommerset, Washington or Westmoreland counties.

The largest beaver trapped weighed 71 pounds and was caught on the Loyalsock Creek. Many tipped the scales from 60 to 65 pounds. Normally, two-year-old beavers will weigh around 30 pounds; three-year-olds about 40, and adults from 50 to 65 pounds, the commission said.

It was believed there were few dams, if any, in which all the inhabitants were captured. Once disturbed, the animals instinctively became trap shy and found hiding places, showing little activity while the season was in progress, according to the commission.

A great majority of the kill was taken in the land of the soft-woods—the aspens and birches in the northern tier counties—the reports showed. Furriers contended they could determine by the color of the pelt in what part of the state the animal was caught.

The commission expressed gratitude at the manner in which the trappers adhered to the rules and regulations laid down for the special season. Comparatively few prosecutions were reported. Twenty-five pelts were confiscated because they were taken illegally.

Shenango Golfers Are Playing Today

The following schedule will be played today: Stores vs General Office. Black Plate vs Assorting Room. Tin House vs Annealing. Machine Shop vs Operating. Mechanical vs Hot Mill.

May Close Season On Bears In State

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—What, no bears? Yes, no bars—at least none to shoot.

An extensive survey of the number of black bears in Pennsylvania, nearing completion by the game commission, indicates that a closed season will be ordered this fall on these animals.

Field officers of the commission and many sportsmen from districts in which bear hunting is popular have become alarmed over the rapid decrease in the number of bruins in the state. The present survey shows that last season's ideal hunting weather brought death to 586 bears—nearly half the state's entire population.

Population Dwindling

Sportsmen and conservation officials fear that another active season comparable to last year would virtually wipe out the bears in the state and render fruitless efforts which started in 1905 to protect this type of game.

Indication today also pointed to a possible curtailment of the limit of rabbits hunters may kill in one day this fall. Reports from the field are that the state's cottontail population is dwindling and needs a year of protection to recoup its numbers. The commission, however, has not delved seriously into the rabbit situation as yet.

CREWS READY FOR REGATTA

Eighteen Entries For Boat Races At Poughkeepsie On Saturday

(International News Service)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 15.—With the arrival of the Pennsylvania frosh contingent, the entire list of eighteen entries in tomorrow's regatta was completed. As the Quakers took an impressive spin down the river, bucking a four mile ebb-tide, Coach Rusty Callow, newly elected president of the association of American Rowing Coaches which was formed Thursday night, watched his yearlings with pride.

With the exception of Syracuse, all the crews tapered off their training routine to almost nothing.

Washington, the bookies' choice to lead the varsity field, today seemed to convey the opinion that they fear the Cornellians more than they do their western neighbors from California.

Two Feature Games In American Loop

EXHIBIT SKULL OF 3-HORNED DINOSAUR

(International News Service)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 15.—The monster skull and jaws of a new type of triple-horned dinosaur, a giant four-legged and dragon-tailed reptile which grazed in the lowlands of eastern Wyoming more than sixty million years ago, will be placed on exhibit at the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard. The skull is 58 inches long and 53 inches wide, and was mounted in life on a dinosaur about eighteen feet long and ten feet high.

Discovery of this rare and important specimen, which has an unusually wide head, was made in Wyoming in 1930 by Erich M. Schlaikjer on field research for the museum, but has not been made public until now.

UNION SEXTET LEADS LEAGUE

Jump Into Lead Last Evening As Rieck-McJunkin Splits With Shenango

By virtue of their victory over Pennsylvania Power as the Rieck-McJunkin team was halving their match with Shenango Tin, the Unions took undisputed possession of first place in the New Castle Golf League last evening. They are just one point ahead of the leaders, however, and four teams are pounding right at their heels, eager to take advantage of the slightest slip.

The present race is one of the keenest that has been witnessed in the city league since its organization three years ago. East Side Service is right behind the leaders following their win last evening, while Universal Sanitary went up the ladder, too.

Some fine golf was shot last evening, with several of the players being just a point above the par mark.

Charles Kay was again medalist with a 37 on the back nine, one over par, while Mose Mancine and Bill Nunn were one over par on the first nine with 38. Herman Green also shot a brilliant 38 to tie for honors.

Other low scores were: Kelly, Thompson, and Billy Schoenfelt, 40; Jimmy Pageley, Molesworth, Conn, Hughes, Twaddle, Cartwright, Hill, Honkonen, 41; Crombie, Shook, Ed. Long, Walt Vogan, and Tucker Nolan 42.

The Hardware men defeated New Castle News, 4½ to 1½; Reynolds, Summers, and McCann, 4. McCoy's 2; Universal Sanitary Pottery 4, Pennsylvania R. R., 2; Union Brewery 4, Pennsylvania Power, 2; East Side Service, 3½, Blair Strip Steel, 2½; Rieck-McJunkin, 3, Shenango Tin, 3.

The standing and schedule for next week is as follows:

	W.	L.
Union Brewery	20	10
Rieck-McJunkin	19	11
Blair Strip Steel	18	12
McCoy's	17½	12½
Shenango Tin	16½	13½
East Side Service	16	14

SPYING ON SPORTS

Once more rowing blades will flash in competition over the Hudson river hard by the little town with the peculiar name of Poughkeepsie.

For the first time since June of 1932 the intercollegiate varsity championship race will be held over the course which has seen victories of the greatest crews America has produced.

There wasn't any 'Keepsie regatta last year. The depression or, rather, it's effect on college athlete treasuries, was responsible. Since rowing is one collegiate sport in which gate receipts are virtually non-existent, the 1933 galley classic was called off.

This decision caused a great hue and cry among rowing enthusiasts. It was almost as though—judging by the amount of weeping and wailing—the United States had decided to get along without a supreme court.

So, with slightly fatter athletic treasuries, the New Deal and all, the rowing schools have come back to Poughkeepsie again.

However, the 1934 regatta is not as pretentious as were some of the big shell shows off Poughkeepsie in the good old days when the sweep-swingers, sweating mightily under their rigorous tasks, could console themselves with thoughts of how much easier life would be when they became bond salesmen with velvet offices and pretty secretaries.

Only three schools of the seven crews with boats in the varsity race have three shells entered in the regatta. Columbia, Cornell and Syracuse each have entered boats in the varsity, junior varsity and freshmen races.

Navy and California have varsity and jay-vee crews on hand, while Pennsylvania and Washington are content with varsity and frosh representation.

Rutgers, come back to rowing after a long lapse, has entered an eight in the freshman sprint, alone. Wisconsin, the mid-west's lone Poughkeepsie representative for many years, is not in the big show this year.

In other respects, one of them favorable to the public, the Poughkeepsie regatta of 1934 is not as pretentious an event as it has been.

The observation train has been cut from 40 to 20 cars. Where the break for the spectator comes in is the fact that train tickets have dropped from $5.50 to less than $5.

But rowing men do not care. The Poughkeepsie regatta is back. That's all that matters.

WELL, folks, there was surely some excitement at Frank (Fleetwing) Dewberry's camp yesterday. The boys were playing pirate on a little island in the creek below the house when they came across an old Morris chair that had been washed down in high water. You remember those old Morris chairs, don't you, the ones that tipped back and you could take a nap and wake up with a cramp? Well, they took the cushion out and under and in it and in the cracks of the chair they found 10 nickels, 2 quarters, 4 dimes and 1 quarter. And were they a happy bunch of boys! Now they are planning a Morris chair hunt. They say it beats Treasure Island. 1t—6

Stock Market Rallies Today

STEEL GIVES GOOD ACCOUNT

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, June 15.—Strength in the wheat market served to rally the stock market after early hesitancy today.

Opening fractionally lower the list drifted downward moderately during the first hour when a stronger tone in wheat manifested itself.

The chemical shares were again the leaders of the advance with United Carbon jumping more than a point and DuPont a slightly smaller amount. Both gains were scored on turnovers of a few hundred shares.

The utility stocks also were taken in hand again with Consolidated Gas, Peoples Light and several others reaching their best levels on the movement.

Atchison, a weak spot in the rails yesterday after getting nearly a point, today rallied sharply at the end of the first hour to convert its early loss into a fractional gain.

United States Steel gave a better account of itself in the light trading recovering an early loss. American Can, however, was depressed by a steady dribble of stock.

In the commodity markets wheat opened fractionally higher and then extended this a cent a bushel.

Drouth Speeds $80,000,000 Kansas Wheat Harvest

Horse-drawn cutter binding wheat.

Old-fashioned threshing operations.

The work of harvesting 80,000,000 bushels of wheat in Kansas has been expedited this year by hot, dry weather, and farmers are reaping the golden grain with smiles occasioned by the expected price of $1 a bushel. Recent operations near Wichita are pictured here, indicating that though the modern "combine" may be widely used, old-fashioned methods have not been definitely discarded.

Bomb Plot Is Paris Threat

Business Houses Are Receiving Bombs; One Is Exploded

(International News Service)

PARIS, June 15—The widespread bomb plot threatening Paris business houses and even the president and premier of the Republic became more serious today with the explosion of a bomb in the offices of Citroen, the automobile manufactury, injuring an employe and the discovery of three others.

Police believe that the bombs were sent out by cranks as an aftermath of the general indignation concerning the Stavisky case.

Gerson's Store Is Remodeled

Beautiful Interior Settings Replace Those In Use—Pleasing Effect

Precious jewels require a proper setting according to Jack Gerson, prominent jeweler of North Mercer street and suiting action to an idea Mr. Gerson has just completed a complete remodeling of his store.

All the old fixtures have been banished and in their place are seen the handsomest walnut fixtures it was possible to buy. In addition he has installed the very latest thing in indirect lighting fixtures so that the store is a flood of light but you can't notice any glare.

There wasn't a thing the matter with the old fixtures except that they didn't fit with Mr. Gerson's idea of having the best. The new ones are entrancing and are worth a visit to the store. Painters are completing a blue-white effect on the ceiling and upper walls today and by Saturday he can justly be proud of the cleverest jewelry store layout in Western Pennsylvania.

By a novel use of what was once dead space in floor fixtures Mr. Gerson has increased his floor space and provided much better display room for his wares. The entire effect is one of harmony in color, design and fitness. Mr. Gerson invites you to drop in and see for yourself.

DENVER, Colo.—Paul Graham, a patient in Fitzsimons General hospital here for 18 months, has a complete miniature house to show for his idle hours.
